PROMINENT EIGURES IN NEWLY-CONSTRUCTED CONSERVATIVE PARTY

when little more than a lad, and has an exceptional experience Mr. Armstrong is a recognised authority on post office routine and development. Mr Rhodes is a most valuable critic on several questions, besides bringing to bear an acute legal mind on all matters that come before the House. Mr Andrew Broder, that inimitable campaigner, is, of course, the chief agricultural critic of the Opposition

A young man of whom great things are expected, is Mr Middlebro, one of the whips He astonished the House shortly after his election two years ago by criticising the budget of the Minister of Finance in masterly fashion and reeling off intricate lists of figures with bewildering speed The House stared Nothing like it had been heard for many years Like some of his young confreres, a little experience will put him in the class of men who compose cabinets

There is other good material on the fighting force of the Conservatives

Mr Wm. Price, of Quebec, while not often heard from is one whose advice and counsel is often sought and much valued

The wealth of talent among those men mentioned above is not often gathered together in Parliament, and it seems to be an earnest of the class of men who will compose the future Parliaments of Canada They have set themselves the task of putting back into power the party over which Sir John Macdonald held sway Under the leadership of Mr Borden they are fast becoming parliamentarians They have organized the forces of the Opposition into a number of fighting units, and they have all the enthusiasm of youth to spur them on

DR JOHN D. REID, M.P

For Grenville since 1891 Is one of the Conservative committee chairmen

The effect they have had upon the apparent destiny of their party has been manifested already They have taken the burden of routine work off the shoulders of Mr Borden and left him free to devote himself to the debates of the House, with the result that he has done the party more service than he has ever done One of the speeches which he delivered about a fortnight after the opening of the session is admitted to be the most brilliant bit of debating heard in the House for very many years The direct reason was that for the first time since he became leader of the party he was able to stay at home during the forenoon and prepare his speech For the first time in his experience he has a capable band of parliamentarians to assist him They feel that they are on the verge of power and they are battling with confidence.

"SINGLE" CHILD'S POOR HEALTH

A London correspondent says: The health of spoiled children is the subject on which Dr. Friedjung, a Viennese physician, lectured the other day before the Medical Society of that city. He discussed especially the case of families in which there was a single child.

As a result of his examinations of hundreds of children of both sexes between two and 10 years of age he found that of 100 children each the sole offspring of its parents, only 13 could be described as entirely healthy while 87 were more or less nervously afflicted and 16 suffered from nervous debility and hysteria in a severe degree. Fifty children out of a 100 were troubled with digestive complaints, and 57 were confirmed dyspeptics.

Dr. Friedjung found that these children invariably suffered much more than others who had brothers and sisters from any illness affecting the nervous system, such as whooping cough. Forty-nine slept badly, and eight of these had severe recurring night terrors.

In great contrast stand children belonging to large families. Of 100 of these 69 were quite healthy and only 31 showed signs of slight nervous defects in various forms.

As the chief cause of the unsatisfactory health of single children, Dr. Friedjung gives the fact that their parents spoil them from over anxiety, although there are deeper physiological reasons also. In large families, he says children are under less constant supervision by fussy parents. They are of necessity more left to themselves, and this has an excellent effect on the general health of the child.

TEMPERANCE SUNDAY IN PETERBOROUGH CHURCHES

Dominion Alliance Speakers Occupied Pulpits in Six Houses of Worship—Local Option Upheld and Strong Appeals Made for the Promotion of Temperance Movement Generally.

Yesterday was temperance day in the city and addresses in the cause of temperance were given at six of the local churches by Dominion Alliance speakers.

The pulpit of George street Methodist church was occupied last evening by Rev. Benjamin Spence, of Toronto, a prominent temperance leader, and a brother of Controller Spence, of Toronto, who was to have preached, but was restrained by illness. He gave a very able discourse on the liquor traffic and its evils.

As the subject of his sermon he read passages from the 2nd Epistle of St. Peter, in which the children of earth are commanded to abstain from all revellings, feastings and other abominable practices leading to intemperance

A GREAT DEMORALIZER.

One of the greatest demoralizing things combating the work of the church to-day was intemperance. Between it and the Church of God there must be an eternal enmity. There was a reason for the church taking a stand against this enemy of man that was standing directly in the way of the working out of God's plan. The reason was that the church was realizing the devastating effect of liquor upon man.

"Men of strength, morality, and mentality are needed to-day, as never before. Man to-day is made to be exalted, but does liquor perform it?"

Physical science and experiment illustrated the truth that intemperance undermined manhood in every conceivable sense. It had been proved by demonstrating the results of alcohol on dogs and other dumb animals. Those who indulged in alcohol found that their physical strength was sapped and their endurance greatly lessened.

IMPAIRED EVERY HUMAN FACULTY.

There were several conclusions reached by investigation, two of which were that alcohol impaired every human faculty, and secondly, that the higher and more complex the faculty, the the more pronounced the effect of alcohol upon it.

Liquor also affects the all-round efficiency of man, so much so that railway officials and industrial managers rarely cared to have a man in their employ who touched liquor. They knew that contact with it effected the safety of their business.

Mr. Spence illustrated by a chart the progress that local option was making in the country and made a special request for a generous response to the appeals of the Dominion Alliance for the suppression of the liquor traffic.

At the morning service in St. Andrews, Rev. Mr. Spence also spoke, his sermon being practically similar to the one delivered in George Stret in the evening.

Knox Church pulpit was taken in the morning by Mr Duggan, a student of Toronto University. P. C. Harris contributed a solo. In the evening he spoke in Murray Street Baptist Church.

At Charlotte Street, Rev. P. C. Harris delivered a very comprehensive sermon on temperance.

J. W. Bengough of Toronto spoke at the morning service in Mark St. Church. Rev. R. M. Hamilton spoke at the morning service in St. James' Church.

A BUSINESS MAN'S PARTNER

(Hal. Donley in Simcoe Reformer.)

If Simcoe possessed no newspaper, would there not quickly be a movement launched to get one established? What would be at the root of this desire if we hadn't one? Would not the possession of a newspaper be considered an absolute essential for the advancement of Simcoe's interests in general, the interests of its merchants and other business men in particular?

Everyone admits that a newspaper is as much a necessity in the machinery for carrying on the town's affairs as sidewalks, street lighting, police or fire protection. Each person who conducts a business which depends on the patronage of the public benefits directly from the existence of the town's papers, whether his individual name and business is mentioned in the papers or not. This is a proposition that cannot be successfully controverted. A town newspaper is a bond of communication between the place of publication and each man and woman outside, who is a regular reader of it. The paper has power to draw business for its advertising patrons exactly in the proportion that it is made strong, readable and gressive.

These qualities cannot come to a newspaper that is neglected or half supported by the constituency it serves.

For the general good in every town there should be co-operation between merchants and publishers. On the part of the publisher there should be no sparing of effort to make the paper attractive and readable; to see that mechanically it is as forward as local conditions will permit: that the subscription list is pushed aggressively and kept up to high water mark. The wider the circle of territory that the paper can be made to circulate in the better it will be for the trade of the town. People who live within two or three miles do not have to be coaxed by newspaper persuasion to do their trading in their own particular centre. They will come as a matter of course. It's among the people who live some miles away, who are perhaps equally distant between two market places, that aggressive work will prove most effective. So much for the publisher's part.

If it is granted that the publication of such paper as we have described is for the general benefit of the town's business, what should be the duty of the business man? Is it not reasonable for the publisher to look for the active sympathy and support of every merchant towards the maintenance of his paperp? The duty of the business man is not accomplished by his simply subscribing for the paper. A newspaper at a dollar a year without advertising is an impossibility. If the merchants of a town desire newspapers to advance their interests it is obligatory that they get behind the papers with their patronage.

SPOKE ON OPPORTUNITIES FOR BOYS IN CANADA

The members of the Peterborough Boy Scouts who attended the meeting in the Armories on Saturday night were very fortunate indeed, in having the opportunity of listening to Mr. D. O'Connell's eloquent address on "Opportunities for Boys in Canada," and Dr. McPherson's able demonstration of "How to Treat a Broken Limb."

Mr. O'Connell encouraged the boys to aim at the ideal of becoming useful and pre-eminent in whatever vocation they might decide to enter upon and gave some striking examples of such men as Michael Angelo, Archimedes, Shakespeare and Beethoven, who had risen to great eminence from very humble homes and surroundings. He showed very clearly that the best aids towards attaining the highest degree of good citizenship lay in three very important traits to be developed by each boy as he approached maturity, (2) To pay strict and careful attention to the work in hand. (3) To be thoroughly honest and honourable in all doings with one's fellows and (4) To be loyal to and proud of our country and our king.

By elucidating these points, Mr. O'Connell furnished those present with an interesting and inspiring address, and the applause that greeted him at the close clearly demonstrated that another visit in the future will be highly appreciated, and that the boys are certainly already developing the first trait mentioned.

This week Mr. J. H. McClennan, Superintendent Trent Canal, the man who, it might be stated, stands foremost of those who have furthered the Scout Movement in Peterborough, will address the boys, but his subject at present has not been announced.

A Jolly Birthday-Party

A jolly evening was spent at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William Howell, Chamberlain street, one evening last week, the occasion being their birthday party.

Mr. Howell is a popular employee of the C.G.E. works, and he invited a number of his fellow employees in for the evening. A most pleasant time was spent.

Refreshments at the close of the affair climaxed the evening and the merry-makers dispersed in the wee small hours of the night.

The Minister of Marine will bring down a bill to compel the use of wireless on boats and passenger steamers.

ATTEMPTED MURDER IS THE CHARGE

Bert Brown, a Negro Pullman Car Conductor, Arrested Here on Instructions From Montreal Police—Shot Robert Ford, Another Negro—Taken Back to Montreal for Trial.

Bert Brown, colored, of Albany, N. Y., was arrested yesterday morning at six o'clock at the C.P.R. station by Constables Adams and Newhall, on the charge of shooting Robert Ford, another negro, with intent to kill. The alleged crime was committed in Montreal on Saturday night at 10 o'clock, and Brown caught the 10.10 train and came west. He told the local police that he shot Ford, but stated that he did so in self defence, as Ford was attempting to rob him, he claimed.

"QUICK WORK," REMARKED PRISONER.

When Officers Adams and Newhall apprehended their man in the sleeper the prisoner remarked "This is pretty quick work." The arrest was effected in short order, too, for Brown was in charge of the police eight hours after the deed was committed, and had only gotten nicely to sleep when he was awakened and found himself a prisoner.

When Brown was searched at the police station a five-chamber 32 calibre English bulldog revolver with two chambers empty, was found on him.

IS PULLMAN CAR CONDUCTOR.

The prisoner is a Pullman car conductor on the Delaware and Hudson Railroad, and is well dressed and of respectable appearance. He is a married man and has a family.

Detective Reoph of Montreal, arrived this morning and took the prisoner back to that city to stand trial.

AN ARMOR PLATE SKULL

A dispatch from Montreal says: Montreal, Jan. 22 — Chief Carpenter this morning received word from Peterboro' that a negro named Robert Brown, wanted here for attempted, had been arrested there while on his way to Toronto on the C. P. R. night train. Brown on Saturday got into an altercation with another negro named Ford over a woman and fired two bullets into his head without doing very much damage to the African's skull. He evidently fled from the city by the night C. P. R. train. Chief Carpenter wired descriptions of the man to various cities between here and Toronto, with the result that the Peterboro' police landed him after searching the train.

CELLARS ARE BADLY FLOODED

Owing to a break in the city water pipe on Hunter Street, or in one of the sewers, several cellars commencing at the office of W. H. Hill Hunter Street, and continuing for a short distance down George Street on the right hand side going south, are badly flooded.

R. Martin and a gang of men from the Waterworks Department, are having a strenuous task, picking their way through the frost hardened ground in an endeavor to locate the leak.

FINANCING OF THE SCHOOLS

Mr. John Crane's Defence of the Board of Education's Expenditure on Peterboro's Public School System.

To the Editor of the Review.

In a recent issue of the Review an article appeared, giving municipal statistics in tabulated form, and arriving at the tax per head in a number of cities and towns in the province. The same article undertook to show that, in school expenditure Peterborough was within two of being the highest, and this feature was commented upon editorially by you.

The statistics were credited to the Financial Post, and from the standing of that paper would be assumed as practically beyond criticism. It is apparent however, that in the compilation of these returns there is much diversity of method, for, from authentic information gathered by me some time ago, from a number of the cities cited, it is clear that ordinary revenue and expenditure is mixed, without comment, with capital revenue and expenditure in many instances, consequently, for the purpose these statistics do not afford the information desired. In fact the same paper, the Financial Post, last week was led to observe editorially—

"If the various governments insisted on uniform financial statements from the cities and towns, there would then be some basis for an adequate comparison of the standing of the various municipalities. At present it is difficult to arrive at such a comparison of any considerable value, on account of the various ways in which revenue and expenditure are classified."

Peterborough citizens were proud of the statement published in the Review recently that "Peterborough, in point of growth had outstripped nearly all the cities of same standing in the past ten years."

GROWTH IN SCHOOLS

This feature is also apparent in point of school enrolment, and it is to this matter that I wish especially to deal.

The school enrolment of the past ten years has jumped from 1863 to 2564.

It is compulsory on the part of the School Board to provide school accommodation for these children. Up to the last three or four years no enlargement of our school premises had been provided, consequently, the calls for extension came in quick succession, with no other alternation but to provide. With this point in view and from which there was no other method of overcoming the question naturally boils itself down to Are our school buildings beyond our requirements? Is waste room apparent? Are they abounding in luxuries? In fact, has the people's money been spent in equipment for which there is no need?

NO ANSWER NEEDED

These questions scarcely need an answer, for beyond our Institute, King Edward and Queen Alexandra schools, the other schools cannot be characterized as suitable in any respect for children to spend the major portion of their lives in, and we all agree that environment has much to do in the education of the child.

I, therefore, take the position that so far as the provision of school buildings is concerned the expenditure is practically uncontrollable on the part of the Board.

ARE ALREADY TAXED

Our Collegiate Institute is a credit to the city and in its erection the Board cannot be blamed for a spirit of optimism since the accommodation of the building is already taxed.

In the cost of administration of the Institute it is again difficult to obtain a comparison with that of other cities. Some are free, others charge small fees; others larger fees; others are open to the counties and receive liberal grants in consequence; others, again, have not met the requirements of the Department of Education in the matter of equipment, and staff, so as to be placed on the list as "approved schools." A few of the city Collegiates are quite small, so that for these, and other reasons a fair comparison of the cost of administration is a difficult problem. I believe, however, that considering the excellent equipment of our Institute, and the high standing of its staff, that this branch of our system is being run at a minimum of expense, consistent with efficiency.

TEACHERS' SALARIES

The chief item of controllable expenditure in the maintenance of Public schools is the salaries of the teaching staff. In the table appended it will be seen that Peterborough stands twelfth in a list of eighteen cities in the salaries paid to male teachers, and ninth in that to female teachers. The average salary paid to our male teachers is $967, while the average in eighteen cities is $1,264. The average salary paid to lady teachers here is $509, while in the eighteen cities the average is $633.

It will further be noticed that, in proportion of male to female teachers Peterborough stands second in the province, and, I am further informed, that respecting the qualifications of our teachers, Peterborough stands first, i.e., that we have a greater percentage of highly qualified teachers than any other city in the province.

Peterborough stands sixth in the province in point of enrolment per teacher, the figures being an average of 48. With the exception of one school, the enrollment was over 50 per teacher, so that it cannot fairly be said that the classes are unduly small, for effective work these figures are somewhat high.

In considering the increased expenditure on our city schools during recent years it must be remembered that three new schools have been erected and equipped. The introduction of manual training and domestic science has added to the cost, but the chief expense has been incurred to meet the changes in our educational system.

MORE EFFICIENT TEACHERS

The abolition of third-class certificates and the establishment of Normal Schools in various parts of the province have brought great changes in our systems of Public school education. The Education Department is determined to have efficient teachers and the demand for these is so great that they can command decent salaries. Schools that formerly paid these teachers $275 to $300 per annum, are now advertising and offering $500 and $550 per annum, and it is a common occurrance to see $600 offered for a teacher holding a second-class certificate to take charge of an ordinary sized rural school.

SALARIES NOT HIGHEST.

It will be seen, therefore, that Peterborough is by no means paying the highest salaries, and while striving to keep their staff up to an efficient level is effecting such at a reasonable cost, as compared with other cities.

The bold statement that the School Board is asking twice as much for school purposes as they did years ago, while true, should not brand the Board with extravagance, and all the blame for our increasing tax rate. Other municipal expenses have grown and will grow in proportion to our increasing population, the fact being that the School Board has very little money at its command to use as controllable expenditure, and will only ask for such funds to provide for those advantages in school education which should be placed within the reach of every child.

I regret having trespassed on your space to such an extent, but I believe information is what the citizens want. I am writing this as a citizen only, and not on the authority of the School Board, of which I have the honor to be presiding officer.

JOHN CRANE.

UNKNOWN TURNED UP

Young Man to Whom Blacklister Gave $1 Returns the Amount to Court

The mystery attached to the disappearance of a one dollar bill from the hand of a blacklister, in the stable of the Grand Hotel, was solved at a session of the police court this afternoon, when the unknown presented himself.

He claimed that he took the money, but was told that the man was a blacklister, and did not buy the liquor. He meant to return the bill but the time he was in the city did not have it with him. Asked why he remained silent when the other young fellow was charged with stealing, he answered that he told the other after court.

The accused was acquitted and the other one charged up with the costs of the case.

The $1 was returned to the lister, who comes up to-morrow morning to hear the Magistrate's judgment in two charges, in which he pleaded guilty.

LEGISLATURE OPENED TO-DAY MUCH BUSINESS ON DOCKET

More Immigration For Rural Ontario is Desired—Other Measures For the Session.

Special to The Review.

Toronto Jan 24.—With the booming of cannon and much ceremony, the Ontario Legislature was convened to-day at three o'clock by His Excellency Lieutenant-Governor J. M. Gibson. It was a brilliant affair. The speech from the throne was quite long, and one of its chief features was the foreshadowing of legislation asking for a greater appropriation to encourage the immigration of farm laborers to Ontario, this being the greatest need of rural Ontario.

Toronto, Jan. 24.—At three o'clock this afternoon the booming of cannon will announce the arrival of His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Gibson at the Parliament Buildings to open the first session of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario under the reign of His Majesty King George V.

The speech from the throne promises to be one of interest, importance and inspiration. In accordance with precedent and the unbounded loyalty of the banner province of the Dominion of Canada, it will naturally first make fitting reference to the death of his late Majesty King Edward VII.

Appropriate felicitations will then be extended to His Majesty King George V. on his accession to the throne of the British Empire, of which the Dominion of Canada and the Province of Ontario form a loyal integral part.

His honor may then be expected to congratulate the members of the Legislature upon the progress in the work of the west wing of the Parliament Buildings, and also in the preparations which are under way for the erection of a modern and suitable viceregal residence for the Lieutenant-Governor of the province, in place of the now inadequate residence on West King street.

Congratulations will be extended to the assembly upon the excellent results which have already marked the steps which have been taken for the establishment of a central prison farm at Guelph, and the success which has attended the experiment of placing prisoners at work road-making in the Porcupine district.

The great public benefits in the conservation of the natural resources of the district secured by the extension of the Algonquin National Park will be briefly enumerated.

One of the most important features of the speech from the throne will be a concise review of the mining situation, which will point to the large increase in the mining output of Northern Ontario.

Commendation will be tendered the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway Commission for the success of the Government line. The reasons for the extension of the railway to the new Porcupine gold mining camp will be given and for the extension to the junction of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

His honor will call attention to the completion of the transmission line for the hydro-electric system, and the benefits which have already accrued to many important Ontario municipalities as a consequence.

Devout thankfulness will be expressed to divine Providence for the bountiful crops of the past year, and for the progress and hopeful outlook for the agricultural interests of the province.

Along the lines of new legislation important announcements will be foreshadowed, especially in the matter of public education.

It is known that Hon. Dr. Pyne has in view the making of provision for technical and industrial education, although the scope of the movement is a Ministerial secret. As a Dominion Government commission is at present engaged in making a report, with a view to adopting a national policy of technical education, the definite announcement of what Ontario will do will be awaited with interest.

Plans will be referred to for an extension of the present system of agriculture, to render it more comprehensive and more generally available to the youth of the rural parts of the province.

The speech will also state that the Government will submit some amendments to the liquor license law. There appears to be good reason for the belief that a graded system of license fees, based upon the revenue of individual establishments, will be foreshadowed. It is not thought that the three-fifths requirement in local option voting will be changed, but the laws may be made more stringent in other respect.

A. C. Pratt of South Norfolk has been selected to move the address in reply to the speech from the throne. James Torrance, North Perth, will be the seconder.

A detachment of infantry, a band, and a cavalry guard, provided by the Royal Canadian Dragoons, will form the guard of honor for His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor. A salute of 15 guns will be fired by the Ninth Field Battery on the west side of the building, in the direction of the university grounds.

In the new wing on the west side are now situated the offices of the provincial police, the law clerks, the committee-rooms, cloak-rooms, and reading-rooms, on the second floor. On the south side of the first floor are the offices of Hon. Adam Beck and Hon. Col. J. S. Hendrie, the express office, the King's printer, and the dining-room.

THEY ENDURED HARDSHIPS UNTOLD

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 23.—Telling a tale of hardship almost unprecedented in the history of the North Atlantic Capt. Howard and crew, of the Nova Scotia schooner H. T. Loggan, which was abandoned off the Grand Banks on December 19, arrived here yesterday on the Allan liner Hesperian from Liverpool. Captain Howard and his men were rescued from their water-logged craft by the steamer Bardistan bound from Norfolk for Bremen, after all hope of rescue had been abandoned. They had been on their way to New York when they ran into hurricane weather which carried away rudder and sails and loosened timbers.

FARMERS' BANK FIGHT STARTS WITH FOSTER'S BROADSIDE

He Asks For a Full Return of the Correspondence Regarding the Conduct of the Bank Since Its Formation With a View to Looking Into the Inadequacy of the Banking System.

Ottawa, Jan. 24.—Hon. George E. Foster started the firing in the impending battle over the Farmers' Bank collapse in the House of Commons last evening, when he moved for a return of all correspondence regarding the conduct of the bank since its organization. Mr. Foster spoke at some length, and said that many irregularities appeared to obtain in the methods pursued by the Finance Department and treasury board in not satisfying itself regarding the bona fides of the promoter, and the warning given by the superintendent of insurance of New York.

Sir Wilfrid replied that the statutory requirements having been complied with, Mr. Fielding had no option but to allow the bank to continue doing business.

J. A. Robb (Huntingdon) said that the people who lived along the canal did not agree with Mr. Monk's view. One of the direct results of this action on the part of the agreement was that last month the people of Valleyfield had been offered electric light and power at 46 per cent. below the present rates.

Mr. Pugsley said that the idea back of the granting of the lease was to develop the water power and to insure its use for the people at the lowest price. In order to get the best results it was necessary to give a lease extending over a long term of years. Every care had been taken to protect the public interest. The price charged was to be fixed by the Railway Commission in the event of a disagreement, and fixed every five years. The lessees should not amalgamate with the Montreal Light, Heat & Power Co. It was also provided that by giving one year's notice, the Government could take over the works by paying the cost of construction and five per cent.

A. C. Boyce (West Algoma) said: "I beg to give notice that to-morrow I will move the adjournment of the House for the purpose of discussing a matter of urgent public importance, to wit, the receipt by the Ministers of the crown of gifts of money in the form of testimonials, and the reported contribution to such testimonials or testimonial, of a sum of money by one W. R. Travers, late general manager of the Farmers' Bank of Canada, now in liquidation, and said Travers being convicted and being now under sentence of six years' imprisonment for having falsified returns and theft of sums of money."

Towards the middle of the evening, Hon. Geo. E. Foster rose to move a motion, among other things, for an order of the House "for a copy of all correspondence between the Government or any member thereof or any official of the board of finance, and any person or association with reference to the conduct and affairs of the Farmers' Bank since the date of its organization."

"My desire," said the member for North Toronto, "is to get all the information possible in the hands of the Government that will enable the House and the people of this country to form an accurate opinion as to what, if any, responsibility lay at the door of an imperfect act, on the one hand, or of an imperfect administration of the act on the other, and to define as sharply as possible the difference between the two, or the line between the two."

The failure of the Farmers' Bank, was, to say the least, unpleasant reading, and not a pleasing comment on the Banking Act and the system founded upon it. The baneful effects of the failure of the Farmers' Bank, Mr. Foster pointed out, were found in the circumstance that it was a farmers' bank, the canvass made for shareholders was among the farming community, and these shareholders also became depositors. But these people not only lose their share capital and the profit they expected to make out of it, but also their deposits, and are responsible for the double liability.

Continuing, Mr. Foster said there was a strong feeling of unrest in the country, and a demand was made for both an investigation and a remedy. He recited the method adopted in the formation of a bank, outlining the statutory requirements, and asked whether the treasury board, presided over by the Minister of Finance, had satisfied itself that the compliance with the statutory requirements had been bona fide. This was vital. The treasury board was not bound to take the affidavits without making some investigation. He stated that the $250,000 required by law to be deposited to the credit of the Receiver-General only represented $170,000 of actual cash paid in, and the balance had been secured by the discounting of notes given for stock subscribed, and that $41,000 had been paid out to the provisional directors.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said all the information in the hands of the Government would be brought down fully and frankly and freely. He had reason to believe that some of Mr. Foster's surmises would not be borne out by the facts. If there was any carelessness, everybody in the House was to blame; for a renewal of the charter had been granted twice without dissent. Mr. Foster had blamed the action of the treasury board in granting a certificate, but he could not see that the board was in any way blamable, in view of the fact that $250,000 had been placed to the credit of the Receiver-General, accompanied by an affidavit that all requirements of the law had been observed.

WAS SHOT IN COLD BLOOD

David Graham Phillips is in Critical Condition.

New York, Jan. 24.—David Graham Phillips, editor, publicist and novelist, was shot six times yesterday as he appeared at the Princton Club, by Fitzhugh Coyle Goldsborough, a Harvard man, who immediately committed suicide. Goldsborough was well known in Toronto.

Phillips is at Bellevue Hospital in an extremely critical condition, but with a chance for life. The body of Goldsborough, whose career at Harvard was brief, lies in the morgue. Apparently insane, he had a fancied grudge against the author and sought his life. He was only 31 years old, and is a son of Dr. Edmund K. Goldsborough of Washington.

David Graham Phillips was born in Madison, Ind., on Oct. 11, 1867. His first literary work was done as a reporter for The New York Sun, which he left to become an editorial writer for The New York World. While still with The World he published, in 1901, his first novel, "The Great God Success." It brought him royalties, and he resigned from newspaper work to devote his life to fiction and the magazines.

ARE BLAMING THE POLICE

Criticism of Official Inactivity in Bank Case.

Toronto, Jan. 24.—Many are blaming the police for the absence of effective action against those charged with the wrecking of the Farmers' Bank. They say that an efficient police department would lay extraditable charges against the men wanted, and that, even if these charges cannot be laid, an efficient police department would have arrested these men before they had time to leave the country.

The answer made to these is that the police cannot act in the matter without warrants, and that charges cannot be laid without the consent of Crown Attorney Corley. In a recent case the crown attorney declared in court that the police had no right to lay charges without his consent, and the police clerks have said that they had orders not to issue warrants without his consent. This, the police say, relieves them of responsibility for the nature of the charges and the delay in the issuance of the existing warrants.

It is understood that the matter will be brought up at the meeting of police commissioners to be held this afternoon, when an investigation as to the inactivity of the police and the reasons for it may be made.

G.T.R. WANTS DIRECT LINE

From Ottawa to Toronto and Will Have It.

Ottawa, Jan. 24.—"We have, in view a direct line from Ottawa to Toronto," stated Vice-President Wm. Wainwright of the G.T.R., last night, "but as to just what route we will take I am not prepared to say. As a matter of fact, it has not been decided.

"There are three suggestions. One is by what is known as the Kingston, Smith's Falls and Ottawa line. We control that now. Then the Rideau Valley and Brockville people are after us, while yet another interest wants the line to go by way of Gananoque. That Ottawa needs direct connection with Toronto is obvious, and I think the matter will be determined before long."

Easy For "Travelers."

Ottawa, Jan. 24.—A feature of nego-

One important feature of the negotiations at Washington is said here to be the extension to the United States of the provisions of the French treaty (article xlv.), by which a commercial traveler may, upon entering Canada, deposit the dutiable value of his samples with the first customs house which he meets, with the understanding that when his departure from Canada, he shall, if the samples are still intact, receive a rebate of the full amount of duty deposited.

This will, if agreed upon, prove of immense value to the business houses of the United States. At present they have to pay full duty upon their samples, no matter how many times they may bring the same articles into Canada, and the practice has been for a majority of such travelers to dispose of their samples at any price they could get before returning home.

Adding to the Force.

BOURASSA AND ROME

French Nationalist Hot After Laurier Gov't.

Says it is Fine Spectacle to See Vatican Trips.

Montreal, Jan. 23.—Mr. Henri Bourassa, the Nationalist leader, publishes a striking article under his own signature in to-night's Devoir, containing a sensational exposure of the Laurier Government's tactics as shown by the special mission of Postmaster-General Lemieux to Rome, and intimating that he will have further to say. In the article, which is entitled "The Naval Question and the Clergy," Mr. Bourassa refers to the recent visit of the Postmaster-General to Rome, and to the story that was published almost immediately after the latter's return to Canada, that the British authorities and the Laurier Cabinet had approached the Vatican with the object of having the Pope intervene in the naval question in favor of the Laurier Government's policy.

Mr. Bourassa denounces in scathing terms such an attempt. "It is a fine spectacle," he says, "to see politicians at bay seeking to enrol the force of the bishops and cures in their electoral squads to bolster up their Niobes in distress and their empty Rainbows, and, above all, to assure to the Ministerial party the conservation of their portfolios, their patronage, their places, etc., in the name of the liberty of the Church and the preservation of the Empire."

AVIATOR TO BE WED TO-MORROW

Special to The Review.

London, Eng., Jan. 24.—Count de Lesseps, whose engagement to Miss Grace Mackenzie, of Toronto, the daughter of Sir William Mackenzie, the C.N.R. magnate, was announced recently, will to-morrow become a benedict. The marriage will be quite a social affair. It is understood that the count has agreed to abandon dangerous flights in the future.

LIFE'S TRAGEDIES

New York, Jan. 23.—Francis Herrick, although more than 70 years old, was found by neighbors in the back yard of his Staten Island home today hacking pitifully at the frozen ground with pick and shovel. When questioned, he said he was digging a grave for his elder brother Charles, whose body lay in the house alone for some time. Charles had died on Saturday night.

Carnegie Gets Three Years.

Toronto, Jan. 24.—Three years in Kingston Penitentiary was the sentence meted out to James Carnegie, aged 55, who a week ago pleaded guilty to a charge of making counterfeit money.

The money was in 25 and 50 cent pieces. He had only been in the country for a year, and it is supposed that he has been issuing the money ever since.

Hugh Carnegie, a son, was charged with disposing of the money. He pleaded not guilty, and was remanded for a week.

Flight on Wednesday.

Key West, Fla., Jan. 24.—J. A. D. McCurdy, the Canadian aviator, who will try to fly from Key West to Havana, returned yesterday afternoon from the Cuban city, where he secured a landing place. While the date originally set was to-day, it was said he would set sail about daylight Wednesday.

Platforms will be built on the decks of the destroyers, which will convoy him, to permit him to make fresh starts if he falls into the water. The boats will be stationed ten miles apart.

Her Head Was Severed.

London, Jan. 24.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The body of Hazel Hamilton Brown, a Canadian, was found on the railway line near Brockenhurst, New Forest. It is not known how she got on the tracks.

The verdict of the jury is that Hazel, the daughter of Francis F. Brown, aged 26, suicided. She was suffering from tuberculosis and was depressed with the fear that she would never get better. She put herself under the train, and her head was severed from her body.

SCHOOL STATISTICS

The figures furnished by Mr. John Crane, chairman of the Board of Education, regarding the comparative teachers' salaries of the cities of Ontario form a very valuable table, and quite illuminative. Mr. Crane's careful preparation of the facts is a worthy labor, for in the cost and efficiency of our school systems every good citizen is concerned.

An examination of the table furnished by Mr. Crane, and published yesterday, shows some curious conditions existing in the Peterborough school system. As compared with other cities in the province, Peterborough is evidently well up in educational progress. The cost of its staff averages, in both male and female, below the average Ontario cost, yet this table, compiled from Mr Crane's figures, shows another light on the affair. Taking the total staff, and the salary outlay in the three or four cities in Peterborough's class, it figures out this way—

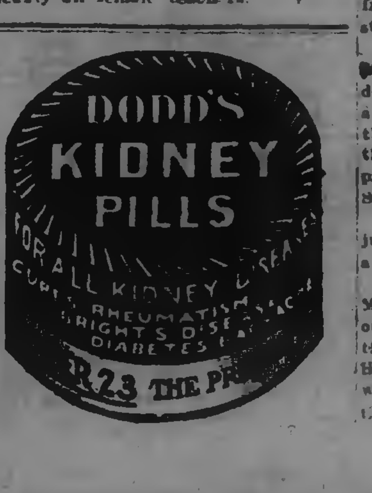
Brantford, 56 teachers, cost $30,000.
Kingston 48 teachers, cost $25,300.
Guelph, 36 teachers, cost $19,850.
Stratford, 34 teachers, cost $18,400.
Windsor, 43 teachers, cost $26,600.
PETERBOROUGH, 44 TEACHERS COST $27,000.

Taking the combined average salary of both male and female teachers, Peterborough shows higher than all cities in her class, except Windsor. The figures are Windsor, $618; Peterborough, $613; Guelph, $550; Stratford, $541; Kingston, $539; Brantford, $536. This table shows, as is obvious, that Peterborough is paying more for its teaching staff than the other places, except Windsor. The question naturally arises, Is the city getting its money's worth? If the Ontario average salary for male teachers is $1,264, and Peterborough pays its male teachers $960 on an average, and the Ontario female teacher's average salary is $633, and Peterborough pays its female teachers $509, why is it that Peterborough nearly heads the list in the cost of its teaching staff?

The answer is this. Peterborough employs 10 male teachers and 34 female. The proportion is almost one-third. Brantford employs 5 male and 51 female. Kingston employs 3 male and 45 female. Stratford employs 5 male and 29 female. Windsor employs 3 male and 40 female.

Peterborough is second in the list of all Ontario cities in the proportion of male teachers employed.

In the efficiency of such an expensive system of running a staff, of course lies the root of the problem. Is the Peterborough staff more efficient than in the other cities? Mr. Crane says that we have a greater percentage of highly qualified teachers than any other city. Owing to the discrepancies existing in school systems it is hard to accurately base an estimate of examination results, so as to show whether it is more efficient than the system of employing nearly all female teachers.



BLIND PIGGERIES

The administration of the license laws in northern Ontario, is a vexatious problem. The frequent raids and prosecutions of "blind piggeries" prove that the illicit sale of liquor is being carried on the mining country to a considerable degree, and it is costing the province considerably money to keep tab on the breakers of the law. Where blind pigs exist—and in the north country he is a very skilful official who can catch them—it is evidence that there is an attempt being made to curtail the supply and sale of intoxicating liquors. Any reasonable thinking man, will agree that in a country where the mining and lumbering men are so predominant, to control the sale of liquor offers a very difficult problem. Total prohibition means simply the establishment of so many more illicit liquor places, and indeed the effort to regulate the business from the consumers' end, is one calling for eternal vigilance and unremitting industry.

The Ontario Government's declared policy, is to grant no more liquor licenses in the north. The Toronto Globe would have this principle extended to the abolition of the liquor licenses making it a prohibition country. That it is desirable no one will deny, but its practicability has yet to be established. The method of exterminating the business of 'blind piggery" which Hon. Mr. Hanna has adopted, is not the sole concentration of effort at restricting the retail sale but in tracking down the wholesale houses supplying such liquor. The source will be hunted down as well as the destination.

It is stated that the Ontario Government could easily regulate the liquor traffic in the north by instituting a system of espionage on the T. and N. O., all freight having to enter the country over the Government railway. This course is repugnant to the honest man desiring to catch a law-breaker, and in addition even a Government railway is a common carrier, and as such as bound to the observance of the rules regulating them.

In seeking the root of the evil, the wholesale houses which supply the illicit sellers, Mr. Hanna is going about the problem the right way. There need be no let up in the effort to stamp out the blind pig pest, even though the prosecutions do not always produce the desired result. The answer to the complaints and charges of the newspapers seeking to make political capital out of the matter lies in the common sense of the people, who know what a difficult task it is.

PRAISE FOR N.P.

In a speech the other day Hon Mr. Lemieux, Postmaster-General, referred to the "wise fiscal policy adopted by this country twenty-five years ago, which was the admiration of the world" and was responsible for Canadian commercial ascendancy. It is not often that Liberal politicians will openly acknowledge that the National policy is the foundation stone on which Canada's prosperity has been built, and hold it up for admiration. Sir John Macdonald would feel very much flattered to-day, if he could rise from the grave and view, not only the actual results of this policy in the country, but the free trade party of the Dominion, his political opponents, endorsing it as being responsible for the country's progress and prosperity.

Yet that is what the Liberals in office have done. They have in office approved most emphatically the old National policy. They have not dared to put into practice what they preached many years ago while in opposition, because when they found themselves burdened with the actual running of the country's affairs, they found also that any other policy but the National policy was not for the country's good; and were compelled to practice it, though still trying to maintain their old plea for free trade, when it was "practicable."

The Woodstock Sentinel-Review discusses the attitude of Sir John Macdonald and the National policy toward reciprocity with the United States. There was a time when Canada had a treaty of this nature; there was a time when the prospects of reciprocal free trade with the United States would have been hailed with joy as offering an impetus to Canadian commerce. That was in the day before the effect of the National policy began to be observed in Canada. That was in the day when even Sir John Macdonald did not know that his policy was to bear such magnificent fruit, time not yet having demonstrated its wisdom.

That the National policy of Sir John Macdonald's time has extended and developed with the course of years, is a matter of common knowledge. Yet the basic principle must always be the same, and it is not better expressed than by this observation of Sir John's made in 1878—

"It can be well understood that a judicious tariff may on the whole, be a moderate one."

The National policy that Sir John Macdonald had in mind was a thoroughly protective one, but it was not that the wall should be as high as Haman's gallows. This view yet holds with the great majority of Conservatives though having observed the magnificent fruit of the policy, many believe that a stronger application of the protective principle would still further increase the abounding prosperity of the country.

CHRONIC ULCERS

Mrs. Jas. Elsworth, 902 Selkirk Ave., Winnipeg, says:—"Four years ago ulcers broke out on my left ankle and spread until from the top of my foot to my knee was one extended sore. One ulcer would be almost healed when a second would appear in a new place and in a remarkably short time a deep hole would be eaten into the flesh. The flesh on my leg turned blue and looked shocking indeed. I started using ointment after ointment, but received little or no benefit. The ulcers would heal for a time and then break out afresh. I was laid up in bed for a long time, absolutely unable to walk. My limb was so painful that I had no rest night after night.

"I consulted five different doctors! Some advised my going into hospital; others said there was no cure for me. After using their ointments and preparations until I was positive they could not cure, I almost gave up in despair.

"It was then Zam-Buk was tried and how I bless the hour I got it! Within a day it had given me some ease, and from that time I went on improving! The sores were so bad that it took some time to heal them, but Zam-Buk healed them all. The last was healed over a year ago and I have never had a moment's trouble since, from any form of ulceration."

Zam-Buk is just as good for eczema, piles, festering sores, scalp sores, children's rashes, cuts, burns, scalds, and all skin injuries and diseases. Druggists and stores everywhere 50c box, or post free, Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

YELLOW JOURNALISM

The London papers are indignant on discovering that the paid agents of the American yellow press have been hiring servants in the service of the aristocracy to tattle. The English code of honor comes a little higher than taking the servants' kitchen gossip, and spreading it broadcast in print, whether it be true or not. Still, one is led to reflect that in this the the British aristocracy is no worse off than are the American "get-rich-quick" millionaires. The spy system is worked systematically in the United States and some of the stories published about the notables are really villainous. Whether they have any basis is a matter of personal knowledge in each case, but it certainly is shameful that a section of the newspaper world will put its snout into the deepest of mock mercy for the sake of shocking the depraved taste of the class to which it caters.

Some people talk of the decadence of Britain, but in respect for the decencies of press work, the United States has still a lot to learn from the old land and the old methods.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Wireless messages are now being sent from aeroplanes. This is a most important innovation, of immense value in time of war for scouting purposes.

Since his accession to the throne King George has been making a record for industry, diplomacy, for judgment. Before his accession, fears were generally expressed that he could not measure up to the mark set by King Edward. People cannot always tell what is in a man till the test comes, and calls forth his best effort.

The Examiner went to a considerable amount of trouble last night to deny that Hon. J. R. Stratton was connected with the Farmers' Bank affair in relation to the raising of the $250,000 required as paid up capital before the bank could do business. In producing the article from Toronto Saturday Night, and giving that paper full credit for the article, the Review published it as it might publish any other clipping, because of its general interest. The Examiner on Mr. Stratton's behalf denies the correctness of the statements in the article, and we are pleased to have Mr. Stratton's assurance through the Examiner that in his capacity as president of the Trusts & Guarantee Company and vice-president of the Traders' Bank, he was not involved in the charter-getting transaction.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Lower Prices for Hogs at Bufalo and Chicago—Markets Active.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 23.—John Rogers & Co., Liverpool, cable to-day that Saturday's prices were well maintained in the Birkenhead market; the demand was slow, and, altho supplies are very light, it is extremely improbable that there will be any material rise in prices, States and Canadian steers making from 12½c to 13¼c per lb.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Jan. 23.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 94 carloads, consisting of 1957 cattle, 1 hog, 567 sheep and lambs, 31 calves and 21 horses.

Exporters.

E. L. Woodward bought for Swift & Co 287 cattle as follows: Export steers, 206 weighing 1140 to 1267 lbs., at $6 to $6.35. 4 heifers, 1050 lbs., at $6; 27 bulls, 1300 to 1950 lbs. each, at $5.10 to $5.50.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots, $6 to $6.25; loads of good, $5.75 to $5.90; medium, $5.40 to $5.60; common, $5 to $5.25; cows, $3.75 to $5.30; bulls, $4 to $5; canners, $2.50 to $3.

Milkers and Springers.

A limited number of milkers and springers were all bought by Fred Rowntree at $45 to $80 each.

Veal Calves.

Prices for veal calves were unchanged at $3 to $8.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of 567 sheep and lambs, met a dull market; sheep, ewes, sold at $4.25 to $4.50; rams, $3 to $3.50; lambs, $5.60 to $5.90; with one or two selected lots at $5.90, and one lot of 31 lambs, reported at $6.

Hogs.

Wm. Harris, W. J. Johnston and H. P. Kennedy all reported hogs lower. Selects, fed and watered, at the market, $7.50 and $7.15 to drovers for hogs, f.o.b., cars, at country points, which means that the farmer will get $7 per cwt. this week.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Jan. 23.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Jan. 21 were 2300 cattle, 800 sheep and lambs, 2000 hogs and 200 calves, while the offerings this morning amounted to 1200 cattle, 500 sheep and lambs, 850 hogs and 125 calves.

An easier feeling prevailed in the market for cattle, owing to the more liberal supplies coming forward, but prices practically showed no change as compared with those of a week ago. Dealers who bought cattle in the Toronto market last week which cost 6c per lb., laid down here, stated that they would lose plenty of money to-day in this market, as some of them were offering such stock in car-load lots at $5.85 per cwt., and found it rather difficult to make sales even at this figure.

The trade early in the day was slow, but later it improved some under an improved demand from local buyers for small lots and sales of a few picked steers of very choice quality were made as high as 6¾c per lb., while choice stock sold at 6¼c to 6½c; good, at 5¾c to 6c; fairly good, at 5½c to 5¾c; fair, at 4¾c to 5c, and the lower grades at 4c to 4½c per lb. There were some choice bulls on the market, which brought 5¼c to 5¾c per lb.

Owing to the smaller receipts of hogs a stronger feeling prevailed in the market, and prices advanced 10c to 15c per cwt. At the advance there was a good demand from packers and a fairly active trade was done with sales of selected lots at $8.10 to $8.25 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for sheep or lambs. Supplies were ample to fill all requirements and prices ruled about steady. Sheep sold at 4c to 4½c and lambs, at 6c to 6½c per lb. The demand for calves was fair and sales of choice stock were made at 5½c per lb., and the lower grades at 4c to 5c per lb.

The Silver Horde

By REX BEACH

Author of "The Spoilers" and "The Barrier"

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY HARPER & BROTHERS

Over the side had come Cherry Malotte, accompanied by an Indian girl in shawl and moccasins—a slim, shrinking creature who stood as if bewildered, twisting her hands and staring about with frightened eyes. Behind them, head and shoulders above the sailors, towered a giant copper hued breed with a child in his arms.

They saw that Marsh was speaking to the newcomers, but could not distinguish his words. The Indian girl fell back as if terrified. She cried out something in her own tongue, shook her head violently and pointed to her white companion. Marsh's face was livid; he shook a quivering hand in Cherry Malotte's face. It seemed as if he would strike her, but Constantine strode between them, scowling silently down into the smaller man's face, his own visage saturnine and menacing. Marsh retreated a step, chattering excitedly. Then Cherry's voice came clearly to the listeners:

"It is too late now, Mr. Marsh. You may as well face the music."

Followed by the stares of the sailors, she came up the deck toward the old man and his daughter, who had arisen, the Indian girl clinging to her sleeve, the tall breed striding noiselessly behind. Willis Marsh came with them, his white lips writhing, his face like putty. He made futile detaining grasps at Constantine, and in the silence that suddenly descended upon the ship they heard him whispering.

"What is the meaning of this?" demanded Mr. Wayland.

"I heard you were about to sail, so I came out to see you before"—

Marsh broke in hoarsely: "She's a bad woman! She has come here for blackmail!"

"Blackmail!" cried Wayne Wayland "I thought as much!"

"That's her game. She wants money!"

Cherry shrugged her shoulders and showed her white teeth in a smile. "Mr. Marsh anticipates slightly You may judge if he is right."

Marsh started to speak, but Mildred Wayland, who had been watching him intently, was before him.

"Who sent you here, miss?"

"No one sent me. If Mr. Marsh will stop his chatter I can make myself understood."

"Don't listen to her."

Cherry turned upon him swiftly. "You've got to face it, so you may as well keep still."

He fell silent.

"We heard that Mr. Marsh was going away with you, and I came to ask him for enough money to support his child while he is gone."

"His child!" Wayne Wayland turned upon his daughter's fiance with a face of stern surprise. "Willis, tell her she is lying!"

"She's lying!" Marsh repeated obediently, but they saw the truth in his face.

Cherry spoke directly to Miss Wayland now. "I have supported this little fellow and his mother for a year." She indicated the red haired youngster in Constantine's arms. "That is all I care to do. When you arrived Mr. Marsh induced Chakawana to take the baby up river to a fishing camp and stay there until you had gone. But Constantine heard that he intended to marry you, and, hearing also that he intended leaving tonight, Constantine brought his sister back in the hope that Mr. Marsh would do what is right. You see, he promised to marry Chakawana long before he met you."

Mildred could have done murder at the expression she saw in Cherry's face. The woman she had scorned had humbled her in earnest. With flashing eyes she turned upon her father.

"Since you were so prompt in announcing my engagement, perhaps you can deny it with equal promptness."

"Good God! What a scandal if this is true!" Wayne Wayland wiped his forehead.

"Oh, it's true," said Cherry.

In the silence that followed the child struggled out of Constantine's arms and stood beside his mother, the better to inspect these strangers. His little face was grimy; his clothes, cut in the native fashion, were poor and not very clean. Yet he was more white than Aleut, and no one seeing him could doubt his parentage. The seamen had left their posts and were watching with such absorption that they failed to see a skiff with a single oarsman swing past the stern of the Grande Dame and make fast to the landing. Still unobserved, the man mounted the companionway swiftly.

For once in his life Wayne Wayland was too confused for definite speech. Willis Marsh stood helpless.

"Don't believe her!" he broke out. "She is lying to protect her own lover!" He pointed to Chakawana. "That girl is the child's mother, but its father is Boyd Emerson!"

"Boyd Emerson was never in Kalvik until last December," said Cherry "The child is three years old."

"It seems I am being discussed," said a voice behind them. Emerson clove his way through the sailors, striding directly to Marsh. "What is the meaning of this?"

Mildred Wayland laid a fluttering hand upon her breast. "I knew he would come," she breathed.

Constantine broke his silence for the first time, addressing Mildred directly:

"This baby b'long Mr. Marsh. He say he goin' marry Chakawana, but he lie. He goin' marry you because you are rich girl." He turned to Marsh. "What for you lie, eh?" He leaned forward with a frightful scowl. "I tell you long time ago I kill you if you don' marry my sister."

"Now I understand!" exclaimed Boyd. "It was you who stabbed him that night in the cannery."

"Yes. Chakawana tell him what the pries' say 'bout woman what don' marry. My sister say she go to hell herself and don' care much, but it ain't right for little baby to go to hell too."

"What do you mean by that?" asked Mr. Wayland.

"The Father say if white man take Indian woman and don' marry her she go to hell for thousan' year—mebbe two, three thousan' year. Anyhow, she don' never see Jesus' house. That's bad thing!" The breed shook his head seriously. "Chakawana she's good girl, and she go to church. I give money to the pries', too—plenty money every time—but he says that's no good; she's got to be marry or she'll burn for always with little baby. And so that's make her scare', because little baby ain't do nothing to burn that way. Mr. Marsh he say it's all one lie, and he don't care if little baby do go to hell. You hear that? He don' care for little baby."

Constantine's eyes were full of tears as he strove laboriously to voice his religious teachings. He went on with growing agitation:

"Chakawana she's mighty scare' of that bad place, and she ask Mr. Marsh again to marry her, but he beat her. That's when I try to kill him. Mebbe Mr. Emerson ain't come so quick Mr. Marsh go to hell himself."

Wayne Wayland turned upon Marsh "Why don't you say something?"

"I told you the brat isn't mine!" he cried. "If it isn't Emerson's it's Cherry Malotte's. They want money, but I won't be bled."

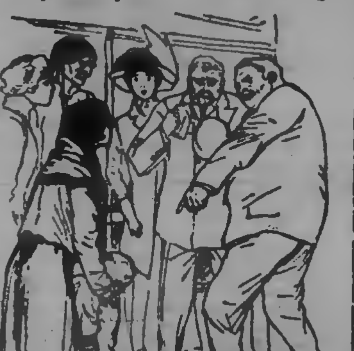
"You marry my sister?" asked Constantine.

"No!" snarled Willis Marsh. "You can all go to h— and take the child with you."

Without a single warning cry the breed lunged swiftly. The others saw something gleam in his hand. Emerson jumped for him, and the three men went to the deck in a writhing tangle, sending the furniture spinning before them. Mildred heard Boyd Emerson cry to the sailors:

"Get out of the way! I've got him!" Then saw him locked in the Indian's arms. They had gained their feet now and spun backward, bringing up against the yacht's cabin with a crash of shivering glass. A knife, wrenched from the breed's grasp, went whirling over the side into the sea.

Wayne Wayland loosed his daughter's hold and thrust his way in among the sailors kneeling beside the man he had chosen for his son-in-law. Emerson joined him, then rose quickly, crying:



"ITS FATHER IS BOYD EMERSON."

"Is there a doctor among your party?"

"Dr. Berry! Send for Berry! He's gone ashore!" exclaimed Mr. Wayland.

"Quick! Somebody fetch Dr. Berry," Boyd directed.

As the sailors drew apart Mildred Wayne saw a sight that made her grow deathly faint and close her eyes.

Your Old Enemy Rheumatism

CURE YOURSELF RIGHT NOW WITH "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

There is just one thing that causes Rheumatism—Uric Acid in the blood. Uric Acid is formed when either the bowels, kidneys or skin fail to rid the system of waste matter. This waste, or Urea, remains in the body and is changed into uric acid. It is this uric acid that poisons the blood, inflames the nerves, and causes Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago.

Liniments and ordinary rheumatic remedies won't cure Rheumatism, as none of such preparations go to the very root of the trouble—the blood, and the vital organs. "Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest cure for rheumatism in the world. And we will tell you why.

"Fruit-a-tives", by its action on the bowels, kidneys and skin, prevents the formation of an excess of uric acid. "Fruit-a-tives" causes the bowels, kidneys and skin to throw off the waste of the body, and thus keeps the blood absolutely pure.

If you have suffered with Rheumatism, and dread a return with the coming of cold weather, start in at once to take "Fruit-a-tives" and thus defeat your old enemy. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Seven Years For Mrs. Snead.

Newark, N.J., Jan. 24.—The last echo of the mysterious death of Ocey W. M. Snead in an unoccupied house in East Orange came here yesterday, when her mother, Mrs. Caroline B. Martin, was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment by Judge Ten Eyck, in the court of oyer and terminer here. The aged woman collapsed following sentence, and had to be carried back to her cell.

Refused the Writ.

Your Children's Eyes

MANY PARENTS are culpably negligent of their children's eyes, early attention to which would very often obviate lifelong annoyances and possibly injury to physical health. If a child of yours complains that he cannot see clear, that he has dull pains in the region of the eye, or that he is subject to headache; or if he leers, looks at objects askance or with partly closed eyes, he is suffering from some defect of vision, and it is your parental duty to at once consult a competent specialist, lest your negligence or indifference may result in permanent injury. Always have your children's eyes examined before sending them to school.

The late Mrs. Cuthbert made many friends here when visiting for two months with Mrs. Miller, three years ago. She had only been seriously ill for one week.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday morning at nine o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery.

The funeral of the late George Ferguson took place from the late residence, Concession Street, yesterday afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. R. Pogue officiating at the services.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. Thos. Starr, Harry Starr, Wm. Stenton, John Delaire, Jas. Johnston and Wm. Morey, and about ninety members of the Moulders' Union, followed the cortege to the grave.

SOCIAL EVENING AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Successful Gathering Under the Auspices of the A.Y.P.A.

A very pleasant gathering of parishioners attended the social given by the Young People's Association of St. John's church in the school room last night. The programme, which was gotten up by Mr. R. J. Devey included vocal and instrumental selections and recitations and every item received hearty applause from the audience.

The first item was an overture by Mr. Halpany's orchestra, which was rendered with great expression and sympathy. This orchestra, composed of Mr. and Mrs. Halpany and their two sons, has attained a high degree of proficiency through constant practice and plays only the higher class of music. Their effort was heartily encored and was responded to with a second selection. During the evening Mr. Halpany sang a comic song in his own inimitable way and had to respond to the call of the audience with another.

Mr. T. Woodworth, delighted those present with his two recitations and in this sphere is unexcelled in Peterborough. He is an elocutionist of the higher order and has an extensive repertoire to select from. His selections vary from grave to gay, and claim the attention of an audience from start to finish. Although Mr. Woodworth is a comparative stranger he has already a large circle of admirers who delight to listen to his entertaining sketches as was evidenced last night by the hearty applause accorded him.

Amongst other items was a delightful duet by Mr and Mrs Devey, which was well received. At the close of the programme refreshments were served by Coleman Bros. and a pleasant evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

Are your plants growing nicely? If not give them Royal Plant Food. For sale only at Mason's Floral Emporium, Water st. 3d

DIVORCE GRANTED

The Application Was Made on Grounds of Non Support

The Detroit papers contain the announcement that the courts had on January 21, granted a divorce in the action of Eleanor Poussette against Courthope Poussette on the grounds of non-support.

The Model Dairy

Corner of George and King streets, is a recent addition to the business interests of this city. The plant and equipment is thoroughly up to date and the most perfect sanitary appliences are employed.

The steam bottle washer and sterelizer was installed by W. A. Drummond & Co., of Toronto, and the bottles are filled by an automatic machine that is not only cleanly in itself, but prevents all possibility of contamination from outside sources.

Purity of milk in the first place, and care and cleanliness in transferring it from the farm to the home, are important points which are carefully looked after by the proprietor, Mr. John Harris.

THE GREATEST OF AMERICAN PLAYS

"Paid in Full"

Eugene Walter's great play of modern New York, "Paid in Full," holds an extraordinary place in dramatic criticism. It stands alone as the only play that has been universally praised by dramatic critics in every city where it has been seen. This fact establishes its exceptional power and worth ,and is apart from the evidence furnished by the three million persons who have seen it, far more than ever have witnessed any other play in a like time. Such unvarying tribute from dramatic critics as has been given to "Paid in Full" is unprecedented. Many plays have been generally commended, though against all of these a critic's pen now and then has dissented from popular oipnion. Not so with "Paid in Full." In New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, and all leading cities of this country, and equally in the smaller ones, wherever "Paid in Full" has been played, it has swept all dramatic writers to highest enthusiasm. Everyone has written it down as the greatest play of the age. A striking feature of this praise which emphasizes the play's tremendous appeal, and its genuine quality, is that it has been bestowed with corresponding warmth on all five of the companies appearing in "Paid in Full." This is a convincing proof that it is truly a great play. Alan Dale, the world-famed critic of the New York American, said—"The photographic power displayed in the characterization of the men and women in "Paid in Full" is the most commanding thing I have ever seen. It is a revelation, and Eugene Walter, the author, is to be congratulated for giving to the American stage so valuable a property." This famous play will be at the Grand Opera House next Saturday, January 28, matinee and evening, when it will be presented with a capable cast.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES

It is not often an opportunity occurs at your door to see the latest Parisian and New York styles in hair goods, yet such is the case, as Prof. Dorenwend of Toronto is visiting this town, and invites your inspection of these goods at his private apartments reserved at the Hotel.

These Hair Good styles, when properly adjusted protect and ornament the head, soften and beautify the expression of the face, and consequently tone up an aged appearance. Be sure and see them at the Oriental Hotel on Thursday, Jan. 26.

A QUAINT REFRESHING COMEDY

One of the Daintiest and Most Enjoyable Plays of the Season Here on Tuesday Next

It will be a rare opportunity which local theatregoers will have on Friday next, of seeing England's most distinguished and best comedian, Mr. Edward Terry in the most famous of all his impersonations. It is a matter of congratulation that Mr. Terry should have chosen "Sweet Lavender" from his repertoire for presentation here. The part of the eccentric hero is admirably calculated to show to the greatest possible advantage the quaint humor of this admirable actor. Mr. Terry's "Dick Phenyl" is inimitable, to hear this dear old hardup, briefless barrister tossing with "Clemmy my boy" for the one arm chair; to hear him talk of "our aunt" and assure his young friend that "Lavender loves us" that "the prospect of an alliance with us might set up cerebral irritation in any young woman" to laugh at his quaint antics, to find ones eyes fill with regret at his many lapses, and the heart of grand unselfishness, is delightful, refreshing and wholesome.

The seats go on sale to-morrow morning at the Box Office.

J. H. Macoun and the Government surveyors who had a thousand mile tramp through north-west Canadian wilds, are back in Ottawa.

DEATH OF H. LeBRUN, ONE OF THE MOST PROMINENT CITIZENS OF PETERBOROUGH

Passed Away Yesterday Afternoon After Prolonged Illness—Was Actively Identified With Athletics and a Member of License Board and City Trust Commission—Sketch of His Career.

The brief announcement in last night's Review that Mr. H. LeBrun had passed away yesterday afternoon, caused deep and widespread regret, for Mr. LeBrun was one of Peterborough's most useful and popular citizens. He had been ill for two years from dropsy, and a complication of other affections. In the last few weeks his illness became more pronounced, and his family and friends knew that his death was only a matter of time. However, as is always the case, when a prominent and good citizen is called from the activities of this life the community sincerely mourns his departure, and feels the poorer that he has gone. And Mr. LeBrun was a good citizen in the fullest sense of the term.

While Mr. LeBrun fully realised that the end was near, he took an active interest in his business affairs up to the last couple of hours before his death, and up to three o'clock talked and signed cheques. His death occurred at about a quarter to five o'clock. He was sixty-six years of age, and had been in business for himself for thirty-eight years.

SKETCH OF MR. LeBRUN'S LIFE.

Mr. LeBrun was born in the year 1845, in the village of Ste. Eustace, county of Two Mountains, Quebec, his father being a contractor in that village. When fifteen years of age Mr. LeBrun came to Peterborough and commenced clerking in the store of F. LeMay, merchant tailor, on George street, remaining with him ten years. He then became Mr. LeMay's partner for a year. Next he commenced business for himself in a store on George street, formerly occupied by T. Menzies, afterwards removing to his present location on the east side of George street, near Hunter street. Mr. LeBrun greatly increased his business during the last few years.

Mr LeBrun was appointed to the License Board of West Peterborough on the coming into power of the Whitney Government which position he held up to the end of 1910, when he resigned on account of ill health. His service on the board during his tenure of office was most agreeable to his fellow commissioners, and of much value to the city. His opinions were always sought for by the other members of the commission and his judgment always accepted. He was also a member of the City Trust Commission.

PROMINENT IN ATHLETICS

Mr LeBrun, who was a Catholic in religion, was prominent in Catholic fraternal societies, and was a member of the C.O.F., C.M.B.A., and Knights of Columbus.

He took a great interest in all legitimate athletics, especially lacrosse. He was one of the earliest lacrosse players of Peterborough, having played the game here forty years ago. When he retired from active participation in the national sport he still maintained a keen interest in it, and was president of the local club for many years. He also had the honor to be elected president of the C.L.A. one season, and this honor was further emphasised by the fact that his opponent in the contest was Joe Lally, of Cornwall, the celebrated lacrosse authority.

Mr LeBrun was also president of the Peterborough Hockey and Curling Clubs and took an active part in the latter game. He was an enthusiastic hunter and fisherman. He was a prominent member of the Lake Ketchecum Hunt Club, and always accompanied the club to the back country on their fall hunting expeditions. Among the most agreeable functions at Stoney Lake were the fish dinners Mr. LeBrun used to give at his cottage "Bellechase" at the opening of the season.

Mr LeBrun was married nineteen years ago at Watertown, N.Y., to Mrs. John Hackett, who survives him. There were no children by the marriage. Besides his widow there are bereaved by his death a step-daughter, two brothers and five sisters. The brothers are C. LeBrun, Toronto, and P. LeBrun, Montreal, and the sisters are Mesdames Charest, Cloutier, Gumrond, Larachelle and Roy.

FUNERAL TO-MORROW.

The funeral will be held from the late residence, Hunter and Park streets, to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock, and proceed to St. Peter's Cathedral, where requiem high mass will be sung. Interment will take place in St. Peter's cemetery.

The C.O.F., C.M.B.A., and K. of C. will be represented at the funeral by members of the societies. The pall-bearers will be H. Winch, R. Fair, James Lynch, Harry Phelan, N. DeLaplante and M. J. O'Brien.

AN APPRECIATION

Of The Late Harry LeBrun

We are apt to extol our Canadian winter as one of the finest seasons of the year, but its rigors exact a toll with unvarying regularity and almost remorselessly. Within the last few weeks several of our oldest citizens have felt of its rigors and passed, and there are others. And so just here some things may be said of the late Harry LeBrun that are deserved, and because there are mighty few men of whom the same things may be said so unreservedly. All his life a citizen of the town and city, identified with the business growth, he has been progressive, absolutely honest, unvaryingly fair in his business relations and a friend to his friends. Popular and helpful as a young man in all decent sport, his example was one that well might be followed by others.

Of all the men of the city, high or low, active or sedate, no one was respected and esteemed more so than Harry LeBrun. More than a general favorite, his life commanded respect and compelled deference from all, especially those who value uprightness, sincerity and straightforwardness. A man of his word and that word always in advance of a bond; kind, genial, helpful, a cheerful example of business probity and friendship. Hospitable, to a fault, his was an ever open house to his friends—and they were many. The largest possible charity he bestowed on the faults of others. This he could afford, for he had few faults of his own. The city will wait for years before it produces men that will earn the expressions of satisfaction that are uttered when men refer to Harry LeBrun.

Temperance Meeting

There will be a temperance gathering to-night in the Mark St. Methodist church, when Rev. J. R. Webb will give an address. Everyone is invited.

THE CHIMES

A handsome contribution of $25 has been received from A. H. Campbell, Esq., of Toronto. Mr. Campbell's father, the late A. H. Campbell, Esq., was church warden of St. John's when the present bell was purchased.

Mr. Campbell is now church warden of St. James' church cathedral, and a leader of the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

A kind donation has also been received from Mrs. E. Walter, formerly Miss B. Leech of Montreal.

The employes of the C.P.R. at the station freight sheds, etc., have clubbed together and sent in $9 through the agent, Mr. Dodd.

THE GRENADIER'S FEATURE NUMBER

Has Been Added to the Library of the 57th Band—New Bandsmen

A splendid rehearsal of the 57th band was held last night. The band made a special study of a selection of Russian Folk Songs and also a selection from the works of Charles Gounod. This last named selection was the feature number of the program of the Grenadier Guards at the Toronto Fair last year and is one of the most pretentious selections ever attempted by the 57th. It is considered one of the finest numbers that the band has in its library.

The committee instructed the bandmaster to augment the strength of the band by the addition of several new men. This addition will bring the band's membership to forty-five.

BILLY BREEN HAS MAN TO THROW ARTIE EDMUNDS

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Jan. 24.—Billie Breen, trainer of the Peterborough Hockey Club, has written to a local paper offering to produce a man to throw the renowned Artie Edmunds, the wrestler and boxer, twice in an hour.

When seen to-day by the Review, Billy would not disclose the name of this unknown, but stated that he was a man who would give Edmunds a hard tussle. In the event of an acceptance, the bout would be staged here, and feature an athletic program which would take in some fast boxing preliminaries.

Edmunds is at present demonstrating in new physical culture exercises at Eaton's.

MACAFEE'S GREAT WORK STOPPED THE OFFICE TEAM

Fast Mercantile League Game Tied up at End of Each Half

The C.G.E. Office team and Pillpounders broke even in a fast Mercantile League game at the rink last night, the great work of Macafee in the nets for the uptown seven being responsible for the result he stopping two lone shots just before time was called. Clancy had steamed away from centre ice, and when right in on the deck, sent a hot one, which was blocked, as was also a quick attempt on the rebound. It was a great finish to a well played contest, in which the electric boys had a slight margin. Clancy was their star man. For the Pillpounders, Ross, Halpin and White were prominent, but the performance of Macafee was a feature of their work.

The final count was 3—3 with the figures 1—1 at half time. Fred Heaslip handled the game well.

The teams:—

All is in readiness for the big struggle to-night between the locals and Trenton and it looks like a crowded house. The result means much this way. A win for the home seven will put them on an even footing with the visitors and a rosy chance for district honors. It will certainly be a great exhibition if everything breaks nicely for both teams. Lawson Whitehead will handle the ball and the players will line up as follows:

Y.M.C.A. SPORT

The athletic contest now being held among the members of the Collegiate class, is furnishing some good sport and is developing some good material. The event contested yesterday was the fence vault which resulted as follows: A. Gilbert, 5.4"; R. Laing, and C. Bartlett, 5ft., H. Hill, (W. Stewart, G. Reid, 4.5". The standing by points thus far follows: Gilbert Laing, Bartlett equal, 395, H. Hill, 185, the other men being pretty well bunched. The event for Friday will be the 220 yard potato race.

The members of the Intermediate class, who found it possible to get out to the slide last night had a most enjoyable time. The slide was in good shape, and everyone had a time refreshments being served at the building on their return.

The Intermediate Basketball team meet the senior leaders in a game of ball to-morrow night at 6.30. After which the Intermediates will be the guests of the seniors at tea.

There is a new Bowling League now forming, and members wishing to enter a team had better hand in their names at the office. Teams will be composed of three men, and a prize will be given each man on the winning team.

In the weekly spoon competition there was some great bowling last week, the first score set up was 193, the next best score 211, and it remained for W. Leader to carry off the spoon with a score of 220.

No Indoor Baseball

The double-header indoor baseball games, scheduled for to-night, are called off.

WRESTLING

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 23.—Hackenschmidt, the Russian wrestler, failed to throw three men in an hour here to-night. Hjalmar Lundin, the Swedish wrestler, stayed twenty minutes. Hackenschmidt threw his first opponent, Corrolus, the Greek, in four minutes and 13 seconds. Lundin he was unable to throw in the twenty minutes allotted. In this bout the Russian was on the defensive much of the time and on one occasion was thrown heavily to the mat. The third bout was easy, Auvary going down in five minutes and fifty seconds.

ORDEMAN A STICKER

Detroit, Jan. 23 — (Special.)—Henry Ordeman of Minneapolis defeated Stanislaus Zbysko, a Polish champion, here to-night in a handicap match, the Pole failing to fulfil his contract to throw Ordeman twice in ninety minutes. Instead of getting two falls the foreigner was lucky that he escaped being tossed. Ordeman being behind him more than two-thirds of the time and showing much greater speed and cleverness.

THE RING

Syracuse, Jan. 23 — Abe Attell, featherweight champion of the world, outpointed Billy Allen, featherweight champion of Canada, in a ten-round bout here to-night.

With the exception of a few rounds Allen did most of the leading, but his showing was marred by frequent attempts at covering. In the fourth round Attell injured his right hand by coming in contact with Allen's elbow.

Attell was not forced to extend himself in any of the rounds. Honors were even in the sixth, seventh and eigth rounds. In the last two rounds Attell quickened the pace though not letting himself out.

CURLING

PUCKLAND

Belleville's new pro team won from Port Hope last night by a score of 10—6.

With the defeat of Woodstock juniors by London last night the Ingersol seven took the leadership of the district. No. 9.

Since their game with the Pill Pounders, the Railroaders have received a large number of challenges from local sevens and an invitation from the C.P.R. team at Havelock for a game in that town.

The Toronto Star of yesterday has a cut of Melville Moore, formerly of the local intermediates and now working at rover for the senior O. H. A. Argonauts.

Emergency Goalkeeper Hand, who was pressed into service for Cobourg at Trenton Friday, is not only "handy" with his hands, but with his feet. Hand, who, by the way, is a baseball catcher, gave "some" exhibition of catching the flying disc with both hands, and displayed an excellent right whip in clearing into the corners. He was evidently getting into shape to catch sleepers off the bags next summer.

The executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club had a rather lengthy session last-night, when the team to play against Trenton was picked. Several of the members must have got chilled inside their footwear, while at the rink watching the practice and spoke accordingly. But Derocher will guard the nets, and here's a wee small bet, that the youth who played the star game at Cobourg, stopped more shots than went past him at Trenton, and has been out to practice at every notice, puts up the best performance of his career at the rink to-night.

"Bill" Stoddard is leaving Lindsay next Thursday, for the West, where he will take a hand in the mercantile game. Mr. Stoddard will be missed in the northern town, and well deservedly, as he has given a number of years service on the ice, and captained the Intermediate team which brought the championship to Lindsay in 1908. It will be a long time before the hockey game in Lindsay will turn out another player of his calibre, for he was no only a strong and good player but one who at all times conducted himself as a gentleman. His friends down the way will extend best wishes for a prosperous career in his new home.

WIT OF THE PARIS BAR

The centenary of the Paris bar, recently celebrated at the Palais de Justice, has recalled numerous anecdotes which are going the round of the press on the humor of the law courts. Amongst others, it is told how a well-known lawyer, Mr. Alen Royssau, was pleading a rather tiresome case, and noticing that the judges were paying no attention to him, said; "As the president is falling asleep I suspend my speech." But the judge had just woke up and cried; "And I suspend you from practice for six months;—"Well I suspend myself for ever and ever," and gathering up his brief and cap he left the court and never appeared again.

A Palais barrister, M. Clery, however, was more vigorous. Seeing that the president and the assessors were all asleep he stopped, and dealing a tremendous blow on the desk in front of him, that woke everybody up with a start, he cried; "Yesterday, at this same hour I was saying"—and the whole bunch rubbed their eyes and asked each other if they had really slept through twenty-four hours! The same counsel was pleading at Versailles on a cold day, and remarked that the judges were all turning more and more round towards a stove that gave out a welcome heat. "The tribunal behind which I have the honor of speaking" brought them all "right about face" at once. On another occasion the judge asked him to cut his speech short, as the court had made up its mind. Assuming the air of a childlike native M. Clery retorted; "Me right, you good judges, him innocent," and sat down.

Though not intended humorously the celebrated criminal advocate, Maitre Henri Robert, made a hit the other day when defending the matricide Wache de Roo. He produced an act of renunciation, signed by the prisoner, of all benefit from the will of the mother he had murdered, and added to the jury; "So if you acquit him he will go forth miserable and poor, perhaps to Madagascar, to repent of an act which he may have committed in a moment of thoughtlessness!" And the verdict of the jury was typical. They found that he had committed murder, but that he had not killed his mother, although the unfortunate lady was the only person who had been killed. This was in order to save the prisoner from ten years' penal servitude, which is the minimum penalty for parricide, whereas manslaughter with extenuating circumstances can be let off with mere confinement. France is beyond doubt the country where murder can be committed with the least fear of serious consequences, provided that any sentimental element can be introduced. In the case of Wache de Roo he cried and sobbed piteously during the whole proceedings, and swooned when being interrogated, but it was noticed that as soon as the sentence was passed he seemed to recover his self-possession altogether. It is not in theatres alone that the most excellent comedies are often to be seen.

QUEUE CUTTING CRAZE

A revolution in social custom of far reaching significance is now sweeping over China. This is the cutting off of the queues, says the New York Sun.

Starting with the radicals of the New China party, the docking of the queue was urged by them as the visible and necessary sign of an acceptance of new ideas. Patriotism demanded that the Chinaman should rid himself of all the customs of the dark ages, said the reformers, and there was no better evidence of emancipation from conservatism than the absence of the queue.

It was not more than three years ago that the New China party started the queueless crusade and so rapidly has the movement spread that before the end of last year a rescript from the dragon throne itself advised the wholesale cutting of the hair and the new half organised Tzucheng Yuan, or national Parliament, passed a measure commanding the removal of all queues.

This change is all the more significant in that it came from Chinese inspiration and not through foreign suggestion. Thirty and more years ago the foreign missionaries in China attempted to make headway against the practice of foot binding and their suggested innovation was at first bitterly resented. It was not until within the last ten or fifteen years that anti-foot binding societies composed of Chinese made any great headway against the evil, and now the reform is by no means general.

But so rapidly has the queue docking idea spread throughout all the lished in Hong-Kong estimates that in December alone over 40,000 Chinese in that city and its vicinity cut off their queues. A despatch from Pekin published in the North China Daily News in December says that all the officers in the imperial navy and in the army in the northern provinces have fallen in line with the reform, that the members of the Wai-wu-pu, or Board of Foreign Affairs, now appear queueless and that instructions will soon go out to all representatives in the diplomatic and consular services, ordering them to dispense with the appendage of darkness.

In December there were hair cutting festivals in Canton, Hong-Kong, Amoy and even in Manila, where on Christmas day over 1,000 Chinese underwent shearing. In Singapore, and other cities of the Straits Settlements, down in Batavia, throughout the cities of Japan and Corea the snip snip of the progressive shears has been sounding the knell of the old regime.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Canifton, Ont.—"I had been a great sufferer for five years. One doctor told me it was ulcers of the uterus and another told me it was a fibroid tumor. No one knows what I suffered. I would always be worse at certain periods, and never was regular, and the bearing-down pains were terrible. I was very ill in bed, and the doctor told me I would have to have an operation, and that I might die during the operation. I wrote to my sister about it and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Through personal experience I have found it the best medicine in the world for female troubles, for it has cured me, and I did not have to have the operation after all. The Compound also helped me while passing through Change of Life."—Mrs. LETITIA BLAIR, Canifton, Ontario.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to suffering women.

REV. MR. PEARSON AND TEMPERANCE

Hamilton Writer Refers to Former Peterborough Pastor

Jaques, in writing of Centenary Methodist church, Hamilton, in the Hamilton Herald, refers to a former Peterborough pastor, and his work here. Jaques says of Rev. E. A. Pearson;

The present pastor does not hesitate to openly express his opinion on the question of temperance, consequently each member of the congregation knows how "our pastor stands" on that subject. In one of the pews a copy of the Weekly Calendar for January, 1st, was seen; it was picked up and from its pages the following was taken:

> "The die will be cast to-morrow, Your vote for the reduction of six licenses may turn the scale. Be sure to give it. Give also a day, to help get out the different voters."
>
> "One day more—and then the goal is won!
>
> Oh, surely there can rise
> No evil chance in one short day
> To snatch away the prize!"
>
> "Drinking makes thinking impossible. Some day thinking will make drinking impossible."

Perhaps some readers may not fully endorse the above, but, true it is that every reader must admire Rev. E. A. Pearson for his candid and straightforward action in endeavoring to propagate the cause of temperance.

The pastor is a man who is firm in conviction—he is fully convinced that intemperance is a great evil, and [illegible] doing his share in the work necessary [illegible] remove the temptation. So likewise does he believe in looking after the men of the congregation, seeing to it that they are well grounded in the scriptures.

When Rev. E. A. Pearson was stationed at Peterborough he had a Bible class numbering two hundred, and the rev. gentleman also conducts a similar class, though not so many pupils, in this city. At no period in the world's history was there more necessity for men and women to become familiar with the contents of the Bible. The Tendencies of Modern Thought, as mentioned above, was a pertinent theme for discussion forty years ago—it is more pertinent to-day. Every member of a church should be able to meet all objections that confront them when in conversation with sceptics—they will be able to do so if the classes conducted by the pastor are attended—and they should be.

C.P.R. SURVEY AT BETHANY

Route of Proposed New Line is Staked Out

Bethany, Jan. 23.—The survey party which was here all last winter, has again put in an appearance, and have the route of the proposed new line all staked out from the edge of Milton Wetherilts' swamp on the northwest side to the big hill on the southeast end. An official of the C.P.R. was in the village this week and has under consideration the advisability of purchasing the residences occupied by Wm. McCartney, F. Hamilton and those of Messrs. H. J. Wake and Jeff Davy, which happen to come in the line of the survey. Two well known members of our village, in the persons of Wm. Brown and Wm. Byers, are enrolled as auxiliaries to the already efficient force of surveyors. It is an established fact that the road will be well under way of construction before the end of spring.

TO SUPPRESS LIQUOR TRAFFIC IN PETERBOROUGH COUNTY

That is the Object of Peterborough County Temperance Alliance, Which Was Organized Yesterday at Y.M.C.A. — Executive Committee Includes Representatives From Many Townships.

A temperance movement was commenced yesterday afternoon at a meeting held in the Y. M. C. A. parlors, the objects of which are summed up in the following resolution adopted by the meeting.

That an organization be formed to be known as the Peterboro County Temperance Alliance. The object of the Alliance shall be to unite the Churches and all moral reform agencies in Peterboro County in their practical effort to secure the greatest present repression and the speediest ultimate suppression of the beveraged liquor traffic, and that officers of the Alliance shall consist of a President, Hon. President and the Vice-President, one of whom shall be the County President of the W. C. T. U. and Sec.-Treasurer, and the Hon. President to be a member of the Executive of the Provincial Alliance having headquarters in Toronto.

The above might be termed the policy of the new movement, and if the enthusiasm shown at the meeting is any index to its success, the results will be of the widest significance in the local option fight in the province.

The chairman, H. B. Cowan, made a few introductory remarks acquainting the gathering with the nature of the meeting. During the proceedings any one present who wished to speak was given an opportunity to do so, and the discussion brought forth many suggestions.

LICENSES WILL BE REDUCED

F. W. Duggan, Toronto, field secretary of the Dominion, stated that between 65 and 80 licenses will be cut off this year, and that at least sixty-five places were now engaged in an educational campaign for the purpose of submitting local option to municipalities in 1912. The work was so systematically arranged that where one municipality appealed against local option, all the neighboring municipalities that had it, would have influence in the matter.

BI-LINGUALISM

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Bishop Fallon would exercise the strength of a mere majority in the province in order to put down bi-lingualism in our schools; which means that the "right" to the use of the French language, such as allowed by the treaty of Paris and enjoyed in the province of Quebec and in the federal parliament at Ottawa is to be denied the French in Ontario. And thus to Bishop Fallon belongs the credit of having begun anew the conquest of the French. Now, why is this action of the bishop permissible, if not admissable? Simply because the welfare of the state demands it. The principle underlying this action should be laid to heart in Peterborough, where special classes seem to think it hard that they, like the French, have not rights because of their name. It is this "special" business that keeps the people apart. Driving in a wedge of any kind, in the long run, proves dangerous and sometimes provokes reprisals that on the face of them do not look at all like liberty. It is very dangerous business for a special legion with a captain leading on to seek to act as if it were not part of the general army of the State, but are having special general rights of its own. It leads to misunderstanding and heartburnings. The cause is not far to seek. It must always be borne in mind that discrimination in favor of a people as a body applies also discrimination against them sometimes. All rules, logically, must work both ways.

It is in this way that the fallacy of calling for positions or "equal rights" for any one class exposes itself. That everybody will be satisfied under any circumstances, however, or that all will be absolutely fairly dealt with, is too much to expect. All that is possible is for the people to do their best, and regardless of class. If they will not do what is fair there is no appeal and we must WAIT for the return of reason and a sense of justice. But to seek to break up public opinion and rend asunder the civil union of the people by force may be good diplomacy, but it is mighty poor patriotism or common sense.

Yours,

CIVIS.

RAILWAY FRANCHISES

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I see that the Brantford council has passed a by-law to compel its street railway to extend its line before the 1st of April, or forfeit its franchise. I would ask what has our council done in the past, or what is the present council going to do to compel our street railway to live up to its agreement?

It appears that though our council is sworn to protect its constituents, it has been helping the street railway to violate its obligations in the most bare-faced manner. I think the press is remiss in not probing this matter and insisting upon the rights of the people being respected after the manner of the Brantford council.

Yours, etc.,

FAIR PLAY.

Peterborough, Jan. 24, 1911.

Warning to Minors

Printed cards warning minors that prosecution proceedings will be taken against them, for cases of loitering or attempts to procure liquor, have been placed in the bars of several local hotels.

By a vote of 138 to 78, McGill undergraduates will cut out liquor from the arts dinner, February 15.

CAVAN AND BETHANY

Special to the Review.

Bethany, Jan. 23.—The failure of the Farmers' Bank is the subject of much conversation around this locality, owing to many of Bethany's inhabitants having all, or the greater part of their savings invested in the now defunct institution. There is not very much hope for many of them, who put from fifty up to two thousand or more dollars into what seemed to them and others apparently a safe concern.

A most enjoyable evening was spent last Wednesday, when thirty-two persons attended a dance held at the home of Mr. Wm. Gillespie. Mr. Gillespie is leaving us in the near future, having rented the farm of Mr. Best, Peterborough.

Miss Sarah McMullen is away visiting her brother, the Rev. Jas. McMullen, Frankford. On her way home she will make a call on Dr. and Mrs. Irwin, of Cobourg. It will be remembered that Mrs. Dr. Irwin was formerly Miss Beer, of this village.

Mr. Douglas Driver, Millbrook, was here Sunday staying at his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Driver.

A grand skating carnival will be held Tuesday, January 24th, on the rink. Prizes will be given by some of our most prominent citizens. For a more descriptive account see next week's issue.

CAVAN NOTES

The best carnival of the season was held on the rink last Tuesday, 20th, and proved a great success, which reflects great credit upon Messrs. Melville Carr and Sid Hutchison for the very able management displayed throughout the whole night's programme. The rink was in excellent condition. The Millbrook band again excelled themselves, under the able leadership of George Duncan. A large number of skaters from the southern city accompanied the band, while a large contingent from Bethany and Peterborough helped swell the throng. The gate receipts amounted to 20 dollars.

Jas. Kennedy, Esq., with Miss E. and Miss Annie Kennedy, spent Monday evening with his brother, Mr. A. B. Kennedy.

Miss Elva Elliot, Ida, spent the forepart of last week with Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Kennedy.

Mr. James Kennedy was at Peterborough Tuesday attending the ice races, as was also Norman McGill.

We are extremely sorry to hear that the Rev. J. N. Clarry is suffering from a sore throat and a severe attack of la grippe and was unable to take charge of the circuit of our neighboring village of Bethany, as was planned Sunday last.

A joint meeting of the Ladies' Aid and Trustee Board of the Methodist church met last Thursday at the home of Mr. Harry Staples, but as to what occurred, we are at present left in the dark, but we have a suspicion that it has to do with the financial department of the above church.

Miss Elizabeth Howell and Miss Mae Needham were guests of their uncle, John Gardiner, Esq. Sunday last.

LAKEFIELD NEWS

Lakefield, Jan. 23.—Mr. R. H. Alfords has purchased Mr. Jas. Powers' lot on Bridge street.

Mr. and Mrs. James Burge and Master Warden, of Sintaluta, Sask., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Kidd.

The Misses Bella and Carry Newton, of Indian Head, Sask., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Kidd.

The Misses Bella and Carry Newton, of Indian Head, Sask., are the guests of Miss B. Newton.

Mr. Charles Waldin has disposed of his butcher business to Messrs. Fred and Charles R. Crawford, who will conduct the business under the name of Crawford Brothers.

After an illness of only a few days Mr. C. D. Crawford passed away at his home this morning.

We are pleased to know that Mr. Wm. Edwards, who has been sick with the grip for the past two weeks, is able to be round again.

TWO ARE KILLED.

Two Freight Trains Collide on G.T.R. Near Kingston.

Kingston, Jan. 24.—Two men lost their lives, another being injured, in one of the worst wrecks which ever occurred in this vicinity. The scene was on the Grand Trunk, near Collins Bay, seven miles from Kingston, at two o'clock yesterday morning. Two freights figured in the smash. The dead are William Dennis, engineer, and Thomas McDermott, fireman, both from Belleville. William Cunningham, brakeman, of Gananoque, was badly injured, his right arm being amputated upon his arrival at the hospital.

The collision was a rear-end one. The train run into was a special, which became stalled at Lemmon's Cut. Conductor Manson Smith told the brakeman to flag the train following, but before he got many yards from the caboose the other train was upon him, running at the rate of about 30 miles an hour. The engine struck the caboose train in front and smashed it to kindling wood.

Dennis and McDermott, who had not time to jump, were pinned in the wreckage, but managed to crawl out.

Fireman McDermott was found in the cab standing on his head. His body was not mutilated. The body of William Dennis was not found until about noon. It was burnt beyond recognition. His hand was grasping the reverse lever.

Strangled in Berth.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Jan. 24.—A mystery surrounding the death of a man identified yesterday as L. R. Lowe of Cannington, Ont., has developed here. He was apparently strangled by some one unknown last Thursday night on the Winnipeg flyer, and the body robbed. The dead man was at first supposed to be Rodney Lewis, as the return portion of a ticket in this name was found in a pocket. Then a man who had talked with him in St. Paul said he had told him his name was Theodore Hymesdorth of Winnipeg. Later, the authorities declared the dead man was Lowe of Cannington.

Brockville Boy Missing.

Brockville, Jan. 24.—J. Leslie Sheridan, aged 22, a Brockville boy, filling the position of assistant agent on the New York Central Railway at Morristown, across the river from here, has been missing since Sunday night. He spent the day in Brockville, and between nine and ten o'clock left here to skate to the other side. The channel in the river is open in several places, and the belief grows that he went into open water and was drowned. Two men on the shore heard cries for help coming from the direction of the river shortly after the hour Sheridan is said to have left Brockville.

Only Four Inspectors.

Winnipeg, Jan. 24.—Investigation by the civil commission, which is enquiring into the causes of recent fires and studying the work of the brigade, brought out the information that only four men are employed by the city to inspect the wiring of buildings. When it is considered that structures to the value of $15,000,000 were erected in 1910 alone, the force seems ridiculously small. The same shortage of staff applies to the building department.

Dropped Dead.

Guelph, Jan. 24.—Frank Dowler, for 25 years one of the best known drygoods merchants of Guelph, and only recently retired from business, dropped dead at his residence last evening. He was in his usual good health, and had just come in from a drive, when in a severe fit of coughing he ruptured a blood vessel and expired immediately. He leaves a widow and family of grown-up daughters.

Eleven Killed In Wales.

Cardiff, Wales, Jan. 24.—Eleven persons were killed and 43 others injured, seven of them fatally, when a passenger train crashed into the rear of a freight train at Hopletinstown, near Pontypridd, yesterday.

The freight train was standing still on the tracks when the passenger train, going at a terrific rate of speed, dashed into the rear car. The victims were crushed to death.

The Cartridge Exploded.

Rockland, Jan. 24.—A peculiar and very sad accident occurred at the home of Thomas York, when his youngest son, had the end of the first finger of his right hand and the thumb of his left hand blown off. At the time he was picking a revolver cartridge to get the lead out so that he might use the shell for his lead pencil. The boy lit a match to look inside, when it exploded. The palm of his left hand and his forehead are badly burned.

More Massacres.

Athens, Jan. 24.—A recrudescence of the anti-Christian agitation in Adna, a villayet of Asiatic Turkey, is feared. The Turks are believed to be preparing for fresh massacres of Armenians, many of whose houses are marked with a red cross and the inscription "readth." The Government has asked that troops be sent to Adna to keep order, as the garrison there is not to be relied upon.

Citizens Have Rights.

Berlin, Jan. 24.—At the second trial yesterday of men accused of taking part in the strike riots in the Moabit quarter, the presiding judge took occasion to say that citizens were justified in resisting police officers who exceeded their authority.

A Fish Out of Water.

Many people think that fish when taken out of the water die because air has a fatal effect on them. The real reason, however, is that their delicate gill filaments or membranes become dry and stick together, so that no air can pass between them. Thus they lose the power to imbibe necessary oxygen, and the circulation of their blood stops. The painful gasping of a fish out of water is nature's effort to free the passage through the filaments.

HARDWARE NOTES

PETERBOROUGH CORR. TO HARDWARE AND METAL

Retail hardware business is seasonquiet just now, but all the dealers report that the year 1910 was the best in their history. Manufacturers in the hardware line are either extending their plants or preparing to do so, and the outlook is very encouraging for next season.

The Peterborough Hardware Co., in their retail store windows, are this week making a good display of lumbering tools and blacksmiths' supplies. They have a large business in these lines among the lumbering and mining camps of the adjacent counties.

B. F. Ackerman & Son, harness manufacturers, have about doubled their manufacturing capacity. Their new harness room and long straw collar shop are now practically ready. They are preparing to heartily welcome the visiting dealers at their plant during the convention.

Adam Hall is now operating his new stove foundry. His plumbing and tinsmithing departments are still being carried on at his George street store, but this will also be moved to the new premises after February 1st.

The Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Co. are greatly extending their plant and adding some new lines. They are working hard to get things in shape for the convention, so that the hardwaremen will have an opportunity of seeing Peterborough locks in course of manufacture.

J. J. Turner & Sons have made arrangements to enlarge their plant as soon as the building season opens.

Wm. Sores, of New York, was arrested at Montreal on complaint of obtaining $20,000 in goods from New York merchants by alleged fraud.

Mrs. Leslie Hunter was awarded $3,000 damages against the Hamilton Bridge and Steel Company for the death of her husband.

LIVERY OUTFIT BADLY BATTERED

In a Midnight Runaway—No One Injured—Vehicle a Complete Wreck

A runaway occurred last evening shortly after twelve o'clock with rather destructive results to an outfit belonging to a local livery. It appears that the hack was at the C.P.R. station last night at the midnight train and leaving the station shortly afterwards in charge of the driver the horses took fright and made for the stables of the livery. The hack upset and was battered into almost a complete wreck, especially the upper section of it, which was broken almost beyond repair. It is now in the repair shop. As far as is known nobody was injured.

Martin, of the waterworks department, takes strong exception to the statement in a local paper that there were two feet of water in the cellar of a George street merchant, owing to the flushing of a waterworks pipe. TWO MORE MEN FOR LOCAL POLICE FORCE

P. C. Newhall Will do Plain Clothes Duty — P. C. Adams to be Sergeant --Two Applications

At a meeting of the police commissioners held yesterday afternoon, it was decided to add two officers to the police force of the city, the salary to be $500 per annum. It was further decided that P. C. Newhall do plain clothes duty at a salary of $750 and that P. C. Adams be sergeant of the force at $825 a year, both increases to date from the first of this year.

Chief Thompson recommended in his recent annual report, that the force be augmented by the addition of four men, and that the department be relieved of sanitary inspections. This latter question was discussed but no action taken.

The secretary was authorized to advertise in the local daily papers for applications as police officers.

There were present at the meeting, Judge Huycke, chairman; Mayor Morrow, Magistrate Dumble and Chief Thompson.

Two applications for positions on the force from S. Warner and A. W. Beal were received.

THOUGHT HE HAD A RIGHT BUT IT COST HIM $10

A blacklister who transgressed last Saturday, was fined $10 with $3.75 costs, at the police court this morning. Asked why he deliberately went against the law that was trying to help him the lister answered that he went and got a glass of beer as he thought he had a right to so long as he had the money to purchase it. His is a case of a man with a wife and family of five children and who could make $18 weekly were he to leave liquor alone and work steadily.

FINED $20.00.

Another prohibited one against whom two charges stood, pending judgment was fined $10 for each offence.

REEVE COBEN IS WARDEN

COUNTY COUNCIL IN SESSION.

Reeve Coben of Galway and Cavendish, was the unanimous choice for the office of warden by the Peterborough County Council of 1911, which met for the first session of the year this morning.

The motion was made by Messrs. Darling and Breault, and carried unanimously.

Warden Coben has given valuable service to the council.

The newly elected warden took the oath of office and in his address to the council thanked the members for the honor done him and the townships which he represented. He referred to the fact that with but one exception the old council was re-elected. This was, he held, a sign of the appreciation of their work in the past. He feelingly referred to the absence of Deputy Reeve W. B. Stewart, of Otonabee, through illness, and expressed the wish that he would soon be able to take his seat in the council.

Mr Doherty was appointed High school trustee for Norwood and Messrs Casement, of Lakefield, and Calder, of Norwood, were reappointed auditors.

A committee was appointed to strike the standing committees for the year, and their report will be presented at the morning session to-morrow.

In resuming the afternoon session Inspector Lees read his report for the district which he represented.

THE UNITY OF THE HUMAN RACE

Rev. Dr. Symonds Preaching in Montreal on That Topic

Montreal Star.

"This idea of oneness is a grand one and, although we may feel in our faithlessness that the little we can do to aid in its protection is not worth doing, the very thought of the unity of the church is one that will uplift the human race.

"If you do something towards the realization of this ideal you will no longer be merely a citizen of Montreal—although you will still be a citizen of Montreal and all the better one for it—no longer only a citizen of the Dominion of Canada or even of the British Empire; you will not even be a member of the Anglican Church but a citizen of the kingdom of God, a member of the body of Christ."

Such was the eloquent termination of the first of two sermons on "The Outlook for Unity," preached by the Rev. Dr. Symonds in Christ Church Cathedral last evening.

The preacher pointed out how fully the sense of oneness of the human race had been felt in every age by the theologians and philosophers such as Seneca and St. Paul.

James McCoy, aged 50, farmer, of Madoc Township, had a foot crushed by a falling tree so severely that it had to be amputated.

DEPARTURE IS MUCH REGRETTED

Mr. and Mrs Mark Remembered by Havelock Friends

Mr and Mrs. James Marks are leaving Havelock, and their many friends recently expressed their esteem in a tangible way by a presentation, expressing their great regrets at the separation. The letter accompanying was—

Havelock, Jan 20, 1911.

To Mr and Mrs. Jas. Marks.

Dear Friends,—It is with feelings of sincere regret that your many friends of Havelock have learned that, owing to your work, you find it necessary to leave our village, and as a consequence sever your connection with our church and those helpful institutions with which you have been for some years identified.

As we gather here this evening, memories of the many happy and profitable meetings and associations we have spent together come up fresh before us and while we hope that the change you are about to make may be for you and your family most advantageous, yet we cannot think of such a move without feeling that your presence will be greatly missed from the different organizations connected with our church. You may rest assured that you will be followed to your city home by the sincerest wishes and earnest prayers of your many warm friends of this place where you have spent so many enjoyable years. You will please accept these presents as slight tokens of the esteem in which you are held by your Havelock friends. We trust that we may all live so that when our meetings and partings are over here we may all meet in the better land.

Signed on behalf of your friends,
MR. F. HAIG,
MR. G. BUCHANAN.

KEPT IT DOWN

Hand Pumping Saved the Poor Trencher

A funny little scene was enacted this morning on Hunter street, when a workman's comfort was dependent upon the celerity with which a pump belonging to the waterworks department was operated. In front of the Sun Life office was a trench leading to a broken water main. In this was some eight or ten inches of water, and more coming. The water was being pumped out by hand. Every now and then, whether on account of the frost or other reason the suction of the pump ceased and the water quickly rose. The man in the trench wearing long rubber boots, would call "Pump, you fellows pump, the water is getting to the top of my boots!" Quick work at the pump fortunately kept the water to within half an inch below the top of the boots, until it was under full control and the trench emptied.

ANARCHISTS PLOT AGAINST KING AND QUEEN DISCOVERED

Plan to Make Attempt on Their Lives in Procession to Opening of Parliament is Rumored.

Special to the Review.

London, Jan. 25.—The detectives of Scotland Yard are rounding up all the anarchists in London preparatory to the opening of Parliament. Already twenty have been arrested, some of them the most desperate characters of the continent. The recent affair in which Hon. Hon. Winston Churchill figured so prominently, has resulted in orders being given to the police to watch the anarchists closely, and in every case where there is good ground to make arrests. The home offices has decided that since the revolutionaries are of such desperate character, the lives of the King and Queen are not safe with London housing them, and certainly the lives of the kings and queens, emperors and empresses, and other royalty who will be at the coronation, will be in danger if the bomb-throwers and plotters are not eliminated before the big event. Indeed, there is a well founded rumor around London that the police have already discovered a plot against the lives of King George and Queen Mary, the attempt to be made during the procession to the opening of Parliament in February. The policy which has been pursued of allowing England to be made the haven and refuge of the oppressed of all lands, has formed a big nest of the desperate plotters, and every effort of the police will be bent toward the destruction of the colony. The policy of toleration, with surveillance, is gone forever.

DIDN'T WANT TO KILL HIM

Says Negro Arrested Here for Attempted Murder

Fred Brown Held in Montreal Gives His Version of the Affray

Montreal Star.

"I did not shoot to kill. I did not shoot to kill," comes every little while from the lips of Fred Brown, who is held by the police awaiting the result of the bullet wound sustained by Robert Ford.

Last evening he got back from his vain attempt to flee the consequences of his act, and his first words when he stepped off the train were, "Is Ford alive." He was weighed down with the possible consequences of his act.

When he was told that Ford had a good chance of recovery he heaved a deep sigh and seemed greatly relieved. Later when he heard this morning's favorable report he brightened and even smiled at the pleasantries of the police as they went about their daily duties.

He pleaded not guilty to the charge of attempted murder this morning.

BROWN'S OWN STORY.

With every show of emotion on his face and frequently expressing his regret at the incident, Brown to-day told of the shooting to a representative of the Star.

"I was on the buffet car on the train which brought the Arliss Company to Montreal to the Princess Theatre," he said, "Also I expected to take out the Sweet Sixteen Company, which was at His Majesty's Theatre last week.

"One of the colored ladies with the Arliss Company, her name was Ellen Terry Winter, could not stay at the Windsor Hotel with the other people, so I got a place for her on St. Antoine street. I was on the way to the Windsor Hotel to get her and take her there when I met Ford. I have known him for a long time. He does not work much and the colored men who work have been kind to him.

"He came up to me and demanded five dollars which he claimed I owed him. I told him that I did not owe him a cent. He insisted on having money. I told him that all I had was fifty-five dollars, which belonged to the railway company, but if he waited till I had the colored lady whom I met on the train safe in her boarding house I would get him a dollar and a half.

"This he refused, and putting his hand in his hip pocket said 'you have money. Give it to me or I will take it.' I told him it was the company's money and he drew his hand from his I saw something flash. I can't tell whether it was a revolver or a razor or what it was. I drew my revolver and fired.

DID NOT SHOOT TO KILL.

"I did not shoot to kill. Oh, no, sir, believe me. I did not intend to kill anybody. But I saw the flash of something bright and was afraid of my life, and fired.

"I ran up Windsor street and into the station. There I sat down on the track with my face in my hands. I had seen Ford stagger and did not know how bad he was hurt. I did not shoot to kill. How long I sat there I do not know. Then I saw a train. So help me I did not know in my great trouble whether it was going in or out, but I jumped on and told the conductor I had been in a fight and wanted to go home to Albany. I bought a ticket for Toronto, but they took me off at Peterborough. I did not shoot to kill. Oh, I do hope Ford does not die."

Further proceedings in the case await developments at the hospital.

THE HIGH COURT JUDGESHIP

The Ottawa Citizen says:—It is understood in government circles to be very probable that the vacancy on the high court bench caused by the death of Judge McMahon, will be filled by the appointment of Judge C. D. MacCauley, of Dawson, formerly of Belleville. There are three judges in Dawson now but the work is scarcely heavy enough for one, and it is said that for this reason one of them is slated for the high court bench. The names of Messrs. O'Connell, of Peterborough, Brady, Lees and O'Donahue, of Toronto, and McEvoy for the vacancy and there are also French-Canadian aspirations but it is considered practically certain that they are all out of the running. Judge MacCauley is a member of the Ontario bar and is now in Ottawa on a visit east.

FIRE IN AIR

Copenhagen, Jan. 24.—Svedens, the Danish aviator, while flying yesterday in a Voisin aeroplane, discovered while at a considerable height, that his machine was on fire. The first intimation he had of the fact was when the spectators shouted at him. He realized that something was wrong, and looking around saw that the flames were bursting from the framework of the aeroplane. Descending as quickly as possible, he reached the earth just in time to avoid a serious disaster. The machine was destroyed.

SLEEPER TARIFF IS APPROVED

Railway Commission Endorses the Cut Rate Scale.

Montreal, Jan. 25.—The Railway Commissioners yesterday morning gave their formal approval of the new sleeping and parlor car tariffs, which will go into effect on the 15th of February. As pointed out by Chairman Mabee, the new tariffs will make a general reduction in Pullman car rates, in spite of the fact that the rates west of Calgary will be higher by two mills per mile than in the eastern sections of Canada.

The new tariffs, Judge Mabee said, were the first effort to put the sleeping and parlor car rates on a scientific mileage basis.

East of Calgary, 6 mills per mile would be charged for sleeping car berths, with a 20 per cent. discount on the upper berths. In the case of parlor cars, 5 mills per mile will be the charge.

West of Calgary sleeping car rates will be computed on the basis of 3 mills per mile, with a 20 per cent. discount on uppers. The railway companies explained the difference by saying it costs more to haul the cars through the mountains. The parlor car rate will be two-thirds of a cent per mile.

Speech From Throne Indicates That Money Will Be Spent on Technical Education and Agricultural Improvement—Opening of Third Session Is a Brilliant Affair, Although Handicapped by Recent Fire.

Toronto, Jan. 25.—Once more the legislative mill is at work grinding out government for the greatest of British provinces. The session opened yesterday in almost the usual manner. There was a disturbing element in the air owing to the conflagration of the year before last, which still curtails the accommodation of the Government officials. It is hoped, however, to have the building ready before the next general election. There is nothing like being sanguine.

As a result of the fire there are no Speaker's apartments, and the usual entertainment and reception could not be extended to the great company of ladies assembled. There was no ice-cream and no tea and no cake—nothing, in fact, to stay the failing energies of those in attendance.

Bishop Sweeny was early on hand and Col. Sweeny came about the same time, and they had a chat while the ladies kept coming in. Women take full advantage of such chance as they do get to sit in the Legislature. At 2 o'clock the chamber was half filled.

Ex-Speaker Charlton came in and shook hands with Dr. Smellie. J. K. Brewster, G.C., established himself among the ladies in the opposition benches. The sergeant-at-arms, who has been doing it for two generations of ordinary men, and twelve of politicians, showed the way about.

It was 2.52 when the guard announced the arrival of his honor. Three minutes later Sir James Whitney entered with Mrs. Gibson on his arm, followed by her two daughters. The ladies all rose. The men had no seats to arise from. The costume display was scarcely so brilliant as usual, the absence of the reception customary to the proceedings perhaps accounting for this. Ermine was the only wear, and estimates were in circulation as to the number of defunct felines necessary to compose an ermine robe.

Promptly at three his honor entered, preceded by the military staff. They appeared to have some indecision which side of the table to attack, but divided their forces and got into position.

After the ceremonial, the number of the elect was completed by the introduction by Sir James and Capt. Machin, of John Ransome Howitt, the new member for South Wellington. Real business will be done at three o'clock this afternoon.

Sir James Whitney met J. R. Howitt, at the Bar of the House, and escorted the new legislator to the foot of the throne, where he was welcomed by Mr. Speaker and invited to take his seat.

The Prime Minister introduced the usual statutory notices for the appointment of the statutory standing committees and the administration of acts of office to justices of the peace.

The speech from the throne was, in part:

The speech from the throne referred to the death of the late King in touching terms and paid tribute to his successor, King George.

Plans are being prepared, the speech continued, by the architect of the Department of Public Works for a new residence for the Lieutenant-Governor, which will be suitable for all state functions and have an architectural character in keeping with the importance of the province.

FORTUNES FOR LANDLORDS

Canada Paying Too High for Buildings in Ottawa.

Richard Blain Shows That Rate is 18 Per Cent.

Ottawa, Jan. 25.—Imagine Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. William Pugsley excelling each other in the art of self-effacement. Such was the treat the House of Commons enjoyed yesterday afternoon.

W. M. German (Welland) had asked Hon. George P. Graham what truth there was in the report that the sum of $3,000,000 would be placed in the supplementary estimates as provision for commencing the Georgian Bay Canal. "As far as I know, no such appropriation has been discussed by council," was the evasive reply of the Minister of Railways, "and as it is not in my Department I would not have any knowledge whether the head of the Department which it would be under, has it in mind to bring in any appropriation. Personally, I would not be disappointed if both the Georgian Bay and Welland Canals were constructed."

The Premier remarked that his hon. friend would know all about it when the estimates were brought down.

Dr. F. L. Schaffner (Souris) drew the attention of the House to an article appearing in a Toronto paper that Sir Wilfrid had received a $100 Farmers' Bank note as a souvenir, in reply to which the Premier laid the following correspondence on the table:

Toronto, Jan. 1, 1907.

To the Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, K.C.M.G., Ottawa:

My Dear Sir Wilfrid—I take great pleasure in enclosing you the first $25 bill ever issued by any bank in Canada.

Please do us the favor of accepting this bill as a souvenir, with the compliments of the Farmers' Bank of Canada. Yours very truly,

W. R. Travers,
General Manager.

Ottawa, January, 1907.

Dear Mr. Travers,—I have your very kind favor of the 1st instant, and I feel very much flattered by the honor which has been done me by your institution.

I accept the souvenir which you have enclosed with the greatest pleasure, and you will add to your kindness if you will present my grateful appreciation to the members of your board.

Believe me, dear Mr. Travers, yours very sincerely.

Wilfrid Laurier.

Beyond reading the correspondence, Sir Wilfrid did not add a word of explanation, and resumed his seat amid Liberal applause.

Adam B. Crosby complained of the absence of Sir Frederick Borden, who is attending a bye-election campaign in Nova Scotia.

Replying in point, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that he had no hesitation in informing his hon frend that he was aware of the fact that Sir Frederick was in Nova Scotia; that he had consulted him before going there, and intimated that an election was on.

"My colleague is not only a member of this House, but I understand he is an elector in the County of Kings, Nova Scotia, and at the present time he is exercising his duty as a citizen, and for that nobody can find fault with him."

In reply to a question by Mr. Middleboro, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that the Government had been advised of the intention of the Japanese Government to denounce the existing trade agreement with Great Britain, and to make a new treaty. Canada had been asked whether she desired to become a party to the new treaty.

In reply to a question by R. L. Borden, the Premier said that he had received a telegram from Mr. Fielding, stating that the Finance Minister would arrive in Ottawa on Wednesday, and that the result of trade negotiations at Washington would be presented to Parliament on Thursday.

On the motion to go into committee of supply, the House of Commons was thrown into a prolonged discussion yesterday by an amendment introduced by Richard Blain (Peel), that "the action of the Government in renting certain building in the City of Ottawa at prices which net the owners from 15 to 18 per cent. on the cost of their property, is unbusinesslike, indefensible and merits the censure of this House."

The debate for the first part was a repetition of a previous year's discussion, but as the talk extended late into the evening, it became apparent that the Opposition was determined to thresh the whole matter out, and as fresh speakers were continually put forward, a decision was not reached till half an hour after midnight. The motion was voted down. The vote stood yeas 61, nays 104, Government majority 43. A. Gilbert (Drummondville and Arthabaska) voted with the Government.

Paris, Jan. 25.—There is a story circulated here which is arousing considerable interest. It is that the Pope may come to France during the Italian jubilee celebration, on account of the offensive attitude of Italian Freemasons. The Pope so seldom leaves the vatican that such a move would be regarded as extraordinary, and the story is not regarded as being a probable happening.

18 DEATHS FROM BUCOLIC PLAGUE

Pekin, China, Jan. 25.—Eighteen deaths have taken place in Pekin as a result of the bucolic plague in the last few days and the situation is alarming. The legation quarter has been segregated, and the foreigners have so far escaped the deadly disease. The Chinese officials have permitted Japanese physicians to assume control of the sanitary measures, and experts are at work trying to check the spread of the plague. The epidemic has a terrible hold, and is spreading rapidly through Manchuria. Much money is being spent in disinfecting, and in other sanitary measures, and it may be necessary for the foreigners to leave, to ensure their safety.

POLICE NOT TO BLAME

Toronto Police Commissioners Charge Crown Attorney Corley.

The Inquiry Into Farmers' Bank Warrants Affair.

Toronto, Jan. 25.—If Magistrate Denison and Judge Winchester are right in their contention, the responsibility for the delay in the issue of warrants against Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, W. J. Lindsay and George Wishart, charging them with various crimes in connection with the Farmers' Bank collapse, must rest with Crown Attorney Corley and Attorney-General Foy.

These two gentlemen, sitting as the board of police commissioners yesterday afternoon, while Mayor Geary was attending the opening of the Legislature, passed a resolution declaring that no blame could rest upon any police officer either for this delay of the failure to lay charges of extraditable offences against any or all of them, if grounds for such charges exists.

Chief Grasett, secretary of the board, said after the meeting: "What the board says is that the police have no power to take out a warrant in important cases without the consent of the crown attorney, and, when such warrants being issued, under the Legislature's orders in council, transmitted to the police through the crown attorney, the police have no power to seek the extradition of any fugitive from a foreign country without the consent of the Attorney-General's Department."

This puts the whole matter and the responsibility for any action or absence of action in the matter, up to the city crown attorney and the Attorney-General's Department.

Speaking of this feature of the situation, Crown Attorney J. Seymour Corley says that he has never issued any order to the police court clerks that they must not issue warrants to the police without his consent.

When a doctor was arrested upon a second charge of performing a criminal operation a short time ago, Mr. Corley did object in the police court to the charge being laid when he had not been consulted, and shortly afterward one of the police court clerks did refuse to issue a warrant without the crown attorney's authorization.

Mr. Corley says that his position is that he should be consulted before any important charge is laid.

It is understood that information will be laid and a summons taken out charging a prominent and wealthy citizen with illegally obtaining money from the bank, and that this will be done within the next few days. The offence has to do with illegal dealings with the bank's currency. Charges against three others are also being considered.

Travers, who is awaiting his removal to Kingston at the Toronto jail, was taken from there by Inspector Duncan and Detective Guthrie on Saturday afternoon. He was taken to some place which is not known, and there gave the interview which was discussed by the police commissioners yesterday. In the evening he was taken to the Broadview Hotel, where he and the inspector and Detective Guthrie dined together.

Travers is looking well and took the opportunity to smoke a number of cigars, which are denied him at the jail. It is said that no drinks were served to the party.

Each time it missed he cried

FRILLS AND FADS

Principal Scott, of the Toronto Normal and Model schools, appeared before the Dominion technical commission on Saturday and declared himself to be very much in favor of what are called the "eye-and-hand" subjects in the Ontario public school course, says the Hamilton Spectator. He declared that the time they occupied was more than made up by the progress of the pupils in the so-called "intellectual" studies, and instanced the fact that 85 per cent. of the model school pupils have passed the entrance examinations for the last ten years—a test which, in his opinion, was conclusive as to the educational value of what some people call "frills and fads."

Rubbish! Long before the so-called "frills and fads" were introduced into the public school course there were schools that passed just as high percentage of pupils at the entrance exams, and let it be said that when these pupils graduated they were better educated than are the entrance graduates of to-day on the average. That is to say, they could read better, write better and figure better, although they might not have known quite as much about anatomy, bugology, incipient art and a few more of the present-day "cultural" subjects with which the public school course is loaded.

The educational value of an entrance certificate granted in Ontario schools in the eighties was, in most respects, equal to second-form standing in the high schools of to-day. And that's the way the education department has been "improving" the system in the interests of the ninety-five per cent. of Ontario young people who do not get beyond the public schools at all.

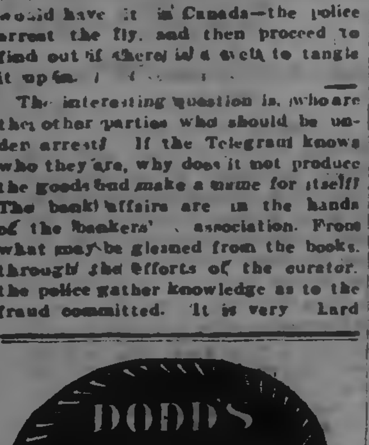
GREAT ON HINDSIGHT

The threshing out of the Farmers' Bank affair has not come to an end yet, by any means. Newspapers of the Toronto Telegram style are yelping like a pack of hounds let loose on the trail of the authorities. The Telegram says that if the wrecking had occurred in any American state, fifteen or twenty of the wreckers would be in jail. It points the accusing finger at the authorities, complaining of their slowness and laxness in not immediately arresting everyone connected with the ill-fated institution.

It is pointed out by the Toronto Star, in a very sensible manner, that it is not the habit of the British police to arrest on mere suspicion, as a rule—certainly not in cases of gravity such as the Farmers' bank. The police must have some good ground for believing a man guilty of a crime, have some hope of presenting evidence to justify his arrest and prosecution before they dare deprive him of his liberty. In Britain the police weave their web first, and then catch the fly. In the United States—and the Toronto Telegram would have it in Canada—the police arrest the fly, and then proceed to find out if there is a web to tangle it up in.

The interesting question is, who are the other parties who should be under arrest? If the Telegram knows who they are, why does it not produce the goods and make a name for itself? The bank affairs are in the hands of the bankers' association. From what may be gleaned from the books, through the efforts of the curator, the police gather knowledge as to the fraud committed. It is very hard to say this man or that man is guilty of fraud or complicity, merely by poring over musty ledgers and records.

It might have been that the police could have kept surveillance over the movements of Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, but until Travers had confessed, it was not clear as to how strong a case the Crown had. To arrest a man like Beattie Nesbitt without a fairly good foundation of a case is quite serious, as in the case of any other man. Papers like the Toronto Telegram are great on hindsight, but they usually fall down on foresight like the rest of the people.



SAVING THE EYES

The following rules have been introduced in a book of directions in the Chicago schools. They have a distinct value:

1. When the eyes have to be rubbed frequently while reading it is time to consult an oculist.

2. Don't read with the light in front. This ruins the eyesight quicker than anything else. The light should be obliquely from behind over the left shoulder. Never read with the sun shining directly on your book.

3. Don't go to sleep or even take a nap in such a position that your eyes will open directly on the light when awakening.

4. When a book or magazine has to be held at arm's length in reading it is a sign that glasses are needed. Don't delay in having your eyes tested.

A "BULL" LIBEL

There was a lot said in the House of Commons last week about a libel appearing in John Bull, an English publication, with reference to the Canadian west. The western members objected strongly to it, and because of its interest to Canadians generally, we reproduce it. It is headed "Canada's deathtrap" and says:

"Canada is at this moment making every endeavour to entice young able-bodied Englishmen to her dominions; her agents are scouring the country with specious promises and glowing reports which are attracting young men by the thousands to try their luck in her western regions, which are nothing more or less than deathtraps for all but those who go out well provided for. Trainloads of raw lads, with from £10 to £100 in their pockets as their sole possession, and the barest of ordinary outfits, are being dumped into the western towns. In these towns they are compelled to stop until the snow and slush have disappeared, perhaps for a month or six weeks, or longer, the cost of living alone being six shillings a day. The majority get to the end of their resources before they can be moved to the particular claim district to which they are bound.

Once on the spot, their condition is pitiable in the extreme. Penniless, and without the means to move their small belongings, they have to scour a vast district in semi-starvation in search of work or for a likely claim.

WITHOUT WORK OR MONEY.

Being far from the beaten paths of civilized life, they meet with none but their own kind, and these, too, are poverty-stricken, brokendown, young-old men, who, if they have by chance survived the terrible rigours of one winter, have come out of it only at the expense of the stamina which goes to make a strong, healthy man. Utterly incapable of helping themselves, these poor wretches just keep life together until they have tramped to a chance charitable homestead, and if they have not the strength to work they may end existence in some lonely hollow, or at best make for the nearest township, there to lounge out a wretched, broken-down life until another winter relieves them of their sufferings.

This is but a page of the whole story. If the country life claims its holocaust, the town life out west is little better. Western Canada is no place for the gentle women. The women population is composed largely of halfcasters, of a degenerate type, often redeemed women who have been sent out by rescue societies to fall back into a worse state than they were drawn from, and the lowest class of domestic servant who if she is at all good-looking soon falls away into wild life, for the girls are of too low a class for most of the men to marry. The few better class women who do come out and marry, suffer and suffer badly, from hardships which only the brawny, strong animal type of country woman can stand.

There are of course, many good women in the towns, but they live in the midst of temptation, and are plagued by a class of men vulgarly nicknamed "remittance men," and their hangers on. These are men who receive monthly or quarterly remittances from distant relatives abroad. They crawl about with sunken heads, aged and careworn, more often than not just out of their teens; their lairs are covered up brothels, and officialdom winks."

EDITORIAL NOTES

Sir James Whitney will attend the coronation. Ontario will be worthily represented.

With a plain clothes man, and two more policemen, Peterborough is becoming more like New York every day.

Principal Scott, of the Toronto Normal school, says that male teachers are best. Is he in league with the Peterborough Board of Education?

Hamilton is going to be compelled to pay 8 cents for milk, instead of 7 cents. The increase won't affect the male population. It drinks nothing but water!

The shooting of David Graham Phillips by an insane musician demonstrates that it is dangerous to be an author. Almost as dangerous as being an editor.

The Italian Government has sent an "ominous" note to Turkey. Even macaroni can rise in wrath at the doings in some of the Turkish provinces.

The movement on foot to have the sheriffs paid salary and keep the fees that are now perquisites to the office, doesn't go far enough. The proper system is a graded scale of salaries only, according to some standard of determining what the office is worth in each county.

POE'S TALES

(WALT. MASON)

Last night, worn out by hours of toil down in the busy mart's turmoil I sat me in the firelight glow, and read some tales by Edgar Poe. I had not read those anecdotes since I was young and full of oats, but in my memory they stood at something grandly, weirdly good. So now I took the book and read of buried men that were not dead, of one-eyed cats and tell-tale hearts; of mouldy bones and poisoned darts; of ghastly freaks who sat in tombs, and talked about their divers dooms; of Ushers and their crumbling homes, of skulls and worms and catacombs; of gloomy dungeons underground, of tuns of wine, wherein men drowned, of condor's wings and owls and bats, and tubs of blood and ring-tailed rats. I threw that silly book away. One idol more has feet of clay. Or is it that my taste is punk, since I have soured on Edgar's junk. Is all that rot, concerning bats and ghosts and ghouls and sore-eyed cats the kind of stuff that stirs the heart of one who has regard for Art? I do not care for Art myself; I take some volume from the shelf — some book that has a joyous strain, whose author was not quite insane — and in its cheerful pages find refreshment for the heart and mind.

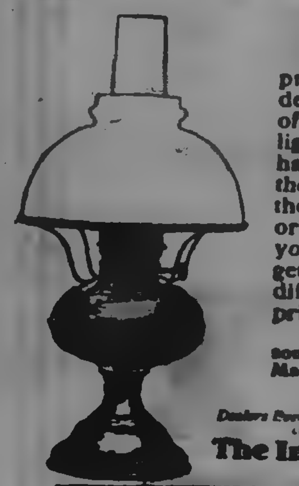
The Famous Rayo



Gives the Best Light at Any Price

When you pay more than the Rayo price for a lamp, you are paying for extra decorations that cannot add to the quality of the light. You can't pay for a better light, because there is none. An oil light has the least effect on the human eye, and the Rayo Lamp is the best oil lamp made, though low in price. You can pay $5, $10, or $20 for some other lamp, and although you get a more costly lamp, you can't get a better light than the white, mellow, diffused, unflickering light of the low-priced Rayo.

Has a strong, durable shade-holder. This season's burner adds to the strength and appearance. Made of solid brass, nickeled, and easily polished.

CHAPTER XXII.

FOR nearly an hour Boyd Emerson sat alone on the deck of the Grande Dame, a prey to conflicting emotions, the while he waited for Mildred to appear. There was no one to dispute his presence now, for the tourists who had followed Dr. Berry from the shore in hushed excitement avoided him, and the sailors made no effort to carry out their earlier instructions; hence he was allowed opportunity to adjust himself to the sudden change. It was not so much the unexpected downfall of Willis Marsh and the new light thus thrown upon his own enterprise that upset him as a puzzling alteration in his own purposes and inclinations. He had come out to the yacht defiantly to make good his threat and to force an understanding with Mildred Wayland, but now that he was here and his way made easy he began to question his own desires. Now that he thought about it that note, instead of filling him with dismay, had rather left him relieved. It was as if he had been freed of a burden, and this caused him a vague uneasiness. Was it because he was tired by the struggle for this girl for whom he had labored so faithfully? After three years of unflagging devotion was he truly relieved to have her dismiss him? Or was it that here in this primal country, stripped of all conventions, he saw her and himself in a new light? He did not know.

The late twilight was fading when Mildred came from her stateroom. She found Boyd pacing the deck, a cigar between his teeth.

"Where are those people?" she inquired.

"They went ashore. Marsh doesn't care to press a charge against the Indian."

"I hear he is not badly hurt, after all."

"That is true. But it was a close shave."

Mildred shuddered. "It was horrible!"

"I never dreamed that Constantine would do such a thing, but he is more Russian than Aleut, and both he and his sister are completely under the spell of the priest. They are intensely religious, and their idea of damnation is very vivid."

"Have you seen father?"

"We had a short talk."

"Did you make up?"

"No. But I think he is beginning to understand things better—at least as far as Marsh is concerned. The rest is only a matter of time."

"What a frightful situation! Why did you ever let father announce my engagement to that man?"

Emerson gazed at her in astonishment. "I? Pardon me! How could I help it?"

"You might have avoided quarreling with him. I think you are very inconsiderate of me."

Boyd regarded the coal of his cigar with a slight gleam of amusement in his eyes as she ran on:

"Even that woman took occasion to humiliate me in the worst possible way."

"It strikes me that she did you a very great service. I have no doubt it was quite as distasteful to her as to you."

"Absurd! It was her chance for revenge, and she rejoiced in making me ridiculous."

"Then it is the first ignoble thing I ever knew her to do," said Boyd slowly. "She has helped me in a hundred ways. Without her assistance I could never have won through. That cannery site would still be grown up to moss and trees, and I would still be a disheartened dreamer."

"It's very nice of you, of course, to appreciate what she has done. But she can't help you any more. You surely don't intend to keep up your acquaintance with her now." He made no reply, and, taking his silence for agreement, she went on: "The trip home will be terribly dull for me. I'm afraid. I think—yes, I shall have father ask you to go back with us."

"But I am right in the midst of the run. I can't leave the business."

"Oh, business! Do you care more for business than for me? I don't think you realize how terribly hard for me all this has been. I'm still frightened. I shall die of nervousness without some one to talk to."

"It's quite impossible! I—don't want to go back now."

"Indeed! And no doubt it was impossible for you to come out here last night for the same reason."

"It was. The fish struck in and I could not leave."

"It was that woman who kept you!" cried Mildred. "It is because of her that you refuse to leave this country!"

"Please don't," he said quietly. "I have never thought of her in that way"—

"Then come away from this wretched place! I detest the whole country—the fisheries, the people, everything. This isn't your proper sphere. Why not come away now, at once, and begin something new, something worth while?"

"Do you realize the hopes, the heartaches, the vital effort I have put into this enterprise?" he questioned.

The recount of ballots cast in the Belleville mayoralty election was held Monday before Judge Deroche, a gain of one being made in favor of Mayor Ackerman. A few ballots were reserved for argument, but not enough, the judge stated, to affect the general result.

JAPAN'S POLICY.

Komura Makes Important Commercial Statement.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Significant interest attaches to the speech made yesterday in the Lower House of the Japanese Diet at Tokio by Count Komura, Minister of Foreign Affairs. The Japanese embassy made public last night a transcript of the address, which defines the foreign policy of Japan, with especial reference to the Japanese-Russian arrangement with regard to Manchuria, the annexation of Korea, and the contemplated revision of the tariff treaties of Japan with foreign powers.

"The relation of Japan with foreign powers," said Komura, "have been steadily growing in cordiality unhampered by any incidents standing in the way of international friendship. Above all it will be noted with the highest gratification that the Anglo-Jap alliance, which has been constantly gaining additional strength and solidity, continues to be a powerful factor in the preservation of general peace in the east."

Speaking of the agreement of July 4 last, between Japan and Russia, in adjustment of their respective interests in Manchuria, Count Komura said:

"It appears that in some quarters this last understanding has been looked on with a sense of suspicion and misgiving. I have no hesitation in positively declaring that it has for its sole object the maintenance of the status quo in Manchuria and of the enduring peace in the Far East by confirming the principles and supplementing the policy laid down in 1907.

To Enquire Into G.T.R. Wreck.

Toronto, Jan. 25.—An investigation into the cause of the Collins Bay wreck on Monday will be held by the G.T.R. officials, who are determined to punish the party responsible for the disaster. They hold that either one of two employes is to blame. The Kingston despatcher may have issued a wrong order, or the rear brakeman on the first train may have neglected his duty in protecting the train when he knew the second train was following. The Dominion Railway Board may take part in the investigation.

Death to Autonomy.

London, Jan. 25.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Touching the reciprocity agreement The News asserts that the tariff reformers' scheme of an imperial preference is shown to be merely the old colonial system under a different name. Its establishment as an ideal would mean the death of colonial autonomy, which has always been the colonies' own ideal. Free trade alone asks nothing of the colonies, who have deliberately omitted the preference from the list of conference resolutions.

Mormons In Montreal.

Montreal, Jan. 25.—A Mormon propaganda has been opened in Montreal. The emissaries of Joseph Smith for a week past have been sowing their literature as thick and wide as possible in the north end of the city. Many houses have received circulars from the disciples of Mormonism, who are making a door-to-door canvass in that part of the city. There are supposed to be two workers engaged in distributing Mormon literature in the city.

Sold Cocaine Illegally.

Montreal, Jan. 25.—In the recorder's court yesterday morning, Achille Goyette, a druggist in this city, was ordered to pay $25 and costs or go to prison for three months for the illegal sale of cocaine. Last November Recorder Dupuys gave a similar sentence, and strongly rebuked Goyette for what he described as a cowardly act.

Will Be Discussed by Conference

London, Jan. 25.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The London Mail says that the ratification of the declaration of London has been postponed, pending its discussion by the Imperial Conference.

Longest Aerial Flight Over Sea.

Key West, Fla., Jan. 25.—The longest aeroplane flight over sea in the history of aviation will start from here to-day, if the weather is favorable, when Aviator J. A. D. McCurdy, the Canadian aviator, will commence his 110-mile trip from Key West to Havana, Cuba.

The final arrangements were completed by Mr. McCurdy and those assisting him yesterday. The torpedo destroyers and other vessels that will be anchored ten miles apart to guide the aviator, departed last night.

High Pressure Investigation.

Winnipeg, Jan. 25.—Developments in the civic fire investigation yesterday included a statement by Chief Buchanan of the fire brigade that the pressure of the high power water system in the business section was being maintained at only 80 instead of the regular insurance demand. The chief also said that the big fire that destroyed the warehouse of the Martin-Bole-Wynne Co., the high pressure mains had been emptied, because the signal arrangements with the pumping station fell down.

An Indian Deputation.

Ottawa, Jan. 25.—A body of Cree Indians from Saskatchewan saw the Government yesterday and made complaint regarding the disposal of money obtained through the sale of Indian treaty lands. They also made a complaint against the chief inspector of Saskatchewan. The picturesque deputation was told by the Deputy Minister of Indian Affairs that their complaints would be immediately investigated and righted, if necessary.

Still at Large.

Montreal, Jan. 25.—The murderer of John Ollander is still at large and is likely to remain so. The detectives have been unable to get track of the Italian who shot Ollander, and there is no trace of him after he left the house. The crime was a sordid one, and all those implicated were more or less under police suspicion. While detectives are at work, the clue is so slight that little hope of an arrest and conviction are entertained.

Boat to Open Harbor.

Montreal, Jan. 25.—Edouard Duplessis has invented an ice-plow boat which he believes will solve the problem of keeping the port of Montreal open for navigation during the winter months.

This new boat is not of the same pattern as boats for breaking ice in the St. Lawrence. It does not ride upon the top of the ice and break it by sheer weight, but cuts the ice as the share of a farmer's plow turns the sod.

Mr. Duplessis is a French-Canadian and was born 60 years ago at Three Rivers, Que. He has been a mechanical engineer for thirty years, and is at present employed by the Canadian Government at Sorel as a mechanical engineer. During the life of Mr. Duplessis, including his last invention, he has patented and marketed 35 different devices.

Lured Away by Bogus Telegram.

Montreal, Jan. 25.—W. F. Pope, the missing Bromptonville merchant, may have been lured away by a bogus telegram from a mysterious Boston woman.

The young man, who dropped from sight a week ago, leaving behind him a gruesome stage setting, which, at first glance, indicated murder, has not since been heard from, but among his papers was found a Boston telegram signed by a young woman, who, his friends say, has not been in Boston for several years. Pope's accounts are said to be in good shape, and no motive for his dramatic disappearance can be discovered.

Phillips, the Novelist, Dead.

New York, Jan. 25.—David Graham Phillips has lost his brave fight for life. He died in Bellevue Hospital late last night, a victim of Fitzhugh Coyle Goldsborough, an eccentric and emotional musician, who, although of refined tastes and aristocratic southern stock, shot the novelist down Monday for a fancied grudge, then killed himself.

Fatally Injured In Explosion.

Galt, Jan. 25.—Laing Cowan, aged 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. Laing Cowan of the Hespeler road, was fatally injured on Monday in an explosion while attempting to repair the acetylene gas plant in his home. He was struck on the head by a flying piece of machinery and passed away yesterday afternoon.

"Jacky" Fisher Retires.

London, Jan. 25.—Sir John Arbuthnot Fisher, first baron of Kilverstone, admiral of the fleet, will retire from the navy to-day under the age limit. He was born in 1841 and has been admiral of the fleet since 1900.

Business is quiet with the county police authorities.

RHEUMATISM AND COMMON SENSE

Father Morriscy's No. 7 Eliminates the Uric Acid.

Many treatments will relieve the aches and pains of rheumatism, but there is only one way to cure that dread disease. The common sense method is to remove the cause, and the effects will soon disappear.

Rheumatism is caused, as is well known, by the failure of the kidneys to perform their intended work of filtering the uric acid out of the blood and eliminating it from the body through the bladder. When the kidneys go on strike, the uric acid is carried to the joints and tissues, where it causes stiffening of the muscles, and the excruciating pains of rheumatism.

Father Morriscy, the learned priest-physician, after much research devised a prescription which would act directly on the kidneys, and by toning them up to vigorous action, cause them to clear the system of the uric acid. This remedy, known as No. 7, has been used successfully in thousands of cases.

Father Morriscy's Liniment will bring relief from the effects of rheumatism, while his No. 7 Tablets will get to work on the cause and in due time cure the disease.

Why suffer from this painful and troublesome affliction, when by using the common sense methods originated by Father Morriscy and successfully followed for years, it is possible to aid Nature to restore you to health?

If you are not yourself rheumatic, you doubtless know of some one who is, and who would be glad to learn of a treatment which has such a consistent record of cures. It is easy to take and sure to benefit and ultimately cure rheumatism. 50c a box, at your dealer's, or from Father Morriscy Medicine Co., Ltd., Chatham, N.B. 99

Ontario Government Plans Some Important Advances

"The output of silver from the mines of Cobalt has been greater than in any previous year, and the discoveries of gold at Porcupine, and the development which has ensued, give promise of richness and permanency.

"During the past year the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway was completed to Cochrane, on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, a distance of 252 miles from North Bay, and a large sum has been expended in improving that part of the line previously constructed. There has been a substantial increase in the revenue from the railway over that of the previous year.

"An attempt by a syndicate to build an electric railway from the main line of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway to Porcupine ended in failure, and my Government has undertaken the building of a steam railway, which, it is confidently expected, will be finished not later than June 30, 1911.

"The construction, by the Hydro-Electric Commission of the line for the transmission of electric power has been completed. In working out a new problem of more or less difficulty and delicacy, such as the hydro-electric scheme, certain delays have necessarily occurred, but it is confidently expected that this great undertaking will soon be in full operation. "The earnest and unselfish efforts of the members of the commission in this matter merit acknowledgment and commendation.

"Most important work in agriculture has been done by practical demonstrations carried on in live stock, dairying, fruit growing and the growing of field crops by the district representatives of the Department of Agriculture in a number of counties in the province.

"So prompt and conclusive have been the results from this work that there is now a very general demand for its extension, and you will be asked to consider an appropriation for this purpose.

"I am pleased to inform you that the revenues of the province are considerably in excess of the estimates."

Gladstone Denounced.

London, Jan. 25.—Great excitement and resentment have been aroused in Rhodesia and South Africa generally, according to despatches received here, on account of the new governor, Viscount Gladstone, commuting the death sentence on a native for criminal assault on a white woman.

Influential meetings of protest have been held in Buluwayo and elsewhere, at which Governor Gladstone's interference has been hotly denounced.

Your Children's Eyes

MANY PARENTS are culpably negligent of their children's eyes, early attention to which would very often obviate lifelong annoyances and possibly injury to physical health. If a child of yours complains that he cannot see clear, that he has dull pains in the region of the eye, or that he is subject to headache; or if he leers, looks at objects askance or with partly closed eyes, he is suffering from some defect of vision, and it is your parental duty to at once consult a competent specialist, lest your negligence or indifference may result in permanent injury. Always have your children's eyes examined before sending them to school.

After devotional exercises, Miss Kelly president of the Toronto Auxiliary, gave an address with reference to the principles of the Auxiliary, and also concerning the keeping of the 25th anniversary, which falls this year. The addresses were listened to with the greatest interest.

COURT STANLEY INSTALLATION

Of Officers Took Place in Their Rooms — District Organizer Present—Enjoyable Luncheon Afterwards

The election of officers for Court Stanley, No. 8,680, which was postponed last week, took place last evening in their rooms, the installation ceremony being conducted by District Organizer Milne, of Trenton. There was an excellent turnout of members, and Bro. C. E. Devereux, Secretary of the Trenton Council, was also present and gave a good address.

The following is the list of officers elected.—

C.R.—Bro. A. Brotherson
S.C.R.—F. Pratt.
Treasurer—S. Adlam.
Sec.—R. J. McWilliams.
Sub-Sec.—A. McWilliams
S.W.—S. Whittaker.

Chaplain—W. Hamilton.
Physicians—Drs. Scott and Amys.
Trustees—Messrs. Hanwell, Edwards and Tremain.
Auditors—Messrs. Johnston, Record and Malane.
Cor. to For.—R. Hanwell.

After the business was transacted about twenty of those present adjourned to Coleman's grill room, where Bro. Milne, of Trenton, was the guest of the evening. Bro. T. Henry acted as chairman and several toasts were proposed and songs given by various members.

They dispersed about twelve o'clock by singing Auld Lang Syne.

BARBARA TENNANT AT MONTREAL

Will Give a Program in the Metropolis on Feb. 4th

Montreal, Jan. 25.—Miss Barbara Tennant is giving a matinee recital Saturday, February 4th, at the Windsor Hall, Montreal, under the direction of Messrs. Lawrence and Ruben, the great impresarios. The recital, which is under heavy patronage, is already well booked, and Miss Tennant will have a splendid reception on her first appearance in the commercial metropolis. A series of receptions in her honor have been arranged for next week. Immediately after her Canadian tour Miss Tennant will go to New York, where arrangements are being made for her appearance in Shakespearian repertoire.

The Montreal program will be similar to the one Miss Tennant intends giving at Peterborough on February 7th, and as the critics here consider it an ideal one—as giving a fine opportunity to the artist to show her marvellous versatility in the range of the speaking voice and histrionic capacity—no doubt the Peterborough people will look forward to the time when they will see their talented townswoman.

He has preached in Peterborough before, at the induction of the present rector of All Saints'. Under his principalship Wycliffe College has in five years doubled its enrollment and has now the largest number of divinity students of any Anglican College in the world. It was enlarged four years ago, and is very shortly to build, it is expected, new residence and chapel accommodation.

MUSICAL NUMBERS FOR MINISTRELS

Some Particularly Good Songs for T.A.S. Show — A Bright Olio

The following are the musical numbers in the T. A. S. Minstrels to be held in St. Peter's School Hall on Thursday and Friday evenings of this week, Jan. 26 and 27.

"Back at Dear Old Home Sweet Home" — Geo. Daly.

"Pickaninny Mine" — Frank Hickey.

"Liza" — Geo. Henry.

"Honey I will long For You" — Jos. Minicola.

"Much Obliged to You" — Wm. O'Brien.

"Take me Back to Dear Old Dixie" — Jos. Mercier.

"If they only let Old Adam's Rib Alone" — Herb. Callaghan.

"I am longing for my Old Kentucky Home" — Harry Quinlan.

"Never, Never" — Geo. Lynch.

GOOD FIRST PART AND OLIO.

As can be seen nothing will be lacking in the musical end of the performance, and with eight good end men there's a laugh every minute. The Olio is in keeping with the first part and two of the numbers in it are especially comical and laugh producing viz. "Twenty Minutes for refreshments," by O'Brien and O'Brien, and "The First Rehearsal" a quartette led by Prof. John Philip Sousa Lynch.

The tickets are selling rapidly and it would be well for those who have not yet marked their seats to do so at once as a crowded house is assured, for both nights. The plan is at Jas. Lynch's Drug Store. The performance will be well staged and nothing will be left undone to make this show one of the best minstrel performances ever put on in Peterboro.

Keep the date in mind and be on hand.

LARGE NUMBER OF FLORAL OFFERINGS

Many Citizens Show Their Respect to Memory of Late Harry LeBrun

The funeral of the late Harry LeBrun was held at ten o'clock to-day from the family residence, Simcoe and Park streets, to St. Peter's cathedral and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

The respect and high esteem that was held towards the deceased was evidenced by the presence in the long funeral cortege of a very large number of the business and professional men of the city who attended to pay their last tokens of respect to their departed fellow-citizen.

MANY FLORAL OFFERINGS.

The floral contributions formed many silent tributes of love and esteem for the deceased. A list of the floral offerings with their donors is given below;—Board of Commissioners and Finance Inspector of West Peterborough, large wreath; G. N. Graham, a cross; Mr. and Mrs Corkery, a cross; Mr. and Mrs G. N. Gordon, wreath; Mr. and Mrs. Dolan, large wreath; Peterborough City Trust, large cross of pink carnations; Mr. and Mrs. D. O'Connell, a cross; Lake Ketcheum Hunt Club, large anchor; Knights of Columbus, large cross; Harry Phelan; basket of flowers; Mrs. McWilliams and Mrs. (Dr.) Wightman, an anchor; Mr. and Mrs. James Lynch, large bunch of red roses. Mrs. J. G. Stevenson and Mrs. Coutre, roses and lilies-of-the-valley; Wener Bros. and Hart, Montreal, basket of flowers; Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Fortye, basket of flowers.

Memoriam cards were also sent by Miss Helen O'Brien, Mr Joseph Picard, sr., Mr L. J. Picard and the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin.

The ceremony in the Cathedral was most impressive. The Bishop was on the throne in the sanctuary and Mass was sung by Father McColl. Father Kelly was deacon and Father O'Sullivan of Port Hope, sub-deacon. Dr. O'Brien of the Church of the Sacred Heart was master of ceremonies.

There were present in the sanctuary Father Fitzpatrick, of Ennismore; Father Brethregen, of Hastings; Father Phelan Young's Point; Father McCaulley, of the Church of the Sacred Heart; Father Kelly, of Norwood; Father O'Brien and the local clergy of St. Peter's.

The C.M.B.A. and the Knights of Columbus of which the deceased was a member were represented by several members in hacks in the funeral cortege.

DINED ON PORK AND BEANS AT HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL SUPPER

Given by the Women's Guild of All Saints' Church—English Bill of Fare and a Choice Program Were Features of a Most Successful Affair.

Lovers of pork and beans had an opportunity of sampling their favorite dish last evening at a most enjoyable New England supper and grand concert, provided by All Saints Womens Guild.

Supper was served in the basement of the old Church from 6 o'clock till eight, the fare consisting of pork and beans, brown bread, celery and cheese, white bread, doughnuts and tea or coffee. Large numbers availed themselves of the opportunity of dining on such rather unusual articles of food. The oddity however, added to the interest and sociability of the affair and the supper was highly enjoyed.

At eight o'clock, all adjourned to the room upstairs where a varied and choice program was given.

The following was the program—

Piano Duet — Miss Pearl McGee and Beatrice Starke.

Song — Gustavus Gilbert.

Sword Dance — Miss Hilda Cubitt and Bernie Mather.

Song — F. E. Clarke.

Song — Miss Ruth Dawson.

Reading — J. Johns.

Violin and Piano Duet — Miss Julia Choate and Master William Wilson.

Song — George Chandler.

While all of the above programme was greatly enjoyed, special mention is due the humorous singing of Mr. Clarke in "The Girl who stuttured and the Boy who lisped." He responded to a determined encore. Miss Choate and Master Wilson's duet was skilfully given and was one of the most enjoyable numbers of the evening.

Rev. H. R. Trumpour was chairman for the occasion and at the conclusion of the concert congratulated the Guild on arranging such an evening's enjoyment.

LIBRARY BOARD WILL ASK COUNCIL FOR $3,000

There were present at the regular meeting of the Library Board held last night, Messrs. E. H. D. Hall, chairman; T. F. Matthews, H. R. H. Kenner, H. Ritchie, D. Spence and A. Mowat.

On motion of Messrs. T. F. Matthews and D. Spence, the request of the Royal Astronomical Society for the privilege of holding their meetings in the lecture Hall of the Library was granted. A charge of $2 for each meeting will be made.

A letter from E. A. Hardy, secretary of the Ontario Library Association, asking that arrangements be made for the holding of a meeting of the Association in Peterborough, on February 16, was read, and the secretary was notified to write Mr. Hardy that the date is satisfactory.

It was decided to open the reading room of the Library to the public on February 1st.

All persons whose names appear on the Library register will be asked to sign a statement that the books charged to them have been returned before they are given a borrowers card.

The Finance Committee in its report recommended that the City Council be requested to provide $3000 for public Library purposes for the year 1911, the amount to be paid in equal monthly instalments. The report was read by the chairman in the absence of Mayor Morrow. The property Committee recommended that the Ontario Medical Association be given the use of one of the rooms in the Library building for the use of the Association.

That the Women's Art Association be also given the use of a room for the purpose of holding an Art exhibit in February next. The report read by the chairman, T. F. Matthews was adopted.

A mastadon skeleton has been found imbedded in the clay bottom of Tippecanoe river, Indiana.

Choir and Pastor of St. Andrew's Had Pleasant Evening

The members of St. Andrews Church choir and the pastor, Rev. Mr. Rollins enjoyed a sleigh ride last evening and drove to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lang, in Otonabee, where they were entertained.

The evening was one of much enjoyment to all. Games were played and instrumental and vocal selections given by several of those present.

The hospitality extended to the guests was much appreciated and Mr. and Mrs. Lang received a hearty vote of thanks for their kindness.

ASTRONOMICAL SOCIETY MEET

At the Royal Astronomical Society meeting last night Rev. Dr. Marsh gave an account of H. B. Collier's telescope, illustrating his remarks with slides. He detailed its conclusion, how it worked in following the movement of heaven's bodies automatically, in a very interesting manner.

Thomas Elliott, of Macdonnel street, was admitted as a member of the society. An account was given also of the use of the Stratton and Toronto telescopes, among the members, and Mr. Collier, as president, gave an excellent address on the moon, from a physical feature standpoint, showing the extent of the volcanoes, sea-beds and rills. Mr. Collier will be asked to repeat his interesting talk at an early date.

TRENTON NEVER HAD A CHANCE AFTER THE LOCALS WARMED UP; VISITORS COULDN'T SOLVE THE DEFENCE

Blue and White in Front at Half Time 7-2, and With Final Score 13-6---Great Work by Glover and Denison and Stellar Blocking by Derocher

Speaking of those broad brimmed bonnets, hat pins two feet long or more, there sure was some fine collection packed around that Brock street door. Rats played tag and crack the whip lash, as the maidens struggled in with their steadies, neat and chesty, and that game and gushing grin. Pet corn martyrs stood the struggle—anything to get within where the noise of horns and razzlers, rose above that awful din. Up along the beams and rafters, kids climbed high to see the game, and to root along the blue necks, in the fight for district fame. Fifteen hundred fans went looney, as the locals hit the ice, next game Trenton's splashy seven, but to take the smaller slice. For the tricks pulled off at Trenton, wouldn't work, each rush was blocked, and McGraw and Croft and Fletcher, slowed down as the ice they mopped. "Pete" and Denny took the custard, Lady Laj was there like glue; Park and Ray with Kel and Sarels, made that Trenton bunch feel blue. Now, kind knocker, take a tumble on that "dish him" guff blow up; watch the boys win out and saunter to that brand new silver cup.

It was a cruel thing to do, but it had to be done. Trenton's district aspirations received a heavy jolt last night, and with the locals are now tied with one loss each. That score of 13—6, with the figures 7—2 at half time for the Brock street seven, tells of a great game of hockey, and yet not as fast as was expected. The visitors were a big disappointment, and on the showing of last night will go down to defeat at Cobourg this Friday night. Every man on the Peterborough lineup played sterling hockey, with the work of the defence featuring the game. The ease in many cases with which Trenton attacks were broken up was remarkable.

THOSE RUSHES.

If you noticed that rink-end rush of Armstrong's in the latter part of the first half when he secured at his goal and went down the ice through the defence, only to have his shot turned aside by Derocher, and if you paid strict attention to the great rushes of Croft, you have a good idea of the style of play Peterborough's on the large sheet of ice at Trenton had to contend with That game, the score of which was 10—4, was made up of such plays, and turned into counters.

COULDN'T PASS DEFENCE.

But Croft, or Armstrong, or even "Crab" Fletcher could not get over the grand blocking of Glover and Denison. It was pretty to watch their work, particularly that of the youngest player, who rushed incessantly. Glover was there to stick, and he did He never took a chance to roam, unless prospects were unusually bright, and then he passed at every opportunity. The fans gave him a heavy hand when he scored in the second half

DEROCHER IN FINE FORM.

Long and short shots, with an occasional roller, were all the same to Derocher. He was right on. Those two shots which beat him in the first half wouldn't have been stopped by Percy Lesueur. That was when both teams were travelling at full speed. Laj upheld his end of the work as never before, and in doing this played up to the expectations of many fans who had been doped out to be on the job all the time.

THAT FORWARD LINE.

Park's work had the fans on their feet all the time. He was there with pretty stick-handling, checking and passing, contributing the second score of the game. Ray and Kelly checked back like fiends, and got away with it too Kelly played his best game of the season and after Sarels retired from the struggle, was all over the ice, shooting from each wing and chasing Croft to the corner on several occasions after that player had broken away. Ray never before got back like he did last night, and with Glover serving time, blocked individual and two-man plays like a veteran. Sarels, during the time he was on the ice, was in good form, and held Armstrong nicely.

ICE SOFTENED.

For the first fifteen minutes the game was very fast, with Peterborough having the better of the argument With the ice becoming sticky the play lost much of its class, and it had become listless towards the latter part of the period, when water appeared. After the rest, with each team playing six men, the game was all Peterborough Trenton had to work overtime on the defence, and while, Croft and Armstrong would get clear away at times, they couldn't get past Denison and Glover. Had the score been close the style of play would have caused all kinds of excitement, for there were many individual and combined rushes, and an occasional sensational stop by either Derocher or McGiffin With the score 12—2, the locals eased up, and Trenton gathered four more counters, and Ray made it one more to the good for the home seven shortly before time was called.

A FULL HOUSE.

The excursion from Trenton brought up a delegation of two hundred rooters with the team The crowd in the rink recalled the attendances of years gone by when the "Big Seven" showed their heels to all comers.

The teams were—

TRENTON.

The teams were sent away at 8.40, each opening up with lots of speed The puck went up to Trenton territory, Ray and Sarels combining, the play going into a scrimmage. McGraw returned and lost Glover stopped Cummings and Ray worked the boards for a pretty jaunt McGraw was in the way. McGraw and Croft were called back on an offside Park took possession, went up, passed to Sarels and the white flag went up for the first score of the game

From the faceoff the locals again forced Trenton on the defensive. With the play around their nets, shots went to the bad Fletcher and Armstrong broke away, Derocher making a great stop on the latter's shot. The play was fast. Armstrong sent a wide scooper on a rush down the opposite boards, and Fletcher sent another high one at Derocher. Denison went up and was sidetracked when he looked good to score. Park, however, was on the job and sent in a side shot.

Peterborough 2, Trenton 0

Park was playing a stellar game He took possession again and punctured the Trenton defence for a wide shot One minute later he was sent to the fence and Kelly followed him for tripping. It was up to Armstrong to tally for his team on a lone rush and hot shot Glover stopped a two-man play and Kelly returned to do service Glover repeated with Croft and Armstrong and broke away for a jaunt, to be called back on an offside Powers evened up the score by squeezing one in from a scramble behind the nets.

Peterborough 2, Trenton 2.

Sarels and clark got away, but were lost in the defence. On the return Derocher blocked a long shot from Armstrong. Powers went off for loafing. Kelly took a lonely, passing to Park, but it was offside Croft returned Denison put the locals ahead taking the puck at his own nets and beating the whole Trenton team Denison made two pretty blocks of dangerous looking rushes Powers came on again and failed to get away with a rank offside Glover stopped Armstrong and McGiffin took care of a speedy one from Park, and left his nets to stop another The locals were playing superior hockey, the defence starring Sarels contributed a wide shot McGiffin handled Park's effort but Kelly was there to tap in on the rebound

Peterborough 4, Trenton 2

After the faceoff Park was injured in the eye The play began to lag, water appearing on the ice McGiffin got in front of a hot one from Kelly from a scrimmage Sarels had to leave the ice, and Cummings went with him Denison and Kelly combined for the next score, the former counting Armstrong got away for a rink-end rush in which he dodged Denison and Glover and shot Derocher stopping Ray took the next on the return from the side.

Peterborough 6, Trenton 2

Derocher stopped a roller from Armstrong and Croft secured from Denison, who, however, overtook the visitors point man before he could shoot Kelly went up on a pass from Glover handed the rubber to Park, and McGiffin was beaten

The half ended with Kelly resting with the penalty men.

Peterborough 7, Trenton 2.

SECOND HALF.

The second half found the teams still playing six men. Kelly was sent to the fence to complete his penalty. Derocher was on the job when a shot came from Armstrong, who had combined with Fletcher. Denison went alone, Croft chasing him to the side. Powers was called back on an offside. Kelly took a shot Fletcher secured, losing to Denison who returned. Croft broke away, going to pieces at the defence. Glover drew a penalty. Ray fell back and stopped a Croft-Armstrong play, in the most approved style From a faceoff out from the Trenton nets Kelly beat McGraw and Croft and batted the disc past McGiffin.

Peterborough 8, Trenton 2.

Glover rushed and passed to Park, who missed Derocher stopped another hard roller from Armstrong. Ray was banished for an infraction, but it was pie for Kelly to rush the opposite wing and land the rubber behind McGiffin

Denison and Glover stopped individual plays, and McGraw and Croft were hard to get past Derocher dished a hot one to the corner, and after the rubber had been worked down Park made it eight straights for the locals Denison and Park combined for another, the latter taking the tally.

Peterborough 11, Trenton 2

McGraw went off for getting Park as he looked good to repeat. Denison rushed and shot wide, Derocher handling the puck on the return play by Fletcher and Armstrong. Croft broke up a combined attempt by Kelly, Denison and Park. Glover rushed and passed to Park, who missed in front of the nets. Derocher stopped a brace of hot ones, and on the return Powers saved his team a goal by picking the rubber out at the nets. Derocher went out and blocked Croft. The big crowd yelled lustily when Glover rushed and scored.

Peterborough 12, Trenton 2.

Both teams were becoming tired with the hard going on the soft ice, and the play at times was a farce Try as they would, Croft, Fletcher or Armstrong could not get past Denison and Glover. Finally Armstrong bulged the netting with a speedy side shot and with the locals slowing up, took the next two tallies.

Peterborough 12, Trenton 5.

Fletcher made it a half dozen on a pass from Armstrong. Ray took a penalty and Glover also turned spectator Playing four men, the locals held Trenton safe. Ray took the last score of the game on a pass from Denison.

Final score, Peterborough 13; Trenton, 6

NOTES

Croft and Armstrong were the only two men of the visitors to show up to the form displayed against Peterborough at home.

The work of Fred Denison at cover caught the fans. He blocked and checked, rushed and fed the forward line with the ability possessed by few experts of the game who have had much more experience.

REPORT ON INSPECTORATE

Of Peterborough County

Following is the report read and presented to the County Council by Inspector Lees at yesterday's session—

To the Warden and Council of the County of Peterborough.

Gentlemen,—I beg respectfully to submit my report on the work of the schools of the inspectorate of Peterborough East for the year 1910.

During the year there were in operation in the inspectorate 71 rural and 3 village schools with a total of 90 teachers during the first half year, and 94 in the last half. In the performance of my duties I made 241 visits, 184 in rural and 57 in village schools. In addition, I made 6 visits where schools were closed, meeting the trustees, where possible, and discussing the situation. There were two arbitrations during the year, one of which occupied a good deal of time.

The qualification of the teachers during last term was as follows—

	II	III	Dist.	Temp.	Total
Asphodel........	2	3	1	1	7
Belmont & Methuen	2	1	2	10	15
Burleigh and Anstr...		1		5	6
Chandos........			1	7	8
Douro........	5	5		1	11
Dummer........	1		1	6	8
N. Monaghan........	3	1			4
Otonabee........	9	4	1	1	15
Total rural schools ..	22	15	6	31	74
Villages........	13	3			16

The proportion for the present term is much the same, with the exception that there are at present 10 schools that are not open. Of 74 teachers in the rural schools, 31 held temporary certificates (an increase of 11 over the previous year). It will be observed that with the exception of Dummer, very few of these were situated where the township grant is $300 per school. It was possible up till last year to have practically all of these schools in charge of qualified teachers, and I think would have been yet, had all the trustees been a little more vigilant and enterprising. However, on the whole, I have little to complain of on that score.

The schools in the poorer townships are at a disadvantage in two respects. First teachers have a reluctance to going to these districts, so that in order to get qualified teachers it is necessary to pay even higher salaries than prevail in the other townships. Second these schools receive only $150 each from the township as compared with $300 in the better townships. Of this handicap $90 are made up in additional grants regularly provided for, which still leaves a difference of $60 against the poor school. I recently called the attention of the Minister to this disadvantage, pointing out that the fixed grant to the schools in townships where the assessment is less than an average of $50,000 per school section should be $90 instead of $30 as at present. I was advised that in such cases where the section is paying a salary that should reasonably be expected to secure a qualified teacher application to the Assisted Schools Fund for the amount necessary to adjust the difference would receive favorable consideration.

In a considerable number of the schools, especially those in which qualified teachers of experience have been employed excellent work has been done and satisfactory progress made during the year. As formerly, the most serious hinderances have been irregularity of attendance and frequent changes of teachers. For the latter, the present difficulty in getting teachers is partly to blame, but the most serious cause is still the needless desire for change on the part of both teachers and people. The efficiency or inefficiency of the teacher seems to make little difference in some cases. On the contrary, I find trustees who are able to rise above the sectional or personal jealousies that demand a change every six months or oftener and are willing to make sacrifices in order to avoid changes.

New buildings have been erected during the year in section No. 2, Anstruther, No. 7, Chandos, and No. 7, Belmont. All were urgently needed and are good school buildings of modern design. In addition, substantial improvements have been made in other sections. In No. 11, Dummer, an old log building was veneered with cement and otherwise improved at a cost of about $200. So far the experiment seems to have been a success.

The Legislative grants for the year to the schools of the inspectorate were as follows;

Grant on account of certificates......	$ 450.00
Salaries......	4,362.40
Fixed grant, $30 each for 28 schools......	840.00
Accommodations and equipment......	840.00
Rural school libraries	122.67
Continuation and fifth classes	949.61
Assisted schools......	1,565.00
Villages......	898.50
	$10,028.18

I cannot too strongly recommend the work that is being done by the continuation schools. There have been in attendance at these schools during the year, including Ennismore school, 157 pupils with an average attendance of 107. In all the schools excellent work is being done, and it is safe to say that had condition been as they were before these schools were established not a dozen of these 157 young people would ever have enjoyed the advantages of a high school education.

Besides, in my opinion, the continuation schools are destined to be the salvation of the situation in providing a supply of teachers, especially for the rural schools. It is to them and to the smaller high schools rather than to the large collegiate institutes, that people who are best qualified to forecast conditions, are looking for the training of recruits for the teaching profession.

In view of this last, it will be the part of wisdom to render every possible encouragement to these schools. The county at present pays the equivalent of the Legislative grant. It is worth while to consider if it might not be money well invested to do more than that. What is being done in several other counties in this respect, is shown by the following statement.

County of Bruce—No. of schools 5, No. of pupils 236, extra grant $1,000, total grant $2,706, rate per pupil $11.50.

County of Dufferin—No. of schools 2, No. of pupils 129, extra grant 85 per pupil, total grant $1,228, rate per pupil $1.40.

County of Elgin—No. of schools 5, No. of pupils 185, extra grant 100 per cent, total grant $2,382, rate per pupil $12.90

County of Grey—No. of schools 3, No. of pupils 141, extra grant 50 per cent, total grant $1,617, rate per pupil $11.45.

County of Huron—No. of schools 3, No. of pupils 280, extra grant 100 per cent, total grant $2,465, rate per pupil $8.80

County of Peel—No. of schools 1, No. of pupils 33, extra grant $200, total grant $433, rate per pupil.

County of Wellington—No. of schools 2, No. of pupils 102, extra grant 150 per cent, total grant $1,668, rate per pupil $16.

In addition the counties of Dundas, Glengary, Leeds, Lennox, Ontario and Stormont give extra assistance. The above shows that these counties are paying an average of about $12 per pupil while Peterborough paid last year about $2.20 for each pupil in attendance. It would respectfully solicit an earnest consideration of the advisability of making an increase of 50 per cent in these grants.

I have the honor to be your most obedient servant,

RICHARD LEES,
Public School Inspector,
Peterborough, Jan. 24th, 1911.

OLD MEN ARE NOT WANTED

Only Young Looking Men Engaged Now

In these days of strenuous competition when dividends count for more than men the man who retains his youth is the man who holds his job the longest.

That is why young men should take good care of the hair. If you grow bald at 30 or 35 or even when you are older, that bald spot will so far as appearance goes add 10 years to your life.

Men who have hair should by all means keep it. In later years it may mean a livelihood to yourself and family.

Remember that the man with a bald head who seeks a position is handicapped from the start. Parisian Sage will make hair grow, stop falling hair and remove dandruff. It will give the hair a lustrous appearance that denotes health and youthfulness. Guaranteed by the proprietors. Money refunded if it fails. Do your baking with flour made exclusively of the HIGH-GRADE constituents of the HARD-WHEAT berry

Have you ever baked with flour made exclusively of the high-grade constituents of the hard wheat berry? If you haven't, now is the time to try PURITY Flour.

Only the cream of the Manitoba hard wheat—the best wheat in the world—is used for PURITY Flour. More than that, only a portion of the flour milled from this wheat goes into the sacks and barrels branded PURITY.

PURITY Flour consists exclusively of the high-grade constituents or portions of the Manitoba hard wheat berry.

Every wheat berry has both low-grade and high-grade constituents which are separated during our process of milling. So exact is our process that it entirely eliminates all the low-grade portions from the flour which is finally branded PURITY.

The greater strength of PURITY Flour makes it go farther in the baking. With it you can make more loaves to the sack or barrel than you have ever succeeded in doing before. The loaves will be more nutritious, too, because they contain the high-quality gluten, starch, phosphates and other muscle-building and blood-enriching elements of the hard wheat berry. Naturally flour that consists exclusively of the high-grade constituents of the best hard wheat has greater strength and nutriment, superior color, more delicate flavor.

If you'll just try to realize fully what it means to your cooking-reputation you'll soon be using PURITY Flour.

Of course, PURITY Flour will cost you a few cents more than lower-grade hard wheat flour or soft wheat flour.

But PURITY is very economical because it makes "More bread and better bread." The cost per loaf is no more than when using weaker flour, and the food value is much greater.

Tell your grocer you are in a hurry to try PURITY Flour. He will supply you promptly.

When you see the batch of beautiful snow-white loaves, with their soft, evenly-textured crumb and dainty golden-brown crust, you'll be proud of your success with PURITY Flour. When you taste and enjoy the superb flavor of such high-class bread you'll be prouder still.

If you don't want to buy a large sack or barrel, you can get a small bag. PURITY is packed in 7, 14, 24, 49 and 98 pound sacks. Also in barrels and half-barrels.

Make certain the PURITY trademark is on the sack or barrel you buy, for that is your guide to the strong, reliable, high-quality flour that makes

HORSE SHOW AT ARMORIES

A Varied Program Will be Given —Silver Collection

The stock judging contest and exhibition in the Armories this evening promises to be one of the most attractive and high class of its nature witnessed here for some time. Some of the best horses in the vicinity will be exhibited, and this is an exceptionally rare opportunity of seeing some classy and high-bred horses, some of which were prize winners at the Cobourg Horse Show. Several varieties of roadsters, carriage horses, driving horses and horses best suited for military purposes will be exhibited.

A silver collection will be taken to defray expenses.

The Miss Was Jolted

Several young ladies from the Examiner and Review binderies hopped on to Pete Johnson's express sleigh to-day at noon, and at the corner of Hunter and Rubidge streets one of the party was thrown off when the sleigh swerved. The Miss put on an acrobatic feat and landed in a snow bank after the manner of a log taking the water from a chute.

Dancing Class on Thursday

Miss Coventry's dancing class will meet on Thursday evening at 7.30 in the band hall instead of Friday.

AUTO SPEEDER WAS FINED $10.00

His Excuse Didn't Go With the Magistrate--George Lillie, a Vag, Goes to the Central for Six Months--His Pal Gets Another Chance

After a sojourn on the hill and much approved in their appearance, George Lillie and John Newton, two vags, appeared before the Magistrate this morning.

Both pleaded guilty.

Newton pleaded for a chance for Lillie and himself, stating that they would get out of town before twelve o'clock and never come back.

The Chief handed His Worship a letter from the Toronto police, which referred to Lillie as a professional tramp.

It was six months in the Central Prison.

Newton was given a chance to clear out.

A PLAIN DRUNK.

It was the second appearance for Richard Shooter, and it cost him $2.00, which he paid.

He was warned on the first occasion.

FINED FOR SPEEDING.

Fred. Austin, an automobile driver, was fined $10.00 and costs for speeding on George street last night.

The charge was that he travelled at immoderate speed and faster than ten miles an hour.

The excuse of the defendant was that it was after twelve o'clock, and there were no vehicles or pedestrians about. He held that he slowed up at the crossings.

His Worship stated that he would deal leniently with the case, but in the event of another offence, he would impose the heaviest penalty allowed by law.

"There is no occasion for travelling faster than six miles an hour through the city, and no reason for reckless driving."

This is the first conviction in a case of this character.

Norwood, Jan. 24 — Mr. R. W. Severett arrived in Norwood on Saturday evening last and is engaged this week in preparing to move his family to Brockville, where he has purchased a grocery business.

Mr. Thos. Watson purchased recently from Mr. S. Hendren, a nice driving outfit, comprising a handsome pony and cutter, robes and harness.

HARD ON CONSUMERS.

A question of absorbing interest at the present time is, are your hens laying? Eggs are only 38cts a dozen! Is it due to the Farmers' Club, or is it caused by the scarcity of the article? We think it is the latter. Still since its organization the Farmers' Club has arranged with a Montreal firm to handle strictly new laid eggs at the highest market price. The Club expects the price during the summer will not drop below 25c.

NORWOOD JUNIORS WON

A hockey match between the Hastings and Norwood Juniors consisting of school boys ranging from 12 to 16 years, was played at the Norwood rink on Saturday evening last, from five to six o'clock, which resulted in a victory for the Norwood lads, the score being 8-5. Quite a number witnessed the game which though not reaching the sensational stage at any time, was still quite interesting. Wilfred Fry on the Norwood team was the star, and certainly looks like a coming player. Scriver in goal stopped some hot shots which prevented the Hastings boys from running up a score.

The return match will be played in Hastings on Saturday, Feb. 4th.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC IS JUST LOSING ITS FOOTHOLD

Stated Rev. J. R. Webb at Royal Templars' Temperance Meeting

The first of a series of monthly temperance rallies under the auspices of the Royal Templars of Temperance, was held last night in the Mark street Methodist church.

The attendance was good and a lively interest was shown in the admirable address given by Rev. Mr. Webb, as well as in the hopeful and encouraging remarks of Mr. A. B. Cunningham, secretary of the Temperance and Moral Reform League, Mr. Carey and others.

CONGRATULATED TEMPLARS.

The speaker of the evening was very hearty in his congratulations to the Royal Templars and their friends upon the inauguration of this aggressive forward movement and believed that it was a practical demonstration of zeal which deserved the active sympathy of all temperance exponents. He proceeded to marshall facts and figures, showing how tremendous the evil of the liquor traffic was in the society of men and how strongly entrenched the traffic has become.

SUCCESS FORESHADOWED.

But while the proposition to suppress the evil was manifestly a big one, demanding unlimited courage and unrelaxing vigilance, yet the successes attending the work of temperance people, encouraged the belief that the day was approaching in which the legalization of the traffic could no longer be tolerated.

The next meeting will be held on the fourth Tuesday of February at some other point in the city, announcement of which will be duly made.

"If any women are suffering as I did, I would advise them to try Peruna and convince themselves. Peruna has done me good. I know by my experience that it is worth its weight in gold to any one who needs it.

"I also took Manalin, for constipation, in connection with Peruna, and I found it helped me where other laxatives failed."

TEN MILLION IS CAPITAL

Rudolphe Forget at Head of Big Bank.

General Bank of Canada Name of Institution.

Montreal, Jan. 26.—Canada will soon have a very large addition to her present banking capital, and this will no doubt lessen the stringency existing at times during certain seasons of the year. The bill of incorporation introduced in the Commons yesterday by Robert Bickerdike, M.P. for St. Lawrence, is one of the most important measures ever introduced into Parliament, and the General Bank of Canada will undoubtedly be an accomplished fact before many months have passed away. The capital will reach ten millions of dollars, and the project is the outcome of Rodolphe Forget's visit to France a few months ago.

It may be said that he has been assured the underwriting of the full amount of the capital mentioned above, as well as the further assurance that as soon as the bank is started properly deposits from old France will be forthcoming to an amount of many times the capital of the institution. As the Banking Act demands the majority to be British subjects, there will be seven directors appointed here and four from amongst the French shareholders. The French investors have, in fact, such an appetite for Canadian securities, that anything backed by reliable people here, is readily accepted by the Parisian money lenders.

It is also known that very large interests here have offered to co-operate with Rodolphe Forget in his great enterprise. The member for Charlevoix stated yesterday that he would not be a director. "But never fear," he said, "they will be selected from the very best financiers of the Dominion, and this means a great forward movement in the way of financial and commercial progress."

Branches will be established in Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Halifax, St. John, and in fact in all the large centres of the Dominion.

It is said that one institution alone in the city of Montreal has expressed its willingness to subscribe $300,000 to the new concern, although as previously intimated the entire ten millions have been underwritten.

PARALYTIC'S DEATH

Newark, N.J., Jan 25.—Held immovable by her infirmity and silent by terror, Mrs. Anna Selgowitz, an aged paralytic, watched a thin tongue of flame consume the clothing of her body to-day, inflicting burns from which she died in five minutes. Her woollen shawl caught fire from a stove.

HE LIKED TO SEE BIG FIRES

17-Year-Old New York Boy Applied Match in Brooklyn.

New York, Jan. 26.—That the lives of 5,000 persons have been imperilled by a 17-year-old pyromaniac, was revealed yesterday when Fred. Burkhardt, a delivery boy, admitted that he had been responsible for a number of fires in Brooklyn. Burkhardt, the youngest fire fiend with whom the police have ever dealt, was arrested charged with arson, the specific charge against him being the setting on fire of the building at 517 Throop avenue, Brooklyn, early yesterday. Forty persons were driven panic-stricken into the street.

"I just wanted to see one real big fire," declared Burkhardt. "If the first fire I had started had been a big one I would have quit then. I certainly do like to see them engines go to a fire."

The youthful pyromaniac confessed to starting a dozen fires.

FOUGHT FIERCE FIRE TO SAVE PASSENGERS LIVES

Crew of Str. Queen Had Terrible Struggle Against Flames—All Were Saved.

Special to the Review.

San Francisco, Jan 26.—The steamer Queen reached port here to-day with one hundred and twenty-five passengers on board, and a crew of fifty-five who are feeling mighty thankful in escaping a terrible death. The crew and passengers had a terrible fight against fire, the flames nearly destroying the vessel. The fire broke out when the vessel was several days out from port, and although all speed was made, it was thought that the passengers would have to take to the boats. There was not nearly enough boat accommodation to save the passengers and crew, and only the subduing of the flames, after a fierce and terrifying fight, saved a tremendous disaster at sea.

VETO BILL BEFORE CORONATION

London, Eng., Jan. 25.—All the party leaders have issued letters calling upon their supporters to give close attendance when Parliament meets on February 6th.

It is the Government's intention to get the veto bill disposed of before the Coronation, and this will practically compel the Ministers to appropriate the whole time of the House until after Easter to Government business, a condition which will cause considerable grumbling among members anxious to push legislative matters.

GREATER PUBLICITY IS WHAT PROVINCE NEEDS

Member for South Norfolk In Moving Reply to Speech From the Throne In Legislature, Says a Ten Thousand Dollar Expert Is Needed at Once — Allan Studholme Favors Government Loans to Settlers.

Toronto, Jan. 26.—"Peace like a river" flowed through the proceedings of the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon. The Governmnt members were present in full force to hear the moving and seconding of the address in reply to the speech from the throne. Hon. A. G. McKay, Opposition leader, had a loyal little band of seven of his followers in attendance. Allan Studholme, the doughty Labor leader, was also present.

Sir James Whitney and Hon. J. J. Foy, gave notice of several bills for the purpose of consolidating various statutes.

G. H. Ferguson (Grenville) gave a notice from his seat on the second row on the Ministerial side, which, when discussed, will probably ripple the calm waters of legislative debate. The motion reads:

"That in the opinion of this House no language other than the English language, should be used as a medium of instruction in schools of this province."

O. C. Pratt (South Norfolk), in moving the adoption of a loyal address in reply to the speech from the throne, paid tribute to the statesmanship of the late King.

"What Ontario wants," said Mr. Pratt, "is a $10,000 publicity man, capable of teaching the people the possibilities that lie dormant in the resources of this province.

"Our farmers are conservative; they are slow," said Mr. Pratt, "to take to new ideas." Let the Government send out 1,000 bushels of alfalfa seed to the Ontario farmers, with instructions, and the effect would be magical. The Government was doing something for reforestation in at least one splendid plot in the province. They should be supported in such efforts.

J. Torrance (North Perth) said that he considered it a special honor to second the address yesterday, as it was the anniversary of the day six years ago when the Whitney Government gained a great victory at the polls and saved the Province of Ontario from rack and ruin.

A. Studholme (Hamilton East) advocated loans to settlers for the erection of homes and planting their homesteads. "I don't care if you spend millions," he said, "to do it. I would support the outlay. It was the best way to populate Northern Ontario. It worked well in New Zealand."

Mr. Studholme in conclusion moved the adjournment of the debate.

Sir James asked the member for Hamilton East if he desired to speak further to-day. When he replied in the negative, it was explained that his motion was not necessary. On Mr. Studholme resuming his seat, Hon. A. G. McKay, who will resume the discussion this afternoon, then moved the adjournment of the debate.

TRAVERS WON'T HELP POLICE

Farmers' Bank Directors' Case is Laid Over.

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Jan. 26.—The case against the four provisional directors of the Farmers' Bank was up this morning in police court, but was adjourned for one week. The crown attorney, Mr. Corley, is waiting for information from Manager Travers, who is still in jail, but the latter won't give it until he has consulted his lawyer. Travers sat in an adjoining room at the court, fairly eating cigarettes.

SERIOUS LOSS TO LETTERS

Is Srstained by the Death of David Graham Phillips.

New York, Jan. 26.—The funeral of David Graham Phillips, the author, who died in Bellevue Hospital shortly before midnight from the effects of an assassin's bullets, will be held, according to an announcement yesterday, in the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Transfiguration, known as the "Little Church around the Corner." The arrangements for the burial, etc., are all in the hands of Senator Albert J. Beveridge, who was one of the writer's most intimate friends.

Mr. Phillips' death came so late in the night that many of his colleagues in literature and business did not hear of it until yesterday morning. As the news reached them their personal regret was increased by their feeling, expressed almost unanimous in the brief statements which they gave out that he had been killed at the beginning of a career that meant much for American letters.

TERMINAL ELEVATORS

Western Farmers Hold Discussion on Grain Problem.

Mr. Martin of Regina Urges That Immediate Action be Taken.

Ottawa, Jan. 26.—The time of the House of Commons yesterday was devoted to a discussion of a resolution proposed by W. M. Martin (Regina) that in view of the conditions existing in the terminal elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur, that such "measure be adopted by the Government as will more effectually prevent the improper admixture of grain" delivered to the terminal and transfer elevators through which the grain of the western provinces might pass.

A large number of the western members took part in the debate, and opinion divided as to the necessity of public ownership. Many declared that if public ownership was the only remedy they were ready to adopt it.

Dr. Schaffner (Souris), Conservative member, goes farther than his opponent, and has a resolution on the order paper calling for "Government operation" at once.

In support of his motion Mr. Martin said that this was undoubtedly an important question which affects every class of people in the west and Canada as a whole. During the present session a number of important delegations had waited upon the Government, but none of more importance than that composed of western farmers, with whose recommendations he was in accord. Despite action which had been taken to put a stop to the conditions in the terminal elevators, it was apparent that something more will have to be done.

Mr. Martin then quoted from the report of the royal commission on grain in 1906.

On the question of terminal elevators the commission reported in favor of Government control, rather than Government ownership. He pointed out that it had been shown that grain handled exclusively by the railway companies reached Great Britain in better condition as to grade than that handled by independent elevators, and the solution was to eliminate the element of private gain.

Thomas McNutt (Saltcoats) followed, speaking as a practical western farmer. He said there were a number of middlemen making a living out of the farmers' grain, and this condition it was proposed to alter. The farmers did not object to paying all fair transportation haulage and storage costs, but they did object to profit being made out of them by the manipulation of their grain while it was en route. He favored Government ownership in this case.

Dr. Schaffner (Souris) said that on the principle that half a loaf was better than no loaf at all, he would support Mr. Martin's resolution, but he believed an operation would have to be performed on it to make it produce even half a loaf.

Dr. Roche (Marquette, Man.) objected entirely to the resolution under which the discussion had been introduced. Government ownership of terminal elevators did not necessarily mean the purchase of elevators at an extravagant price. The elevators, he thought, could be leased. Thus a great initial expense would be avoided.

J. G. Turiff (Assiniboia) said it was the duty of the Government to point the way to such reforms as had been suggested as necessary. He was emphatically opposed to Government ownership or operation of public facilities so long as this could be avoided. The history of Government ownership in Canada, whether under present or past Governments, he was speaking generally, was not such as to encourage an addition to the burden. But if there were no other means whereby the reforms could be achieved, and of this he was not yet absolutely sure, he would advocate the purchase or leasing of these elevators, as had been asked by certain of the western wheat growers.

A return presented in the House yesterday afternoon by Hon. L. P. Brodeur giving the correspondence and regulations agreed upon at Washington two weeks ago in connection with the settlement of the North Atlantic fisheries dispute, contains the following paragraph in regard to the happy issue of this century-old difficulty; which formed the text of a despatch from Ambassador Bryce to Earl Grey: "I may add that the two Canadian Ministers (Aylesworth and Brodeur) seemed to me to show a happy union of firmness in all essentials with a reasonable spirit in non-essentials, and their attitude was appreciated by the United States representatives, whose conduct on their side of the case evinced a no less friendly disposition, and who recognized unequivocally the fairness which the Canadian laws and regulations had been administered."

"Both sides parted with cordial sentiments, and both the President and the Secretary of State expressed to me their great satisfaction that matters had been so adjusted as to leave pleasant recollections behind of the frame of mind in which the questions had been dealt with, which at one time seemed likely to give rise to discussion, and it was specially fortunate that any necessity for a further reference to arbitration, with all the expense and delay that this might have involved, had been avoided by direct negotiation between the parties."

He added that the protocol of the agreement would likely be brought down to-morrow.

Hon. Wm. Paterson was in the House yesterday, and Hon. W. S. Fielding will make his first appearance of the session to-morrow. He will make a report on the reciprocity negotiations.

STEEL OFFICES WERE BURNED

Dominion Corporation Loses Valuable Books and Records.

Halifax, Jan. 26.—The general offices of the Dominion Steel Corporation at Sydney were yesterday afternoon destroyed by fire which originated in the company's central telephone office. The telephone central endeavored to notify the other offices, but communication was cut off almost simultaneously with the discovery of the fire, and the young lady at the board had a narrow escape.

The entire building was in flames before the company's firemen arrived. The force of water was not sufficient to send a stream to the second storey, where the fire originated. The Sydney fire engine was almost wrecked by slipping over the embankment near the offices.

In the efforts to save the effects in the offices, volumes of important papers, prints and fyles were lost in being thrown from the windows. A great vault, where many valuable papers were fyled, broke through the floors and crashed into the basement. In the excitement anything that came to hand was thrown out of the windows at random, and the air was filled with papers flying from every office in the building, the value of which can only be conjectured. The company's documents of the most value were, however, all located in the three vaults at the south end of the building, which it is believed still stands. Among the valuables lost are a singularly complete record of the company's affairs for the past ten years.

The building itself was worth at least $60,000. The exact insurance figures are not obtainable, but it is understood that there is about $40,000 on it.

General Manager Butler was in Springhill when he received news of the fire. He left at once for Sydney by special train.

Dog Showed Where Men Drowned.

Halifax, Jan. 26.—Since Sunday nearly every able bodied man at Tangier, 50 miles east of Halifax, has been engaged in a search, night and day, for two brothers-in-law, Bain Mason and Freeman Beaver, fishermen of Tangier. They went out shooting for birds on Saturday morning.

Yesterday their boat was found on the shore, and the whole countryside was searched. At last attention was attracted to tracks made on the ice by Mason's dog, which seemed to circle round one spot. There was no break in the ice, but the searchers at last made a hole in the centre of the tracks and dragged the bottom. There they found the bodies of the two men. They had fallen through unobserved, a cold snap came and the ice froze over again, hiding all traces of the tragedy.

Manufacturing Concessions.

London, Jan. 26.—The Foreign Office has not received any details of the Canadian-American reciprocity agreement which is to be given out at Washington to-day. In reply to an enquiry from those interested here, the Ministry announced that it is able to state only that the general lines of the agreement are reciprocity in specified products and some concessions to manufacturers.

John B. Trolley Held by the Sarnia Police.

Alvinston, Ont., Jan. 26.—John B. Trolley was taken to Sarnia last night, where he will await trial at the spring Assizes on a charge of offering money to three parties to set fire to the barns of Neil A. McLean of Brooke Township.

A. J. Trolley was implicated in the evidence and he was arrested on a similar charge, but was bailed in the sum of $1,600. George Irving and George Parry of Alvinston and Charles Hanley of Brooke swore that J. B. Trolley had offered them each $25 to set fire to McLean's barns. Irving implicated A. J. Trolley by stating that he had offered him a certain sum to commit the same act.

The building was completely destroyed by fire on the night of Jan. 11th.

CARNEGIE'S GIFT

WALT MASON

The Laird of Skibo, noble soul, believes the world is in a hole while war drums throb and cannon crash, and so he gives a wad of cash, to end the reign of blood and woe, and give the White Winged Dove a show. He dug ten million from his shoe, and sprung it with a howdydo. Far be it from a grass-fed bard to say things critical or hard, about a princely gift like this, designed to further human bliss. But where will all the money go? And will the White Dove have a show? Methinks I see the highbrows meet, and make long speeches and repeat; I see the long-haired, four-eyed sports hold congresses of divers sorts; they'll file reports that no one heeds, they'll write long books that no one reads, they'll junket here and junket there, and "resolute" and paw the air, and write peace anthems full of thrills, while he of Skibo foots the bills. Methinks that when Peace do appear, and earth has lost the battle fear, 'twill be because men grow more wise and gentle as Time onward flies 'twill be the harvest of the tears that men have sown in bitter years. The boon will have no branded hide; no Skibo coat mark on its side.

Rochester suffragists will make a house-tohouse canvass to ascertain the sentiment there in regard to the cause.

ALTITUDE FLIGHTS

Representative Warner, of St. Louis, has introduced a bill into the State Legislature, making it a felony for aviators to ascend higher than one thousand feet. This bill shows a rather curious working of the mind, to which many of us are subject. Why one thousand feet? Is it more dangerous to fall from 1001 feet than from 999 feet? Is it more dangerous to fall from 1500 or 3000 feet than from six hundred feet? We think not. The result of a fall from any such distance is usually the same.

Some people have an idea that express trains should not run faster than 60 miles an hour. What difference is there if anything goes wrong, between a 60-mile speed and 75-mile speed? One is just as disastrous as the other, and it often happens that the greater the speed the more margin of safety is provided. The result of being hit by a train going 60 miles an hour is not less than being hit by one going 75 miles.

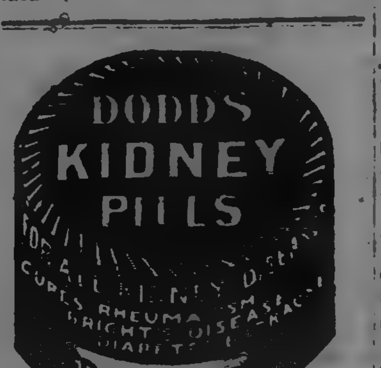
The United States man who would prohibit flights of more than a thousand feet altitude means well. He has in mind only the safety of the aviators, because no one else is affected by their flights. If anything goes wrong with the machine at a thousand feet, of course, an aviator has a greater chance of descending to earth safely on it than if he were two miles up; but an upset does not mean any more safety. The bill is one, however, which cannot do any harm, because there is nothing in the air above a thousand feet for aviators to explore. There isn't any North or South Pole and altitude flights have nothing to recommend them, except daring and foolhardiness.

THE TRAVERS GIFT

The assertion that Hon. W. S. Fielding received $2,500 from W. R. Travers in the $120,000 purse raised for him last year is strenuously denied by Senator Jaffray, of the Toronto Globe, and P. C. Larkin, who were in charge of the raising of the Toronto subscriptions. The Toronto Globe is authority for the statement that the Minister of Finance does not know to this day who subscribed to the $120,000, and that being so, he is in no position to award favors to those who made him the beneficiary of their generosity.

While there are few Canadians who would desire to impute to Mr. Fielding any guilt in such a matter, yet the time to make a subscription of $120,000 to the deserving Mr. Fielding is not while he is Finance Minister, and in a position to affect the fortunes of the subscribers to the fund. Mr. Fielding may or he may not, have suspicions as to who contributed to that fund. Many a man has what we might term psychological intuition in matters concerning money that has come to him, and we take it that Mr. Fielding is not too busy a man to notice what is so intimately connected with his personal fortunes.

There is this much to be said, of course, When the Farmers' Bank was supposedly in sound standing, no one knowing to the contrary, a gift from W. R. Travers would be no more tainted than a gift from Senator Jaffray. If the granting of the charter to the bank had any connection with a supposed contribution from Mr. Travers, it is an entirely different matter—for then "graft" smells strongly.



HUGHES "SLANDER"

Some days ago Col. Sam Hughes, made a speech in St. Catharines, in which he is said to have stated the Editor Macdonald of the Toronto Globe was paid $2,500 by a Boston newspaper man to advocate reciprocity and commercial union with the United States. Editor Macdonald is traveling in Southern California but the Toronto Globe undertakes this morning to declare the statement even as confirmed by Mr. Hughes as a malicious slander. It says that, "the relations of Mr. Ginn of Boston and Dr. Macdonald have nothing whatever to do with questions of trade or the internal affairs of any nation."

The Globe also says that Editor Macdonald will deny over his signature the utterly base inference of Col. Hughes. It doesn't say that Mr. Macdonald will institute and libel or slander suit against the gallant colonel. The member for Victoria and Haliburton has a way of probing at facts interesting such as these are without getting himself into serious trouble. An investigation in a court of the matter would perhaps provide interesting information as to certain peculiarities of the Toronto Globe's editorial policy.

MONTREAL THEATORIUMS

The Montreal Witness sent a reporter to visit about forty of the theatoriums, or moving picture theatres, or nickleodeons—whatever you have a mind to call them—on a Sunday afternoon. These places open at two o'clock on Sunday, and remain open until eleven o'clock. How's that for a peaceful, law-abiding Sunday, you Lord's Day Alliance people?

This enterprising reporter found that the pictures were very instructive. They were in some cases really elevating. They depicted murder, robbery, attempted suicide, kidnapping, attempted safe-breaking, carrying concealed weapons, etc., etc.—regular Nick Carters on canvas.

Montreal pays the proprietors about $5,000 per Sunday. Many girl patrons are so well-known to the door-keepers that they are passed in without charge. And the songs are classics. Just imagine the pleasure one would have in hearing, "Put your arms around me, honey," and Op 999, "Any little girl that's a nice little girl is the right little girl for me."

Some of the places are narrow and illy ventilated. They are positively dangerous in the event of a fire. It may be asked why do the Lord's Day Alliance people permit this thing to go on under their eyes.

There is a legal case on now before the supreme court. And until it is decided, no further action can be taken. When the moving picture business gets to a basis like this, it is not an elevating force. However, Montreal has many things worse than moving picture shows to boast of.

EDITORIAL NOTES

They have seized some more canned eggs at Montreal. The food inspection department is making great egg-ertions these days.

The corset coat and poured-in hot trousers will be fashionable this spring and summer. The fashion-makers would like us to be tight.

Burglars stole jewels valued at $25,000 from the residence of Wm. Thaw, jr. They were very Thawtful as to making a clean sweep.

The Toronto World publishes a cartoon of Sir Wilfrid Laurier smoking the pipe of peace. As the Premier is a consistent non-smoker the cartoon doesn't seem quite applicable.

Medicine Hat is going to pay aldermen $10 for attending meetings. The application of the system might have a salutary effect on the Peterborough Board of Health.

The Traders Bank shareholders and directors have passed a resolution favoring Government periodic examination. From this it seems that not all the banks are opposed to the move. Which is pleasant news.

A member of Parliament has been taken ill with typhoid at Ottawa, the result of Ottawa water. It looks as if the capital had better get busy and either shut off the water or the typhoid epidemic.

Chairman Elliott, of the Kingston Light, Heat and Power Committee, proposes to import power from New York state for the eastern municipalities. If a high power cable line is practicable, the scheme might be a good one. There will be no import duty in this case.

The Government makes a great tenant. It pays $16,000 rent for a building at Ottawa for a building the cost of which was about $70,000, or nearly twenty per cent. on the investment. The struggle for existence comes very hard on these Ottawa landlords who rent their buildings to the Laurier extravagantists.

ETHER HABIT HAS INVVADED BOSTON

This "Dope" Is Now Numbering A Great Many Among Its Victims

That the ether fiend is to be found in Boston, just as are the victims of morphine and cocaine, is the startling statement of Dr. John H. McCollom, professor at the Harvard Medical School, and superintendent of the Boston City Hospital, says the Post of that city.

So quietly is this special vice of ether drinking, or ether inhaling, carried on by its devotees and so securely do they generally guard their secret that this announcement by such an authority as Dr. McCollom will come as a surprise to the vast majority of persons in New England.

Indeed with ether drinking as the vice of the heroine in Bisson's play "Madame X." that is now appearing in Boston, the general impression given has been that this habit is peculiarly Parisian and has not as yet been introduced on this side of the Atlantic.

Nevertheless, although the ether habit is of comparatively recent origin in France, some unfortunates of Boston have seized upon it. Regarding this Dr. McCollom points out the difficulty of obtaining accurate statistics of the prevalence of drug using in the statement:

"It has come within my personal knowledge that there have been a number of cases of young men in this city who use ether. But there has never, to my knowledge, been a case of an ether user brought to the City Hospital as a result of his habit. But this proves nothing, since we know there are very many persons addicted to morphine and cocaine, and yet it is only occasionally that one of these persons is brought to the hospital for treatment.

"Of course the reason for this discrepancy between the number of drug slaves and the number of patients is to be found in the fact that the user of morphine or of cocaine, does not as a rule become violent. He may continue to practice his habit in privacy until finally an overdose sends him to his last sleep.

"With the users of alcohol however the case is entirely different. The alcoholic becomes violent, and so we have a much higher percentage of alcoholic victims than of drug fiends in proportion to the number addicted to each habit.

"As I have said, I have never known of a user of ether brought here for treatment because of his habit. Nevertheless, I have known personally of a number of cases of young men in the city who used ether. They took it in their rooms, and as far as I know they did not drink it, but inhaled either by using a cone or by pouring a little of it on a handkerchief.

"I have heard of course that some who are advanced in the habit drink ether, but I cannot conceive of anybody wishing to drink it on account of its taste.

"As to the dangers of this I suppose they are so self-evident that it is scarcely necessary to mention them. There is always the chance of the overdose that will throw the user into a coma from which there is no awakening. Like the other drugs I have mentioned however, it does not show on the hospital records as does alcohol."

STILL ANOTHER POSTMASTER TELLS

Why He Pins His Faith to Dodd's Kidney Pills

Doctors failed to cure his Bright's Disease, but he found relief in the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy

Clam Point, Shelburne Co., N.S. Jan. 25. (Special.)—Joshua Dickerson, postmaster here, is among the many in this neighborhood who tell of pains relieved and disease banished by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I am sixty-two years old," says the postmaster, "and I'll tell you why I think so highly of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Owing to a bad cold my Kidneys commenced to bother me, and the trouble developed into Backache, stiffness of the joints, and finally Bright's Disease.

"I was treated by a doctor, but that did not help much, and it was six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills that brought me relief."

Everywhere you go in Canada people tell you of the great work Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing, and everyone who tells you can give the reason why. That reason simply is that there is no case of Kidney Disease Dodd's Kidney Pills cannot cure. These people have tried them and proved this true. Backache, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Diabetes, Lumbago, Heart Disease and Bright's Disease are some of the more serious troubles that Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure, simply because these are all either Kidney diseases or are caused by diseased Kidneys.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Hogs at Lower Prices on American Yards—Trading Light.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Jan. 25.—The railways reported 49 carloads of live stock at the City Market, consisting of 851 cattle, 1088 hogs, 98 sheep, 46 calves and 1 horse.

Butchers.

Butcher cows sold at from 30c to 40c per cwt, lower, but after all is said and done prices are still high, especially for the quality.

Drovers will have to get their cattle for less money, or be prepared to take a loss when they reach the market.

Milkers and Springers.

A liberal supply of milkers and springers sold at steady prices, ranging from $40 to $70 each.

Veal Calves.

Veal calves sold at about the same prices—$3 to $8 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Wesley Dunn reported prices as follows: Sheep, ewes, $4.25 to $4.50; lambs, $5.80 to $6.00.

Hogs.

Ten hundred and eighty-eight hogs were reported by the railways. Prices unchanged, at $7.50 for selects, fed and watered, and $7.15 to drovers for hogs f.o.b. cars at country points, which means $7 to the farmer.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Jan. 25.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market, the offerings this morning were 600 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 150 calves. There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle prices, being steady on account of smaller offerings and a fairly good demand for local consumption. Choice steers, sold at 6½c to 6¾c, good, at 5¾c to 6c; fairly good, at 5½c to 5¾c; fair, at 4¾c to 5c, and the lower grades, at 4c to 4½c per lb. There were no choice cows on the market, consequently the highest price realized was 5c for the best and the commoner ones brought from that down to 3½c per lb. A few good bulls sold at 5c to 5½c, and the lower grades at 4c to 4½c per lb.

The tone of the market for sheep was stronger and prices advanced ⅛c per lb., owing to limited supply offered, for which the demand was good and sales were made at 4½c to 4¾c per lb. Lambs were steady and only met with fair sale, as butchers generally are well supplied with frozen stock, but as the supply was small a clearance was made at 6c to 6½c per lb.

The market for hogs was without any new feature. Supplies were larger than on Monday, for which the demand was good and prices ruled steady at $8 per cwt., weighed off cars. A fairly active trade was done in calves at prices ranging from $2.50 to $11 each, as to size and quality.

At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, there were offered 300 cattle, 175 sheep and lambs, 800 hogs and 100 calves. A fairly good trade was done in all lines and the prices realized were much the same as those quoted above, with the exception of hogs, which sold at $8.10 to $8.25 per cwt., weighed off cars, for selected lots.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Jan. 25.—Cattle—Receipts, none here; market steady, prime steers, $6.50 to $6.75; butcher grades, $3 to $6.

Calves—Receipts, 100 head; market active, higher, cull to choice, $6 to $11.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 14,000 head; market dull, 10c to 15c lower: choice lambs, $6.75 to $7, cull to fair, $4.75 to $6.50, yearlings, $4 to $4.75, sheep, $2.75 to $4.25.

But she only said:

"I don't like it. It isn't a nice business. Let father take the plant over. If you need money, I have plenty."

"Wait!" he interrupted sharply. "Sit down I want to talk to you." He drew the wrap closer about her shoulders and led her to a deck chair. The change in him was becoming more apparent. He knew now that he had never felt the same since his first meeting with Mildred upon the arrival of the Grand Dame. Even then she had repelled him by her lack of sympathy. She had shown no understanding of his efforts and now she revealed as complete a failure to grasp his code of honor. It never occurred to her that any loyalty of man to man could effect her simple will. She did not see that his desertion of George would be nothing short of treachery.

It seemed to him all at once that they had little in common. She was wrapped completely in the web of her own desires. She would make her prejudices a law for him. Above all, she could not respond to the exultation of his success. She had no conception of the pride of accomplished that is the wine of every true mans' life. He had waged a bitter fight that had sapped his very soul; he had made and won the struggle that a man makes once in a lifetime, and now, just when he had proved himself strong and fair in the sight of his fellows, she asked him to forego it all. Engrossed in her own egoism, she required of him a greater sacrifice than any he had made. Now that he had shown his strength she wanted to load him down with golden fetters—to make him a dependent. Was it because she feared another girl? She had tried to help him, he knew—in her way—and the thought of it touched him. That was like the Mildred he had always known—to act fearlessly, heedless of what her father might do or say. Somehow he had never felt more convinced of the sincerity of her love, but he found himself thinking of it as of something of the past. After all, what she had done had been little, considering her power. She had given carelessly out of her abundance, while Cherry— He saw it all now, and a sudden sense of loyalty and devotion to the girl who had really shared his struggles swept over him in a warm tide. It was most unlike his distant worship of Mildred. She had been his dream, but the other was bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh.

For a long time the two sat talking while these thoughts took gradual form in the young man's mind, and, although the deck was deserted, Miss Wayland had now no need to curb her once headstrong wooer.

He could not put into words the change that was working in him, but she saw it, and, grasping its meaning at last, she began to battle like a mother for her child. His awakening had been slow, and hers was even slower, but once she found her power over him waning her sense of loss grew and grew as he failed to answer to her half spoken appeal.

Womanlike, she capitulated at last. What matter if he stayed here where his hopes were centered? This life in the north had claimed him, and she would wait until he came for her. But still he did not respond, and it was not long until she had persuaded herself that his battle with the wilderness had put red blood into his veins and his conduct had been no worse than that of other men. Finally she tried to voice these thoughts, but she only led him to a stiff denial of the charges she wished to forgive. As she saw him slipping further away from her she summoned all her arts to rekindle the flame which had burned so steadily, and when these failed she surrendered every prejudice. It was his love she wanted. All else was secondary. At last she knew herself. She could have cried at the sudden realization that he had not kissed her since their parting in Chicago, and when she saw he had no will to do so the memory of his last embrace arose to torture her. She was almost glad when a launch bringing her father came from the shore and the old man joined them.

The two men bore themselves with unbending formality, unable as yet to forget their mutual wrongs. The interruption gave Boyd the opportunity he had not been brave enough to make, and he bade them both goodby, for the tide was at its flood, and the hour of their departure was at hand.

There were a meaningless exchange of words and a handshake in the glare from the cabin light that showed Mildred's pallid lips and frightened eyes. Then Emerson went over the side, and the darkness swallowed him up.

The girl clutched at her father's arm, standing as if frozen while the creak of rowlocks grew fainter and fainter and died away. Then she turned.

"You see, he came!" she said.

The old man saw the agony that blanched her cheeks and answered gently:

"Yes, daughter!" He struggled with himself. "And if you wish it he may come again."

"But he won't come again. That is what makes it so hard; he will never come back."

She turned away, but not quickly enough to keep him from seeing that her eyes were wet. Wayne Wayland beheld what he would have given half his mighty fortune to prevent. He cried out angrily, but she anticipated his thought.

"No, no, you must never injure him again, for he was right and we were wrong. You see I—couldn't understand."

He left her staring into the night and walked heavily below.

Emerson felt a great sense of relief and deliverance as he leaned against his bars. His heart sang to the murmur of the waters overside. For the first time in many months he felt young and free. How blind he had been and how narrow had been his escape from a life that could lead to but one result! The girl was sweet and good and wonderful in many ways, but three years had altered him more than he had realized. He had begun to understand himself that very afternoon, when Cherry had told him her own unhappy secret. The shock of her disclosure had roused him from his dream, and once he began to see himself as he really was the rest had come quickly. He had been doubtful even when he went out to the yacht, but what happened there had destroyed the last trace of uncertainty. He knew that for him there was but one woman in all the world. It was no easy battle he had fought with himself. He had been reared to respect the conventions, and he knew that Cherry's life had not been all he could wish. But he fronted the issue squarely and tried to throttle his inbred prejudice. Although he had felt the truth of Fraser's arguments and of Cherry's own words, he had still refused to yield until his love for the girl swept over him in all its power; then he made his choice.

The one thing he found most difficult to accept was her conduct with Hilliard. Those other charges against the girl were vague and shadowy, but this was concrete, and he was familiar with every miserable detail of it. It took all his courage to face it, but he swore savagely that if the conditions had been reversed Cherry would not have faltered for an instant. Moreover, what she had done had been done for love of him. It was worse than vile to hesitate. Her past was her own, and all he could rightfully claim was her future. He shut his teeth and laid his course resolutely for her landing, striving to leave behind this one hideous memory, centering his mind upon the girl herself and shutting out her past. It was the bitterest fight he had ever waged. But when he reached the shore and tied his skiff he was exalted by the knowledge that he had triumphed; that this painful episode was locked away with all the others.

Now that he had conquered he was filled with a consuming eagerness. As he stole up through the shadows he heard her playing, and when he drew nearer he recognized the notes of that song that had banished his own black desolation on the night of their first meeting. He paused outside the open window and saw by the shaded lamplight that she was playing from memory, her fingers wandering over the keyboard without conscious effort. Then she took up the words with all the throbbing tenderness that lives in a deep contralto voice:

Last night I was dreaming of thee, love—
was dreaming;
I dreamed thou didst promise—

Cherry paused as if entranced, for she thought she heard another voice join with hers. Then she bowed her head and sobbed in utter wretchedness, knowing it for nothing more than her own fancy. Too many times, as in other twilights past, she had heard that mellow voice blend with hers, only to find that her ears had played her false and she was alone with a memory that would never die.

Of all the days of her life this was the saddest, this hour the loneliest, and the tears she had withheld so bravely as long as there was work to do came now in unbidden profusion.

G.T.R. Enquiry.

Stratford, Jan. 26.—Judge Barron's G.T.R. strikers' enquiry program for the next week or so is as follows: Thursday and Friday at Windsor, to hear cases of Windsor, Detroit and Durand men; Saturday, Sarnia, Monday and Tuesday at Palmerston, including Southampton line applications; Wednesday, Niagara Falls. His honor then goes to Ottawa and the Maritime Provinces for a week or ten days on Intercolonial business, before resuming the Grand Trunk Railway investigation.

Andy Would Fortify.

New York, Jan. 26.—Fortification of the Panama Canal would not be incompatible with the movement for world-wide peace agreements, in the opinion of Andrew Carnegie. The ironmaster, in an interview yesterday, said that while the non-fortification of the canal would have been a strong argument in favor of a universal peace treaty, still sound reasons exist for President Taft's decision to have fortifications constructed.

A FASHIONABLE FUNCTION.

Miss Mackenzie Is New Countess de Lesseps.

London, Jan. 26.—Miss Grace Mackenzie of Toronto, youngest daughter of Sir William Mackenzie, the great Canadian railroad builder, and Count Jacques de Lesseps, the French aviator, were married at St. James' Church, Spanish Place, yesterday.

Canon Gildea solemnized the nuptials, which were witnessed by a fashionable gathering. Count de Mora was best man, and the bride's attendants included her sisters, Mrs. W. W. Beardmore and Miss Ethel Mackenzie and Miss Mabel Magher, a cousin.

All were beautifully gowned in pale pink chiffon with blue sashes and large pink tulle hats.

Miss Mackenzie was given away by her father.

Following the ceremony, Sir William and Lady Mackenzie gave a reception for the wedding party at Claridges. The bride and groom will spend their honeymoon in Egypt. Though they will maintain a permanent residence in Paris, they will spend much time in the United States and Canada.

Count de Lesseps is a grandson of the noted engineer, Ferdinand de Lesseps. He is 27 years of age. A year ago he took up aviation and made some notable flights, including the crossing of the English Channel and the trip from Belmont Park around the statue of Liberty, and return in competition with the late John B. Moissant and Claude Graham-White. Miss Grace, whom he first met in Toronto last July, accompanied him in aerial trips at New York, but with the announcement of their engagement both foreswore the perilous sport.

BOURASSA IS AFTER GREY

Says Governor-General Influenced Clergy—Was to Active in his Imperialism

Montreal, Jan 25.—Henri Bourassa, in a second article headed "The Navy and the Clergy," supporting the theory that the British Government aims at their conversion to the pro-naval policy says that Lord Grey began three years ago his propaganda amongst the religious authorities of Canada. His Excellency paid prolonged visits to Montreal and took in the colleges of the city, where he manifested the very greatest interest in their work. He invited to his own table the heads of several of these institutions, never losing an occasion to show them the beauties of this imperial religion. The third centenary of Quebec was also an occasion, and he took charge of the whole business as a great imperial manifestation.

After speaking very severely of a great many people, Mr Bourassa says that while the college professors and priests were being denounced for harboring Nationalist sentiments, threatening them with the same end as those of Portugal, Lord Grey adjured at least two eminent Quebec prelates to place themselves at the head of the imperialistic reaction.

They also painted at Rome and at London under the blackest colors the Nationalist movement. It was represented as a revolutionary uprising, when the church might be dragged into a situation in which the indignation of the Anglo-Protestant majority might be showered upon the church in Canada, and cause the good will of Great Britain to be withdrawn from the Catholic Church.

Col. Munro Gets Summons.

Toronto, Jan. 26.—One more summons was issued yesterday in the Farmers' Bank case, and another will be issued to-day. Col. Munro, the bank's last president, has been charged with signing false returns to the Government at Ottawa, and a summons charging a prominent Toronto citizen with a violation of sub-section B of section 139 of the Bank Act, by accepting the notes of the bank as a pledge.

This summons is returnable in the Police Court on Monday morning, and Col. Munro, at Embro, Ont., last night refused to discuss the matter further than to say that he will be in court on Monday.

Nothing new has been learned of any change in the warrants issued for the arrest of Lindsay or Nesbitt by way of making the offences extraditable, nor of the laying of new charges.

The districts where the infection was found have been isolated but the authorities were so lax in taking action that hundreds were exposed to it before the quarantine went into effect.

Families are fleeing from the city daily, many of them being residents of the foreign colony. So serious has the situation become at Tein Tain and Pukow that all railway traffic has been suspended.

Your Children's Eyes

MANY PARENTS are culpably negligent of their children's eyes, early attention to which would very often obviate lifelong annoyances and possibly injury to physical health. If a child of yours complains that he cannot see clear, that he has dull pains in the region of the eye, or that he is subject to headache; or if he looks at objects askance or with partly closed eyes, he is suffering from some defect of vision, and it is your parental duty to at once consult a competent specialist, lest your negligence or indifference may result in permanent injury. Always have your children's eyes examined before sending them to school.

A girder which was being placed in position and said to be weigh three tons fell on his right foot crushing it badly just below the ankle.

He suffered great pain and the ambulance was immediately 'phoned for and he was conveyed to Nicholls Hospital where the doctor in attendance hopes to be able to save, the injured limb. The accident happened about 8 o'clock this morning, shortly after he had commenced work.

Officials of Horse Show Appreciated the Co-Operation

President Leary is highly elated over the success of the Horse Show at the Armories last night, and attributes much of that success to the co-operation of the farmers of the vicinity, who brought in their horses when no cash prizes were offered. The large attendance of citizens was most encouraging. Livery men of the city loaned vehicles for the occasion, and to all who in any way assisted, the thanks of the officials are extended.

Mr. Leary stated that an effort would be made to secure from the government that assistance by which the Armories would be better equipped for shows in the future.

"THE FOURTH ESTATE"

The Grand Theatre announces for next Wednesday, the most successful play of this and last season, "The Fourth Estate."

"The Fourth Estate" is something new in theatrical entertainment. It depicts newspaper life as nearly true to life as it is possible to place the same before the footlights.

"The Fourth Estate" as a drama revolves around the campaign of one of the big New York dailies in its effort to aid the cause of reform. It makes the audience behind the scenes, and shows just how things are done to bring daily the news items of the world before its readers. The final act of the play shows the composing room of the newspaper during its busiest moments. It is the hour of "going to press" when everything is a high tension. Reporters, editors, linotype operators, make up men, all are shown working at top speed.

Charles Balsar, as Wheeler Brand, the managing editor, Richard Garrick, as the city editor, Joseph Woodburn as the night editor, are all types of newspaper men who can be seen any day in the office of any of big newspapers of the country. The composing room force is recruited from actual laborers in the newspaper world, and are all members of "The Big 6" the Typographical Union of New York City, and have seen actual service on the New York Herald, Sun, Times, World, and other publications of the metropolis.

Austin Webb, as Judge Bartelmy, Miss Selene Johnson as Judith, Judge Bartelmy's daughter, George Thompson as Michael Nolan, millionaire, owner of the newspaper, Edward Dupuy, as the newspaper lobbyist, Thos. Hadaway, as Sylvester Nolan, Miss Harriet Ross, as Mrs. Michael Nolan, all represent types of every-day life; they are characters cleverly drawn and excellently play.

The sale of seats opens on Monday morning.

MURRAY STREET CONGREGATION WILL BUILD NEW CHURCH

This Was Decided Upon at Annual Meeting of Congregation Last Night—Church Complete and Site Will Cost $55,000 — A Flourishing Year for the Church.

The most important and largest matter discussed at the annual meeting of the Murray St. Baptist church last night was the question of building the new church. While no resolution sanctioning the carrying on of the work was passed till last night's meeting, it was practically decided some time ago that the church would be built, and the site was selected. There was an immense volume of work before the committee, however, in making arrangements and considering the different steps before deciding it was well to take them. Mr. T. F. Matthews, the chairman of the Building Committee, presented a most comprehensive and enlightening report of the business transacted by the committee, and it was the unanimous opinion of the meeting that excellent judgment had been displayed by the committee and that very careful and well directed attention had been given the subject.

Mr Matthews stated, in commencing his report that the committee had had a great number of meetings, and believed that the time was opportune for the building of a church that would be a credit to the Baptist denomination of the city.

COST OF THE CHURCH.

The committee, Mr. Matthews stated, had carefully gone into the matter of maintenance. The plans called for the expenditure on the construction of the new church and Sunday school of $44,000, which would include seating. This was the outside figure, and by close and intelligent figuring the cost could be brought considerably below this amount.

It would cost $1 600 to put up sheds at the rear of the church; the fixing of the grounds and the planting of trees and flowers would cost $400. This would bring the cost to $46,000. With the cost of the land, the plumbing and other matters of expenditure the total cost would be brought up to about $56,500 at the outside figure.

Mr. Matthews quoted figures to show that the meeting of the financial obligations, for a very large proportion of this amount had been either realized or pledged, and the encumbrance of the church, considering the heavy cost of construction and incidental expense would be comparatively small.

It was enthusiastically decided to build the church, and the present Building Committee was given authority to make arrangement for the carrying on of the work with instructions to keep the debt that would ensue in connection with the operations within a reasonable limit. The construction will be carried out as soon as arrangements can be made.

The site of the new church will be a short distance east of the old one on Murray street.

The meeting, which was held in the Sunday school room, was preceded by a very enjoyable tea, and the gathering was most encouraging, both in size and in interest shown in the meeting. Rev. J. R. Webb, the pastor, presided.

The different yearly reports were read and showed the finances of the church and Sunday school to be in a thoroughly satisfactory state.

TRIBUTE TO WM. ALDRIDGE.

A resolution was adopted in which the gratitude of the church was expressed to Mr. Wm. Aldridge for his long and faithful service, and he was made an honorary life member of the board of deacons, with full active privileges.

Mr. Aldrige was unable to be present owing to illness, and Mr. Webb called attention to the fact that it was the first annual meeting Mr. Aldridge had missed in 28 years.

OFFICERS OF THE CHURCH.

It was decided to increase the number of deacons to nine, and this made it necessary for this year's term seven new deacons. They were chosen as follows:—Dr. Scott, Thos. Distin, Harry Webber, John Riddell, George Cocharane, W. Sherin.

The other officers are:

Church Clerk—G. Pringle.

Treasurer—T. F. Matthews.

Finance Committee—D. Thompson, S. Cottingham, George Cochrane, P. White, J. P. Cunningham, W. H. Tewaley, R. Harding, F. Pillsworth.

Treasurer Fellowship Fund—Dr. Scott.

Ushers—Dr. Browett, W. Sherin, R. Harding, H. Blade, J. Roszel, Jos. Doughty, P. Ward, G. Pringle.

Rep. to Charity Board—Porter White.

Diaconate Rep. to Nicholls Hospital—Wm. Aldridge.

Baptismal Committee—Mrs. Cottingham, Mrs. Pringle, Mrs. Ellis, Mrs. Montgomery.

Choir Committee—A representative from the choir, and Dr. Scott, T. F. Matthews and J. P. Cunningham.

Financial Secretary—Wm. Aldridge.

Resolutions of thanks were passed to various workers for their splendid assistance during 1910.

PASTOR'S LETTER.

Rev. Mr. Webb read the following pastoral letter:

My Dear People,—In addressing you for the fourth time on such an occasion as this I must render thanks to Almighty God for the privilege of being permitted to be a minister of His eternal gospel. I also acknowledge most gratefully the delightful fellowship which I have with you in His work. I am now entering upon your fifth years as your minister, and I must say that you have been exceedingly kind to me. If any member of this church has wearied of my ministry he has successfully hidden the fact, for I do not know one person in the church who fails to treat me with the greatest of consideration and I may say that this feeling is entirely reciprocal, for while I have received some invitations to larger churches, I have not for one moment felt that I wanted to leave Peterborough.

For two months I was absent from you because of sickness, and for two other months you did not receive full service from me because of impaired energy, but during that time you cared for me as you would for a brother and were true to your church.

I want to mention one name in this public way. On two occasions, with scarcely any notice, when I was taken ill, brother Elcome without hesitation, went to the pulpit and rendered most acceptable service. This I consider most brotherly treatment, knowing, as I do, what a strain preaching is when one is unexpectedly called to the pulpit.

During the year I have made 665 pastoral visits, besides social calls. I have baptized seventeen persons, have been called to the cemetery eleven times and have married eleven couples.

I am deeply conscious of my many failures, and most anxious that the coming year may be much more fruitful. I would like to show you by increased service my full appreciation of your consideration of me when I was physically unfit for my work.

I am exceedingly careful in my utterances from the pulpit and am hopeful that in my preaching I am always true to God's Word, while I endeavor to keep myself abreast of the times that you may never be ashamed of the ministry of your church. I would ask for your continued prayers and co-operation that souls may be saved and Christians edified, and the church built up in this growing city.

Yours with much affection.

J. R. WEBB.

The financial statement for the year ending December 31, 1910, was presented by Mr. T. F. Matthews, the treasurer—

C.O.F. AT HOME: AN ENJOYABLE TIME

The Catholic Order of Foresters were at home to their friends in their hall on Hunter street last evening and the occasion was one of much enjoyment for all present. The attendance was very large, it being the annual social evening of the organization. Progressive euchre contests were won by Mr. P. Masterson and Miss Bogue. Dancing formed the latter part of the evening's program.

CENTRALS WON LIVELY CONTEST WITH 2-1 SCORE

School Boys Play Good Hockey in Exhibition game at Brock Street Rink

The teams of the South Central and Central school met in a lively game of hockey at the rink yesterday afternoon, the centre ward seven winning by 2—1, after leading at half time by 2—0. Parker scored the lonely tally for his team on a rink end rush. The youngsters put up an interesting contest, several of each team displaying exceptional ability in stickhandling, and in the fine points of the game. While the southerners had the better of the play, they could not connect with the nets.

For the winners Long at rover and Heaslip at point were always conspicuous, the latter doing a lot of useful work at his position. Smith, at point for the losers, although working the puck nicely at times, was inclined to take things too easy. Parker and Richardson were prominent and Moore was always pegging away at centre.

HOW SKIPS YEATES AND LONG WON DISTRICT HONORS

CUP GAMES AT LINDSAY

Lindsay Warder.

The two rinks from Peterborough curled two long games in the district cup competition yesterday and played again this morning. Yesterday afternoon Peterborough defeated Keene by 16 shots, while Lindsay beat Cannington by 11 shots. In the evening Peterborough put Campbellford out of the running by 14 shots and the curlers from the Electric City played Lindsay in the finals this morning.

The finals for the cup were played this morning when Peterborough defeated Lindsay after a hard fought battle by ten shots, both rinks being down. At the start of the play this morning Lindsay touched the chalk first, but ere a few rounds were played, the rinks from the east jogged ahead and maintained a lead throughout the game. The Peterborough rinks put up an excellent brand of curling and played the game well. The ice was a trifle greasy, but nevertheless good curling was in evidence at all stages. Although the Lindsay rinks curled well, their opponents deserve considerable praise.

Both Lindsay rinks finished on top yesterday, although Skip Fisher had a close game, winning out by one shot on the last end, when he counted three.

The visitors speak in the highest terms of the Lindsay curlers and return home to-day well pleased with the cup contests.

Below will be found the rinks and scores—

FIGHT TALK

Hugh McIntosh's determination to sail for Australia after the Langford-Lang fight in London on Feb. 18, has left the heavyweight situation in the air. It was believed that he would make an attempt to match Jack Johnson against Kaufman or the winner of the Langford-Lang affair, and it was also thought that he would put Tommy Burns against some big fighter. But with McIntosh out of the running in England, there seems to be no chance to see Johnson in action unless he agrees to visit Paris, France, where the promoters are ready to offer him a big bonus. The latest mails from England contain the statement that Lang will weigh at least 190 pounds for Langford, and will have plenty of backing. Langford will carry about 165 pounds, but as he is well known on the other side, he will doubtless receive plenty of support. In short, the English papers say that the Langford-Lang fight will be a heavy betting affair with the quotation being even money and take your pick. American sporting men will not be surprised if Langford scores a quick knockout, that is, if he does his level best.

"I understand that Abe Attell has been doing some talking," said Packy McFarland in New York yesterday. "If he thinks he has a chance with me in a ten-round bout I'll take him on whenever he is ready. I'll make 133 pounds at 3 o'clock for him, and if I can't knock him out I'll admit I don't know anything about myself."

Rudolph Unholz, fresh from a stay of two years in the Antipodes, is in Chicago, and announces that he will re-enter the fight game as soon as he can secure a suitable match. The Fighting Boer asserts he is in fine condition, and that he is planning to fight his way to the top of the lightweight heap. Australia, says Unholz, is a fighter's Utopia, and many are the tales he is telling of the favors shown boxers and fight promoters. Dave Smith, the Australian, who defeated Billy Papke, is no great fighter, according to Unholz, and is far out of the middleweight class, weighing 165 pounds. The defeat of Papke was largely due to lack of condition, says Unholz.

TRENTON PROTESTS

Claiming that Park was not Eligible to Play in Game Tuesday Night

The Trenton hockey club has protested the win of the locals here on Tuesday night, claiming that Park, who worked at centre was not eligible to play.

R. M. Glover, the secretary of the Peterborough Hockey Club, received the following telegram this morning:

The Trenton Hockey Club hereby files a protest against Park, who played centre for Peterborough against Trenton at Peterborough on Tuesday, January 24th, on the ground that the said Park does not come under the residence rule (page eleven, paragraph 3), he being a student teacher and not a student at Moosejaw for the past two years, and did not leave that city until the latter part of September, 1910, as evidence the following wire from Moosejaw:

"Park left Saturday before Christmas for High School at Peterborough."

All there is to say at this end of the deal is that Park played under permit and certificate. The O.H.A. executive accepted the explanation as to that player's case.

EDMUNDS GETS PRETTY HARSH

Becomes Personal Instead of Simply Answering Challenge

Toronto News.

"Four-flusher" was about the mildest term used by Artie Edmunds, the "pocket edition," this morning, in referring to "Billy" Breen's challenge on behalf of a Peterborough unknown. Yesterday Breen wrote that he had a man whom he would match to throw Edmunds twice in an hour for a $100 side bet, in Peterborough. He also mentioned that Edmunds had been hurling challenges broadcast and cited the News of Saturday to prove his contention. In the latter connection Breen is wrong. Edmunds' contract with the New York Physical Culture firm stipulates that he must not engage in either boxing or wrestling bouts, and the little fellow is not looking for matches, either has he made any propositions that way. But at that he is willing to take a chance with Breen's unknown, but not before any club that the latter has anything to do with. He is ready to post his money with the Sporting Editor of the News whenever Breen comes to time, even if it costs him his position. Edmunds' opinion of the Peterborough trainer would not look well in print.

YANKEE ROGERS FOULED ROLLER

Police Interfered and Made Rogers Release a Strangle Hold

Toronto, January 26. — The hardest, most exciting wrestling bout ever contested in this city was that at Riverdale last night, when Dr. B. F. Roller, the Seattle physician-grappler won from "Yankee" Rogers after one hour and twelve minutes of all the wiles and strategies known to the ancient game of pull and haul. A scissors strangle brought the match to an end, Rogers refusing to break the hold after being told to do so by the referee until the police interfered. Inspector Miller and twenty officers were present. The inspector knows the game, and insisted on the match being discontinued, as soon as Rogers refused to break at the request of Referee Bob Harrison. The latter awarded the match to Dr. Roller.

It was announced from the mat that a syndicate of Toronto sporting men, headed by Tom Flanigan, were ready to stage the championship match with Gotch, and whoever might be selected as his opponent. They will post $10,000 at once and produce $20,000 more on the day of the match. It is stipulated that the latter take place in an open air arena in this city not later than May 15th.

PUCKLAND

Local hockey fans are asking "Are the Trenton team quitters." That's a rather hard question, but there is this much to say, that in Tuesday's game, the man rushing ploughed right into the Peterboro defence, where he could have shot from outside.

With Turpin back in the game, Cobourg ought to win out to-morrow night. Look out for squeals.

Recent games in local leagues have been faster and cleaner than those played the first of the season. The teams are settling down and playing the game as it should be.

And now will a rooters' club be organized. Kingston has a real live one and why not Peterborough. With two likely looking district winners, the fans here are away behind.

Bouncer Brouse, of the Kingston Frontenacs, has not had a penalty trip this season.

Some of the Midgets are to-day nursing injuries received at the hands of the Cobourgites. The lakeshoresports have achieved an unsavory reputation for shady sporting tactics and last night they lived up to their advance notices.—Lindsay Post.

The Pillpounders had the better of the contest with the Hardwaremen at the rink last night, and won out in a fairly good game, with a score of 6—2.

Lyons, in goal for the pig iron seven, shaped up nicely in the warm-up, but the gallery had it on him during the game.

A report says Fred Doherty may be released by Renfrew.

Eddie Gould broke into the game with Midland intermediates last night and helped his team take the district at Barrie 6—4.

RECORD SCORE.

Kingston, Jan. 25.—The Picton and Frontenac juniors met here tonight in the final O.H.A. game in Group No. 9. Frontenacs won in a canter, the score at half time being 12 to 0, and at full time 33 to 2, which is a scoring record for a league game here. Frontenacs win the group without a loss, and have a total of 63 goals to 11 against them.

At the races yesterday Hal. Direct won the free-for-all in straight heats, and Tom Tariff took second in the 2.30 class.

BRIDEGROOM WAS REALLY A SIGHT

Auto Caught Between two Cars Just Before Wedding

Chicago, Jan. 25 — An automobile crash at Forty-seventh Street boulevard in which the bridegroom, his parents and his best man were more or less seriously injured, was not enough to prevent the marriage of Dr. Frank Shaffner to Miss Beatrice Welt.

Dr. Shaffner, with his wedding suit torn up and dirty and several bruises showing on his face, took the hand of his bride and answered the questions put by the minister and went through the ceremony as though he had not been in any mix-up. The parents of Dr. Shaffner had to be propped up in chairs, but they gave their blessings to the bride and groom.

At the boulevard, the chauffeur swerved his machine from one car track to the other to avoid a collision with a car but failed to see a car approaching from behind. The machine was caught between the two cars and crushed to splinters.

The double-header indoor baseball games, scheduled for to-night, are called off.

AFTER SUFFERING YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fox Creek, N.B.—"I have always had pains in the loins and a weakness there, and often after my meals my food would distress me and cause soreness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, digestion is better, and I can walk with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it, as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers." — Mrs. WILLIAM BOURQUE, Fox Creek, N.B., Canada.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

ASSESSMENTS IN NEW YORK

Some Marvellous Facts Are Revealed by the List

New York, Jan 25.—New York's new assessment lists reveal some marvelous facts. Perhaps the most surprising is that only four residents of New York are taxed for more than $1,000,000 on personal property. They are Mrs Margaret Sage, widow of Russel Sage; Andrew Carnegie, John D. Rockefeller and William K. Vanderbilt.

Mrs. Sage and Mr. Carnegie head the list with assessments of $5,000,000 each Mr. Carnegie for many years paid the largest assessment. One year ago the list was temporarily headed by Emma B. Kennedy, whose assessment was $6,000,000. This year her assessment is reduced to $250,000. Against Mr. Rockefeller is charged $2,500,000 worth of personal property and Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt gets off with the even $1,000,000. John D. Rockefeller, jr., seems almost to be a pauper, He is assessed for but $250,000, while six members of the Vanderbilt family, other than W. K., get off with a combined total of $1,430,000.

In the real estate assessment some great advances are noticed. The Pennsylvania Railroad station takes first place on the list, with a jump in a single year from $8,500,000 to $19,000,000. The Waldorf-Astor still stands at the head of the hotel list with an assessed valuation of $13,475,000. The site alone of the Alpine Apartment is $4,500,000. Remarkable rises in value are shown in the Herald Square section and in Fifth avenue. The site of the Madison Square Gardens is assessed this year at $2,600,000. Senator William A. Clarke's residence in Fifth avenue is assessed for $4,000,000, which is the largest single levy on a residence. J. Pierpont Morgan's residence is assessed at $2,430,000.

Assessments on the downtown skyscrapers and the big corporation buildings also shows sharp upward movement. The increase is the largest since 1903, when Seth Low initiated the movement to equalize taxation.

Some Eccentric Laws

12—Trenton (Armstrong) 1 mjm

According to the Green Bag, Norway not long ago passed an Act to the effect that any woman wishing to wed must first present to the authorities a certificate showing that she is competent in the arts of cooking, sewing, knitting and embroidery.

Germany has an intelligent and practical method of dealing with men who ill-treat their wives. Instead of sending them to jail for a continuous period, as is done in this country, and thus depriving the family of the man's wages, for that time, the German offender is arrested on Saturday afternoon as he leaves his work and held in prison until time for work on Monday morning.

This plan is followed until he has served the number of days of his sentence. During the period in which the German offender spends the week-ends away from his home his earnings are handed to his wife.

In Belgium they place a premium on marriage by allowing a married man two votes at an election, as against the single man's one. In Madagascar one must be a father or pay for the default. If a man is unmarried or childless at the age of 25 he must contribute annually $3 75 to the support of the State, and each woman who has remained single or is childless at 24 is taxed $1 80 per year.

In Austria a heavy fine is imposed upon any actor who wears a military or ecclesiastical costume on the stage. In Germany such costumes may be worn but the actors will find themselves in a serious situation if they are not absolutely correct down to the last loop and button.

CANNOT BE ARRESTED.

Ambassadors and Their Servants Are Immune.

Except on felony charges peers of the realm are immune from arrest. If they are arrested for treason or felony they can demand to be tried by their fellow nobles, and should they have the misfortune to be sentenced to death they can exact the use of a silken cord instead of the hempen rope commonly used by the public hangman.

The members and servants of every one of the foreign embassies to the Court of St. James's cannot be touched by British laws, even if they commit murder. The official headquarters of the representatives of foreign powers in London are the territory of the particular country or state which the embassy in question represents. This being so, the laws passed by Parliament and the judges, being operative only in the dominions of the King, have no effect upon the persons residing in the little foreign "countries."

The reason why ambassadors and their servants have this advantage over the average Britisher is that during the reign of Queen Anne a statute was passed by the law makers owing to an imbroglio arising from the seizure of a Russian envoy's effects for debt. This law, which was passed for "the preserving of the privileges of Ambassadors and other public Ministers of foreign Princes and States," has it that any person "presuming to prosecute any writ or process for the arrest or imprisonment of an Ambassador or his domestics shall be deemed a violator of the law of nations."

Though exemption from criminal courts is granted to foreign diplomats and their servants, there is no written law declaring the fact. It is merely a privilege of international law. Immunity from criminal jurisdiction was not always granted to these persons, for it is on record that a secretary of the Portuguese Legation, who was arrested for killing a man in the Royal Exchange, was tried by jury, found guilty, and sentenced to death.

Although it is generally known that the laws of Britain cannot affect in any way the King or any member of his family, most people are not aware that no civil action can possibly lie against the servants of His Majesty, including lords of the bedchamber and other officers of the household. The employes of the King while being immune from arrest, cannot go free if they commit a crime, however. All misdeeds committed within the precincts of the royal palaces and residences are tried by special courts presided over by the Lord Steward, Treasurer, Comptroller, and Master of the Household.

Any crimes committed by the servants at Buckingham Palace are adjudicated on by the Board of Green Cloth, whose powers are limited to a circuit of twelve miles from Whitehall; while the Court of Marshalsea, which dates from the reign of Henry VIII., administers justice between the King's servants at Windsor and elsewhere. Both courts are ruled over by the high officials stated.

Members of Parliament cannot be arrested while actually within the precincts of the Commons, and they are immune while Parliament is in session and for forty days before and after. It will be remembered that in 1888 a Metropolitan police officer made an attempt to arrest a member of the Irish Parliamentary party in Palace Yard. His colleagues were greatly upset at the incident, and the adjournment of the House was moved, a committee being appointed to consider the alleged breach of privilege. The breach was finally affirmed, and the unfortunate officer was severely censured by Parliament.

Barristers on circuit, solicitors engaged on a case, and witnesses in any case are temporarily protected from arrest, and clergymen enjoy the same privilege while actually conducting divine service.

Indian Sedition Trials.

The activity of the Calcutta police in the search for arms continues. One night recently the authorities raided a house in Northern Calcutta, and found two revolvers, some gun barrels, and a quantity of cartridges. The occupants of the house are two Bengali youths, who, however, succeeded in effecting their escape. Information received by the police pointed to this house being the centre of a new conspiracy. Meanwhile the special tribunal is engaged upon the trial of thirteen respectable Bengalis from Khulna, whom the Government charge with conspiracy to wage war against the King. When these proceedings are over, the tribunal will try the sensational Howrah conspiracy case. There are forty-five accused, some of whom are men of wealth and position. All the preliminary hearings will be held in camera. The nature of the charges and also the evidence is unknown.

Dr. Johnson's Fruit Appetite.

No man ever welcomed the return of the fruit season more heartily than did Dr. Johnson. Of strawberries and cream he declared that he could never have enough, though in his later years he devoured enormous quantities of them. A voracious eater at any time, Johnson's appetite for fruits was limitless. Mrs. Thrale says that he used to eat seven or eight peaches before he began his breakfast. Lucy Porter, at Litchfield, used always to keep the best gooseberries on the bushes in her garden until Johnson came down to pick them.

Using Left-Over Apples.

There is money even in poor quality apples, and Australian growers are deriving considerable profit from apples formerly thrown away. An apple-evaporating plant has been introduced, and a new industry started, which last year yielded profit of over $5,000,000. The machines pare and core the apples, which are then sliced into chips and dried. Even the cores and skin peelings are utilized, being exported to France for the manufacture of vinegar, ~~[illegible]~~ etc.

State ownership of the milk and produce business is being asked by the Social Democrats of Wisconsin.

THE HANDICAP OF BIGNESS

So many people who have thought that mere bigness is in itself a fact that would enable mail order houses to compete successfully with local merchants, would do well to consider that there is another side to bigness, that in many ways it is a handicap and adds materially to the expenses in handling even the smallest order that is received. To the person who is really interested in getting at the facts of the case, we would say—compare the expense of the mail order house item by item, per cent. by cent., with those of the merchant in this city, and you may be helped to realize what that other side of bigness means. Take into consideration the infinite amount of details necessary for handling even the smallest orders received by these large concerns. Trace the orders through the hands of mail openers, cashiers, checkers, packers, more checkers, billers, more checkers, shippers, teamsters, express and railroad companies, claim departments, more checkers and so on. Consider what happens in a Peterborough store when a purchase is made and make your own comparisons. The local merchant aims to make a fair profit on his. Do you really think the mail order houses are in business for any other purpose than to make a profit.

Of course, we realize that there is a difference in capital running up into the millions, and that running into the thousands only, but do not forget that the millions are operating over the entire country from Halifax to Vancouver, and that the thousands are concentrated right here in this city. Do not forget that bigness brings difficulties as well as advantages, and at a certain point the difficulties overshadow the advantages.

And while considering bigness, do not forget this point. There are approximately twenty-five thousand retail stores in Canada doing business of, say, ten thousand dollars a year each. That makes a total business of two hundred and fifty million dollars. All the mail order houses in the country are not doing a tithe of that business. Do you think the manufacturer or wholesaler is going to sacrifice his interest in that two hundred and fifty million dollar business by selling cheaper to mail order houses than he does to the regular merchant? Would it pay him to do so even if he could? As a matter of fact he cannot do so, because he gives the lowest possible price to the regular trade. Do you think the local store elephant is going to be swallowed by the mail order flea?

It is undoubtedly true that some mail order houses offers certain leaders at less than cost in order to attract orders for other goods at some thing more than regular prices. It would not pay to send for the cheap article alone, so you make up an order. If you bought the same line throughout from your local dealer, you would save money on the transaction. And so we say, BUY AT HOME. No mail order house has any interest in the little red school houses in your district. Not one of them ever helped you in distress or let an account stand over till after harvest or pay day. What one of them has ever contributed a cent to our churches, or helped make better roads in or around Peterborough? Does the owner of mail order houses ever meet you in church or at lodge. Do they increase the value of your property or your farm? Is there anything besides dollars in this world if so, make your dollars help those other things and spend your money in Peterborough.

DOG GUARDED THE SUICIDE

Faithful Canine Kept Watch Over Dead Master

A striking and pathetic example of the well-known fidelity of the dog was provided yesterday by a tragic incident which occurred in Bartholomew-close, an old-world part of the city, lying behind St. Bartholomew's Hospital. For several hours a fine bulldog named "Vic" guarded the dead body of her master with such tenacity that the police were finally obliged to kill her with poisoned meat to enable them to remove the man's body to the City Mortuary.

The man, who is said to have been an unemployed draper's assistant named Hyatt, had been a lodger at the European Cafe for the last year, occupied two rooms—a bedroom and a sitting-room—on the first floor. His breakfast was placed outside his door as usual yesterday morning, but when his lunch was taken up about two o'clock it was found that the earlier meal had not been touched. Through a hole in the locked door the lodger was seen lying on the floor in a pool of blood, the dog keeping watch over him. The faithful animal would allow no one to go near her master, and ultimately the police were summoned.

When the officers arrived they broke a panel of the door and tried to entice the dog away, but all their pacific overtures failed. Then, with a hooked pole, obtained from Smithfield market, they attempted to catch the animal and drag her from the room or force her into a corner. "Vic" however, refused to be caught, and when not engaged in dodging her would-be captors sat upon the body of her master. Another bull dog belonging to a neighbor named Bishop was introduced into the room, but "Vic" displayed not the slightest interest in the proceedings. The expediency of shooting the poor animal was discussed, but the idea was abandoned in favor of using poison.

A saucer of milk poisoned with strychnine was then put into the room, but the dog upset it, and did not lap it from the floor. At length a piece of poisoned meat was thrown in, and "Vic" succumbing to hunger, ate it, and the rest was silence for a time. It was nearly 7 o'clock before the police were able to enter the room and take out the bodies of the faithful "Vic" and her master. It had taken the combined resources of an inspector, two sergeants, two detectives, and four constables to secure an entry to the room and the death of the bull dog. The man, it was found, had cut his throat.—London Standard.

THE TWINS WON'T GO TO SCHOOL

Mother Wants Them Sent to the Reformatory

Montreal, Jan. 26.—Those terrible twins, Antoine and Joe Renaud, fourteen years of age, were brought, at the request of their mother, Mrs Eugene Renaud, of 84 Amherst street, before Recorder Dupuis in private hearing yesterday. She says that she is unable to make the boys obey her, and that they refuse to go to school, and are always up to some mischief, either at home or in the neighborhood. She asks that they be sent to the reform school or that something be done to correct their evil habits.

The mother is a poor woman who has to work hard to support her family of five children, for the father has been in prison for about two months, and she is left alone to bear the burden of a family. The boys first showed signs of becoming refractory about a year ago. It seemed to develop in both of them about the same time, and since the mother is left in sole charge of the household they have been getting worse and worse, until driven to desperation, she had them arrested for vagabondage. They made life miserable for the other children in the house, never missing an opportunity to tease them and amuse themselves at their expense. They never forsook each other on any occasion and will probably both go to the reform school together on the 31st of this month, when the Recorder is to sentence them.

Isolating the Sick

There is more ignorance abroad than one would suppose with regard to the need of isolation, which fact probably accounts for the large number of infectious diseases there are at present in our city.

Contagious and infectious diseases cannot be too quickly isolated in order to prevent their further spread. As early as possible the patient should be put in a sizable room that may be well aired and kept separate from the other part of the house.

Everything should be removed that is not absolutely necessary for patient and nurse, especially upholstered furniture or draperies. There should be no carpets. Matting that may be removed unless they are to be burned when the case is finished.

Only plain wooden chairs and tables should be used. The bedstead, bed and bedding should be such that they may be soaked in disinfectants or burned. The doors to the room should be kept closed as much as possible, and the doorway should be further guarded by a sheet, so hung that it covers the entire space before the door. This should be wet every few minutes—kept wet constantly with a disinfecting solution.

If possible, the room adjoining the sick room should be given to the use of the nurse. There should be sheets at the doors, and it should be prepared in the same manner as the sick room so that it may be disinfected. Here the nurse should eat, sleep, change her clothing and disinfect herself before going into any other part of the house or out of doors.

Only the doctor and the nurse should have access to the room. If any visitors or members of the family enter it even for a short time, they should wash their bodies, also the hair, in a disinfecting solution and disinfect their clothing. Such solutions should be abundantly supplied about the sick room. All articles like clothing and dishes taken from the room should first be disinfected. The clothing should afterwards be washed separate from the other clothing of the family. For handkerchiefs the patient may use pieces of old soft muslin which may be burned.

All articles should be brought to the door of the sick room and those that have been disinfected taken away from the sick room by servants, so that the nurse does not go through the house. The sick room should be well warmed, so that the windows may be freely opened to air.

At the determination of an attack the patient's body and hair should be washed in a disinfecting solution and fresh clothing put on before mingling with others. Then the room should be thoroughly disinfected, the paper removed from the walls, the floor and furnishings scrubbed with soap and water. A good method is to burn sulphur or formaldehyde in the room first, followed by the disinfecting wash.

Execution of a Rat

(MONTREAL WITNESS)

About the queerest means to kill a rat ever thought of, was taken by a conductor on an M. S. R. car this morning. At the corner of St. Catherine and St. Dominique Streets, he stepped out of the car, carrying a rat by the tail. It was very low, being able to wiggle but feebly. Then this resourceful man, who was also carrying a frown, went in front of the car, put the rat on the rail where he held it with the brushy end of the broom, and signalled the motorman to drive ahead. That worthy did so, slowly approaching the place of execution with his huge weapon. Death was almost instantaneous. The victim bore it heroically, squeaking but once.

The conductor had found the rodent in his car. After a manful hunt, with his broom as an instrument of offence to defence, he managed to subdue the rat until he was able to catch it. The hunt was very exciting, because the rat was nimble until the conductor had pounded it many times. Then he led it forth to the slaughter, and it went like a lamb.

THE GENUINE ALWAYS SUPERIOR TO THE IMITATION

The experienced buyer never permits the shrewd merchant to convince him that an imitation is superior to the genuine advertised article. In refusing a substitute he protects himself and the manufacturers who have expended enormous sums in giving the public information regarding their products.

Advertised articles have stood the test of public approval on their merits and materials embracing their make up The mere fact that they are imitated is competent testimony of their worth.

GREATEST JANUARY SALE

Reductions Are the Price We Pay for Greater Variety During the Selling Season

It is easy to see how that is—the more variety, the greater chance of having an overstock in some particular kinds—and herefore, reductions.

Every bit of a bargain which is offered at this sale is intrinsically worth all of the full price, but since we were too liberal in our buying, the opportunity comes to lop off a third and in some instances a half from the price.

Of course, we will have to take some losses, but our purpose is best served by selling quickly, and we are making concessions to do it.

KNOX CHURCH HELD ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of Knox church was held last night, with a large congregation present. After the opening exercises by the pastor, Rev. H. J. Keith, the secretary of the Board, Mr. J. W. Buyers, was called to the chair. Rev. Mr. Keith was elected as chairman. Reports from the various organizations were read, all showing a healthy condition financially and spiritually. Special mention might be made of the activities of the Ladies' Aid and the Sabbath school.

The Building Committee gave its report, showing that the new church complete, including land, cost $30,500. The building of the church had meant great sacrifice on the part of the members of the committee, and this has been realized by the congregation. A surprise was given to the committee when Dr. McCullough, on behalf of the congregation, presented each of the members of the committee with a handsome Bible, suitably inscribed. Those who received Bibles were Mr. A. McKenzie, chairman; Mr. H. McCannan, secretary-treasurer; Mr. H. Struther, Mr. D. Hamilton, Mr. H. P. Ego, Mr. J. F. Morrison, Mr. R. Mulligan, Rev. H. J. Keith, Mr. R. G. Clifford.

The chairman, Mr. McKenzie, made a few remarks, pointing out that the success of the committee was due to the way it had been supported by the people. The chairman and secretary-treasurer deserve special credit for their labors in connection with the task.

In accordance with a motion to increase the number of managers to 12, notice of which had been given a year ago, seven new managers were elected Mr. H. Struther, Mr. H. McCannan, Mr. W. J. Byers, Mr. Myles Lake, Mr. A. Coates, Mr J. Tully.

The election of chairman of the Board and treasurer of church was left to the Board of Managers.

Rep. on Hospital Board—Dr. J. M. McCulloch.

Rep. on Charity Board—Mr. F. W. Armstrong.

Missionary Treasurer—Mr. Wm. Watt.

Mr. J. W. Byers and Mr. Wm. Watt were re-elected as auditors for 1911.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the ladies.

A True Story in which Three Travellers were Lost

To be lost in the vicinity of the city where they have lived practically all their life was the experience of three prominent citizens on Tuesday. They left here to drive to Lakefield to visit friends, and after overcoming the difficulties that fell to the lot of inexperienced travellers in dealing with a strange horse, arrived at their destination. But on the return trip the stars must have been playing hide and seek. The driver took the wrong turn despite the frantic efforts of the horse to take what he knew to be the right direction. The party finally connected with the Warsaw road, and when only seven miles from the city were hopelessly lost. The poor animal was jerked one way and then another on to the frozen river and into snow banks. At last, becoming disgusted with the actions of his human freight, he took the bit and made for home, hauling the "silent three" to their own doorstep.

NEARLY TWO THOUSAND PEOPLE AT HORSE SHOW

A Splendid Program at the Armories—The Prize Winners.

The Horse Show held at the Armouries last night in connection with the short course in stock and seed judging, was in many ways a big success, and prospects for a greater show for Peterborough would appear to be exceedingly bright. There must have been nearly two thousand people present last night and the accommodation of the Armouries was taxed to its utmost. The large list of local and county entries and the interest displayed by the exhibitors and spectators will give President Leary and the Board of the Peterborough Fair something to work on and the next show will be a good one.

The judges were Messrs. C. F. Bailey, B.S.A., of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and J. Breen, New York, both thoroughly capable officials.

The exhibits of high-class horses by Hon. J. R. Stratton was a big feature on the program, which greatly pleased the large attendance and each exhibition was most heartily applauded.

The tug of war on horseback was won by the Third Prince of Wales Dragoons, with the 24th Field Battery as their opponents, and the wrestling match on horseback also went to the Dragoons. A tug of war between the right and left sections of the 57th band was won by the former.

The Fair officials wish to thank the exhibitors for the splendid response made and the citizens for their encouraging attendance. No money prizes were given only rosettes being given the winning horses.

Music was supplied during the evening by the 57th band.

FIGHT OVER TARIFF AGREEMENT WILL BE LONG AND SEVERE

FINANCE MINISTER FIELDING PRESENTS TARIFF DETAILS

Parliament Hears What He Has to Say in Defence of His Agreement With Taft.

Ottawa, Jan. 27.—Not since 1896 has the Parliament of Canada been confronted with such a situation as that presented by Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance yesterday, when on a motion to go into committee on ways and means for raising supply, communicated the result of the recent conferences at Ottawa and Washington on the question of reciprocal trade with the United States. The statement of the Minister of Finance was to the effect that an understanding had been reached with the representatives of the United States, and provided that an arrangement had been reached with the republic covering articles to be granted free entry into both countries and those subject to a common duty.

It was a historical episode. It was the first appearance of the Minister of Finance in the House of Commons this session, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself took occasion to leave the House and escort his chief lieutenant into the chamber. The galleries were crowded with eager, impatient listeners. Mr. Fielding spoke for nearly two hours with remarkable vivacity and power.

Mr. Fielding presented to Parliament the basis of an agreement with the United States not a treaty, but simply an exchange of letters, whereby both countries agree to adopt reciprocal and mutual legislation with respect to certain articles of exchange which are enumerated in schedules. Some are free, some are dutiable. Under the arrangement the legislative tribunals in each are free to deal with this and extraneous questions as are then deemed advisable. The agreement is neither binding or permanent, but founded, as the Minister of Finance said, "on mutual faith, mutual good will, mutual conviction that the thing is best for the benefit of both countries."

The fact is obvious that it is a singular departure from the accepted policy of Canada, if not a reversal to the condition faced twenty years ago, when the Dominion embarked on an independent policy in fiscal matters with a view of building up home industries.

The remark of the leader of the Opposition pointed out the instability of arrangement, and seemed to be inclined to the view that in the final analysis it was a matter of directing Canadian trade east and west, instead of north and south. The debate was adjourned after Mr. Borden spoke and in the meanwhile an opportunity will be given to inquire into the advantages or otherwise of the proposed measure of reciprocal trade.

Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, in moving the House into committee on ways and means, said.

"The action of this Government in consenting to reopen negotiations with a view to bringing about if possible a satisfactory reciprocal trade arrangement, has been very severely criticied in many quarters. From that fact we may properly infer that there must be some people in this Dominion of Canada who hold the opinion that the commercial policy of the ninety-two million people who live south of us is of no concern to the inhabitants of this Dominion.

"The ninety-two million people to the south are willing to acknowledge that they are interested in the commercial policy of Canada, and we representing eight million people, are not ashamed to confess that we have the deepest concern in the policy which these people may adopt in relation to their commerce with the world at large. It is because we have that feeling that there is a mutual interest, that we have entered upon the negotiations as to which it is my privilege now to address you."

Mr. Fielding paid a tribute to the services of Mr. Bryce, British ambassador at Washington, who assisted the negotiations directly between representatives of Canada and the United States. He said Mr. Bryce had given his cordial sympathy and cooperation at every step. Mr. Fielding then reviewed the tariff "war scare" of last spring, saying that while some persons believed President Taft never would have applied the maximum tariff to Canada, the President was helpless and Canada merely gave him a decent excuse for avoiding it by making concessions which were of no earthly importance."

Mr. Fielding, proceeding, said that early in the proceedings at Ottawa it was decided if anything was done it should be in the nature of mutual legislation, and not in the binding form of a treaty.

[illegible] will, therefore, [illegible] in the document which I shall read presently to the House. If this arrangement commends itself to your judgement and is found to be advantageous, it will continue, but if on reasonable trial it is found in any way to be unfavorable to Canada, the Government and the Parliament of to-day are absolutely free at any time to change the arrangement, and nobody will have any right to complain."

"The next point is that we have arranged that there shall be a large free list. We have agreed upon a schedule containing a large number of articles which are to be reciprocally free. These are chiefly what are called natural products, though there are some things in them which would be hardly classified in that way.

"In another schedule we have provided a rather numerous list of items on which there shall be a common rate of duty in both countries."

R. L. Borden: "If it is not in the nature of a treaty, how is this arrangement to be carried out?"

Mr. Fielding: "My hon. friend will see as I proceed, it is not a binding treaty in any shape or form. The arrangements rests on mutual faith, mutual conviction that the thing is for the benefit of the two countries. Before dealing with the schedules in detail, I want to give an illustration how we have been able to reach common ground.

Mr. Fielding then moved, in part:

That it is expedient to amend the customs tariff of 1907, and to provide as follows:

(1) That the articles, the growth, product or manufacture of the United States, specified in schedule A, shall be admitted into Canada free of duty, when imported from the United States.

(2) That the articles, the growth, product or manufacture of the United States, specified in schedules B. and D. shall be admitted into Canada upon payment of the rates of duty specified in the said schedules, when imported from the United States.

That the advantages hereby granted to the United States shall extend to any and every other foreign power which may be entitled thereto, under the provisions of any treaty or convention with his majesty.

That the advantages hereby granted to the United States shall extend to the United Kingdom and the several British colonies and possessions with respect to their commerce with Canada.

The elaborate schedules of which the following is a summary were then presented.

[illegible] chief feature of the proposed

HARRIMAN'S LIFE DREAM

New York, Jan 26.—"If E. H. Harriman had lived he would have had a railroad around the world. This was one of his great ambitions. Another was to see the completion of the Panama Canal. If the Government had not taken up the task of constructing this great waterway, he would have built it himself."

These two secrets, showing the extent to which the late railroad man's ambitions were leading him at the time of his death were revealed last night by Otto H. Kuhn, of Kuhn, Loeb and Co., who was closely associated with Mr. Harriman for more than ten years.

SENTIMENT IN WASHINGTON IS BITTER IN ITS HOSTILITY

Not Much Chance of Congress Passing It—United Fight by Powerful Interests

Special to the Review.

Washington Jan. 27.—Powerful interests are arrayed against the ratification of the tariff agreement here, and what is regarded as very significant, the President has, so far, received no assurances from the leaders of the Republican party that they will support him. There is bound to be a great front in the opposition. The agricultural interests of the west, the fishing interests of the east, and a host of manufacturing interests will fight it bitterly. While a great deal of opposition was to be expected, it was not thought that the agreement would provoke such a bitter feeling. The congressmen and representatives of the border and northwestern states claim that their districts would be very much affected by reciprocal free trade, especially in agricultural products.

The concession by Canada on manufacturers are very small, but the United States manufacturers will oppose to the bitter end any ratification of the agreement giving, as it does, Canadian manufacturers in some lines a chance at the United States market.

It is regarded in Washington as very improbable that Congress will ratify the agreement by legislation, and that the effort will practically be abortive in actual results.

MRS. GREEN RETIRES

Management of Vast Fortune Given to Son

Special to The Review.

New York, Jan. 27 — Mrs. Hetty Green to-day handed over all her vast interests to her son, retiring from the active management of her vast fortune. It is estimated that this amounts to $100,000,000, and is composed of stocks, bonds, and real estate. Her son is over 40 years of age.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

James Nash, a miner, was killed at Glace Bay by the fall of a mass of coal.

Sneak thieves are operating in Niagara Falls, and the police are looking for three foreigners suspected.

Scarlet fever is epidemic in Manitoba, several hundred cases having been reported. The Board of Health has issued a warning to the health officers.

The C.P.R. steamer Tees went ashore on Goodland Island, Darkley Sound. The U. S. revenue cutter Tohoma, called by wireless, went to assist the Tees.

The steamer Cottage City, running out of Seattle, bound for Skagway, struck on Valdez Island, in the Gulf of Georgia, 100 miles north of Vancouver yesterday.

A man who formerly worked for Dr. Beattie Nesbitt told the Hamilton police that he had seen and spoken to the doctor in that city. He was disguised as a priest.

Sir William Mackenzie is reported to have been robbed by his car porter of $1,000 at Ottawa. The man was followed to Windsor, where he gave up the money and was let go.

Flags of fishing craft in Gloucester harbor are being flown at half-mast, union down to-day, to signal the sentiments of their owners regarding the provision of the proposed reciprocity treaty.

For the first time in the history of aviation an aeroplane rose from the water yesterday at San Diego, sailed about, and returned to the starting point, where is landed on the water. This feat was achieved by Glenn H. Curtiss.

Manitoba farmers, in convention at Brandon, cheered the announcement of the tariff agreement with the United States. They say it will make a difference of ten cents on wheat, and the free entry of cattle to Chicago will solve the freight problem.

THE SAME INTERESTS

This is Taft's Reason for Reciprocial Agreements

Washington, Jan. 27.—"Identity of interest of two peoples linked together by race, language, political institutions and geographical proximity" President Taft gives as the chief reasons for such reciprocity as he recommends in his special message yesterday.

"While equivalency should be sought in an arrangement of this character, an exact balance of financial gain is neither imperative nor attainable," he said.

"The path having been opened," he continues, "for the improvement of commercial relations, a reciprocal trade agreement is the logical sequence of all that has been accomplished in disposing of matters of a diplomatic and controversial character. The identity of interest of two peoples linked together by race, language, political institutions, and geographical proximity offers the foundation.

"A far-sighted policy requires that if we can enlarge our supply of natural resources, and especially of food products and the necessities of life, without substantial injury to any of our producing and manufacturing classes, we should do so now. We have on the north of us a country contiguous to ours for three thousand miles, with natural resources of the same character as ours, which have not been drawn upon as ours have been, and in the development of which the conditions as to wages and character of the wage earners and transportation to market differ but little from those prevailing with us."

President Taft holds that a commercial agreement with Canada is not a violation of the protective principle, as that has been authoritatively announced by those who uphold it. "Our common boundary line of three thousand miles in itself must make a radical distinction between our commercial treatment of Canada and of any other country," he says.

The President says that the Canadians "soon must decide whether they are to regard themselves as isolated permanently from our markets by a perpetual wall, or whether we are to be commercial friends. If we give them reason to take the former view," he adds, "can we complain if they adopt methods denying access to certain of their natural resources except upon conditions quite favorable to us? A notable instance of such a possibility may be seen in the conditions surrounding the supply of pulpwood and the manufacture of print paper, for which we have made a conditional provision in the agreement, believed to be equitable. Should we, now, therefore, before the policy has become too crystalized and fixed for change, meet them in a spirit of real concession, facilitate commerce between the two countries and thus greatly increase the natural resources available to our people."

Quebec's Budget Under Criticism.

Quebec, Jan. 27.—In the Lower House the budget speech was under criticism at both the afternoon and evening sessions, and at midnight, when adjournment was agreed to, neither the leader of the Opposition, Mr. Tellier, nor Premier Gouin had been heard. The debate was continued yesterday. Messrs. Armand Levergne, Gault, Cousineau and Jean Prevost put the arguments of the Opposition in their best and most effective form.

The colonization methods, the distribution of school funds in a way which gave election patronage to the Government, and the way that liabilities and assets were figured up in the budget, were strongly attacked from the Opposition side.

Mr. Jean Prevost brought the day's discussion to a close at midnight. Mr. Prevost went over the colonization policy of the Government, claiming it might be made more effective, and that not enough attention was paid to the French-Canadians who were lost to the province by emigraiton to Ontario and the United States.

Masked Bandits.

Los Angeles, Jan. 27.—Yelling like Indian warriors and firing promiscuously from revolvers in both hands, two masked bandits boarded an inbound Beach suburban car on the outskirts of Santa Monica on Wednesday night, robbed 22 passengers, seriously wounded one of them, and were forced to flee by a single shot fire through the doorway by a passenger.

This shot wounded one of the robbers, and later the injured bandit was captured when he attempted to board a car to come into the city for treatment. He gave the name of Roy Fox, 19 years old.

Chimes Subscriptions Should be Paid

A second contribution has been received from the Peter Hamilton Works, coming from twenty-five employees the amount being $7.25.

It is important that the remaining subscriptions which have not been paid in should be attended to with the least possible delay. The receipts and cash received up to date is a little over $5,000.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

Toronto Saturday Night Makes Answer to Examiner's Statement

The following reference, appearing in Toronto Saturday Night, to the denial by the Examiner of Hon. J. R. Stratton's connection with the Farmers' Bank deposits, will be of interest to Peterborough people.

The Peterborough Examiner of Monday last published an editorial in which it was stated that a story printed in Saturday Night's financial columns to the effect that the Traders' Bank had warned the Canadian Bankers' Association that the Farmers' Bank was borrowing money for its necessary deposit at Ottawa, was "an impudent falsehood from beginning to end." It also asserted that it was "concocted" for the purpose of injuring Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P., who, in addition to his other interests, happens to own the Examiner. No doubt the editorial was prompted by excessive zeal on the part of Mr. Stratton's editor, since only the most incidental reference was made to that gentleman. Saturday Night refuses to believe that Mr. Stratton who is conversant with all the facts, would have passed the editorial or consented to its insertion. He, of all men, knows perfectly well that the main facts contained in the item were correct. The author of the editorial, however, seems to have some inside information, for he states that the deposit of $250,000 was paid through the Bank of Montreal and not through the Union Bank. This is true, and Saturday Night is happy to make the correction. This error does not alter the essential truth of the story, which was not "concocted" and not an "impudent falsehood," but a story the accuracy of which is known to many prominent bankers in Toronto.

WHAT LOCAL BUSINESS MEN THINK OF THE TARIFF DEAL

Some of the Manufacturers Hurt—Most Refuse Opinion Until Further Study of Figures.

The Review tried to asertain what the local business men thought of the tariff agreement, as presented in the House of Commons yesterday by Mr. Fielding. As most business men had not seen the details until this morning, and had not had time to study out the figures, they were loath to express an opinion on what the effect of the agreement would be.

There was a general trend of opinion however, that the government had sacrificed business interests of the east in favor of agricultural interests in the west. The reduction on the duties on manufactured goods, and the wiping out of protection in some cases, came as a great surprise to most of the business men.

The tariff changes will not affect Peterborough as intimately as it will affect Toronto or Hamilton, for instance. The business men here seemed to think that they were lucky in escaping a heavy blow at their industries.

JAMES HAMILTON.

Jas. Hamilton, of the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Company, said that the reduction of five per cent. on farm machinery certainly wouldn't have a good effect on Canadian manufacturers of farm implements. But the actual business returns alone would show definite results. The government made some concessions to farm implement manufacturers some time ago, but they were so slight they were of no advantage to the smaller firms. The question was, would the Dominion Government give further concessions to Canadian manufacturers.

W. H. DENHAM.

"I don't think the changes in the tariff will make any difference in our business," said W. H. Denham, superintendent of the local plant of the Quaker Oates Company in this city. He stated that he had only hurriedly reviewed the revised tariff scale, but he thought that the changes in the tariff on oats would have no effect on the business of the company, as far as the local plant was concerned.

H. MORGAN.

H. Morgan, of the Peterborough Hardware Company, said that the tariff amendments would have no direct effect that he knew of at present on the retail hardware business.

T. F. MATTHEWS.

T. F. Matthews manager of the local branch of the Geo. Matthews Co., said he didn't like the tariff scale regarding the importing of meats into Canada from the United States. The duty on dressed pork coming from the United States is reduced from 3 cents to 2 1-4 cents per pound. Mr. Matthews stated it was a little too soon after the announcement of the changes to give a comprehensive statement concerning the effect the reduced tariff would have on the pork packing industry in Canada, but it would be a serious one, he thought.

WAS OUT OF THE CITY.

James Kendry, president of the Auburn Woollen Company, was out of the city when the Review rang up the mills, and nobody in the office of the company cared to take the responsibility of expressing an opinion.

A. E. COULTHART.

A. E. Coulthart, president of the Colonial Weaving Co., said the tariff changes would have no bearing on the business of the Colonial Weaving Co., as far as he could see by examining the revised list.

Brockville, Jan. 27.—Fines and costs totalling $8[illegible] were imposed in the Brockville police court yesterday on two men, arrested for being drunk while on the prohibited list, and two others who supplied them with liquor. At Delta, in Leeds County, two justices of the peace salted a stage driver named F. Stafford $125 for taking orders and delivering whisky in a local option district.

Sbaretti a Cardinal?

Ottawa, Jan. 27.—A private cable from Rome yesterday announces that Mgr. Sbaretti, formerly papal delegate to Canada, and now secretary of the congregations of religions in the United States, will be a candidate for the cardinalate at the next consistory. Recent deaths having reduced the number of cardinals in Curia to 20, it is expected the consistory will be held this year.

CITIZEN BORDEN.

Sir Frederick Borden is paid a large and copious salary as the head of the militia affairs of the country. As Minister of Militia, Sir Frederick's smiling countenance is missed in the House of Commons, and the void was so aching that some of the Conservative members inquired why he was away—why he was not attending to his duties as a minister of the crown.

The inquiries caused considerable amusement and speculation, as Sir Frederick's jaunts are not usually made without a purpose. But Sir Wilfrid put all minds at rest. Sir Frederick was in Nova Scotia, in King's County, where there is a bye-election on. Inasmuch as the Liberals hold only 33 out of 38 Nova Scotia seats in the local legislature, and being in some apprehension as to the safety of the government, they imported a federal minister. Adam Crosby, of Halifax, in the House, said that he thought if the gallant Sir Frederick would stay in parliament and mind his business, it would suit the occasion better, since there are a lot of expensive militia affairs to be considered.

Sir Frederick may be a citizen of King's county, and take a deep interest in its political representation, but he is paid for being the Minister of Militia, not for being a citizen of King's county.

SINGLE TAX WIN

That is quite an illustration of the value of the single tax system which Edmonton has just afforded. The Hudson's Bay Company has held a large district in the heart of Edmonton for years, waiting for the unearned increment. The price it wanted for the land was high, and the big place was retarding the city's growth, being held vacant purely for speculative purposes.

When the single tax system became operative the assessment on the property was places at $750 a foot frontage, the total being no less than $332,530 The appeal lost, and now the Hudson's Bay Company announces that it will put the division on the market in the spring Edmonton regards the move as a great triumph, since it gets rid of the big speculative holding, and the land, with good buildings on it, will help the business section along wonderfully An increment tax is mooted, and the abolition of the business tax, and Edmonton promises to be the pioneer of the Henry George movement

The system of taxing improvements certainly does tend to discourage them, and the system of placing a nominal valuation on the land, such as most cities do, certainly does retard development and building progress Peterborough furnishes some very fine examples of this.

CANADA'S FIELD CROPS

The December bulletin of the census and statistics branch of the Ottawa Department of Agriculture gives the annual estimate of the production of field crops in Canada for the year 1910, showing them to have been worth over five hundred million dollars.

It must not be supposed that in this statement "Field Crops" include all the productions of the Canadian farms for they omit the products of dairying, stock raising and fruit growing,—the two former of which in some parts of the Dominion equal or exceed the value of the "field crops," while in Ontario and Nova Scotia fruit growing is a most important and valuable industry.

The field crops, however, are the mainstay of the farming industry, taking the country in its entirety, and they generally indicate the situation in which the farmers field themselves.

On the whole, in 1910, the result was satisfactory. The area under crop is placed at 32,711,000 acres, compared with 30,065,000 acres in 1909.

The value of the product is put at $507,185,000 in 1910, compared with $557,723,000 in 1909.

The figures are great. In a general way, the east did better than in 1909, while the west did not do so well.

The details have interest in several ways. Wheat, the principal grain food for man, is often a secondary crop, so far as value is concerned, and sometimes it falls to third place. It did so last year, when the values of the various crops were estimated as follows:

Hay	$147,716,000
Oats	114,365,000
Wheat	112,973,000
Potatoes	33,446,000
Turnips, etc.	21,444,000
Barley	21,400,000
Fodder corn	11,957,000
Corn for husking	10,135,000
Mixed grains	9,953,000
Flax	7,898,000
Peas	5,754,000
Buckwheat	4,078,000
Rye	1,083,000
Beans	2,094,000
Sugar beets	887,000

More than half of the crop product, it will be seen, goes to the feeding of live stock, and when to this is added the value of the pastures an idea will be seen, goes to the feeding of live stock, and when to this is added the value of the pastures an idea will be had of the importance of the other great branch of the agricultural industry, that of live stock raising.

The $507,165,000 of field crops value for the whole country, according to the calculations of the bulletin, was contributed by the provinces as follows;

Ontario	$204,002,000
Quebec	97,007,000
Saskatchewan	84,138,000
Manitoba	55,306,000
Nova Scotia	21,208,000
New Brunswick	18,959,000
Alberta	16,582,000
Prince Edward Island	9,988,000

The facts as set out are sufficiently convincing as to the lead of the east in that branch of agriculture in which the west is strongest.

Seven-tenths of the field crops of Canada are produced on this side of Manitoba; four-tenths being credited to Ontario, not quite two-tenths to Quebec, and over one-tenth to the Maritime Provinces.

When to the value of the field crops is added that of the live stock industry and fruit growing the easterners' side of the scale will be still more heavily weighed.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Montreal says the frozen eggs must go. Probably they are strong enough to move themselves.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier accepted the first $25 "Farmers" Bank bill as a souvenir. It is a relic now.

Hon. Mr. Mackay, the valiant leader of the Ontario Opposition, says he will magnanimously refuse to put his finger into the Hydro-electric pie. Mr. Mackay's kindness is exceeded only by his inability—in this case.

The new French bank with a capital of $10,000,000 will be a strong institution. Being financed by Montreal and purely French capital, it introduces another phase of racial life into Canada, although in this case it is a great move toward further financial importance of Canada.

The C.P.R. will erect a sixteen story building at the corner of King and Yonge streets, Toronto, the highest in the British Empire. A few more of them, and Yonge street will be merely a devil-strip between skyscrapers.

Rev. John H. Jowett, called the greatest preacher of to-day, is leaving London to become a New York pastor at $12,000 a year and manse. He will be a wonderful preacher indeed if he can move New York by words.

Henri Bourassa says that Earl Grey tried to steer the Quebec clergy into imperialism. If the Duke of Connaught came, and was imperialistic—as he is bound to be—he would have to reckon with the valiant defender of the rights and autonomy of Canada. The Duke had better stay away, or "Henri will get him if he doesn't watch out."

The Gowganda conflagration originated while a fire sale was in progress. The Banker's Bay settlement was destroyed.

Hon. Col. J. S. Hendrie, addressing the 2nd Dragoons, banquetting at Hamilton, advocated compulsory military training.

Mrs. Gilbert and family will not move for a few weeks

THE DIVORCE COURTS SHAME

Record of Decrees Granted is Awful to Behold

In this week's Christian Guardian the proposal to make the divorce laws easier does not meet with approval. It states:

"The attempt is being made to increase the facilities for divorce in Canada, and the effort has caused the divorce statistics of the United States to be brought into the limelight, as showing what might possibly result in Canada, if divorce were made easy."

The article then shows that one divorce suit out of every five marriages is the unenviable record of Wayne County, Mich., for 1910, and practically all of these were applied for in Detroit Courts. During the year 6,600 marriage licenses were issued, and 1,425 divorce suits were filed.

SHAMEFUL RECORD

"This is surely a shameful and ominous record.

"In forty years there have been 431 divorces granted in Canada. During the same period there has been the astounding total of 1,270,000 divorces granted in the United States At present the divorce rate is one to every twelve marriages, but if the increase continues there will soon be one divorce to every six marriages."

"In England, not long ago, when testifying before the Royal Commission on divorce, Rev. Dr. Lidgett declared that divorce and separation are scarcely ever heard of amongst Wesleyan Methodist. We wonder if this does not apply also to world-wide Methodism! We have not the statistics before us, but we fancy that even in Wayne County, with its awful record of one divorce to every five marriages, the Methodists would not be found to contribute largely to the sum total of divorces.

But with such statistics before us, Canada can afford to move somewhat slowly in the direction of making divorce easier."

"I lost weight and had no appetite. I tried everything I ever heard of for piles, as I was willing to take anything to get relief It was useless, however, and I almost gave up in despair.

"One day a friend gave me a sample of Zam-Buk, and told me of a friend of his who had been cured. I decided to try Zam-Buk, and the relief I got was encouraging I used three boxes, and at the end of that time I was completely cured. I wish I could have got Zam-Buk years ago; it would have saved me a great deal of misery."

This is the first time in the history of aviation that six persons have been carried in an aeroplane. Two of them were compelled to stride the skids.

The biplane used by Sommer carried a total weight of about 1,000 pounds, including a supply of petrol.

The flight was made at an average height of 150 feet from the ground, the aviator never rising over 200 feet.

The C.N.R. will start building east from Port Arthur this spring, and may be running into Nepigon by December.

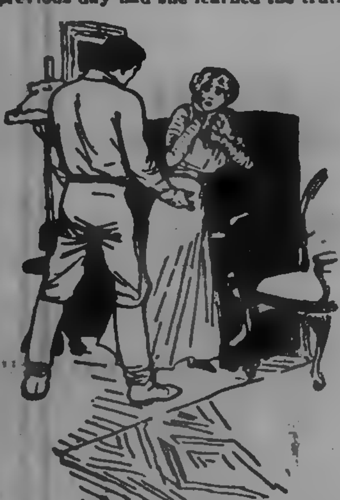
To face those people on the yacht had been an act of pure devotion to Boyd, for her every instinct had rebelled against it. Yet she had known that some desperate stroke in his defense must be delivered instantly; otherwise the ruin of his hopes would follow. She had hit upon the device of using Constantine and Chakawana largely by chance, for not until the previous day had she learned the truth.



"BECAUSE I LOVE YOU."

She had not dared to hope for such unqualified success, nor had she foreseen the tragic outcome. She had simply carried her plan through to its natural conclusion. Now that her work was done she gave way completely and wept like a little girl. He was out there now with his love. They would never waste a thought upon that other girl who had made their happiness possible. The thought was almost more than she could bear. Never again could she have Boyd to herself, never enjoy his careless friendship as of old. Even that was over now that he knew the truth.

The first and only kiss he had ever given her burned fresh upon her lips. She recalled that evening they had spent alone in this very room, when he had seemed to waver and her hopes had risen at the dawning of a new light in his eyes. At the memory she cried aloud as if her heart would break:

"Boyd! Boyd!"

He entered noiselessly and took her in his arms.

"Yes, dear!" he murmured. But she rose with a startled exclamation and wrenched herself from his embrace. The piano gave forth a discordant crash. Shrinking back as from an apparition, she stared into his flushed and smiling face, then breathed:

"You! Why are you here?"

"Because I love you."

She closed her eyes and swayed as if under the spell of wonderful music. He saw the throbbing pulse at her throat. Then she flung out her hands, crying piteously:

"Go away, please, before I find it is only another dream."

She raised her lids to find him still standing there, then felt him with fluttering fingers.

"Our dreams have come true," he said gently and strove to imprison her hand.

"No, no!" Her voice broke wildly. "You don't mean it. You—you haven't come to stay."

"I have come to stay if you will let me, dear."

She broke from his grasp and moved quickly away.

"Why are you here? I left you out there with—her. I made your way clear. Why have you come back? What more can I do? Dear God, what more can I do?" She was panting as if desperately frightened.

"There is but one thing more you can do to make me happy. You can be my wife."

"But I don't understand!" She shook her head hopelessly. "You are jesting with me. You love Miss Wayland."

"No. Miss Wayland leaves tonight, and I shall never see her again."

"Then you won't marry her?"

"No."

A dull color rose to Cherry Malotte's cheeks. She swallowed as if her throat were very dry and said slowly:

"Then she refused you in spite of everything and you have come to me because of what I told you this afternoon. You are doing this out of pity, or is it because you are angry with her? No, no, Boyd! I won't have it. I don't want your pity; I don't want what she cast off."

"It has taken me a long time to find myself, Cherry, for I have been blinded by a vision," he answered. "I have been dreaming, and I never saw clearly till today. I came away of my own free will, and I came straight to you, because it is you I love and shall always love."

The girl suddenly began to beat her hands together.

"You—forget what I—have been!" she cried in a voice that tore her lover's heartstrings. "You can't want to—marry me?"

"Tonight," he said simply and held out his arms to her. "I love you and I want you. That is all I know or care about."

He found her upon his breast, sobbing and shaking as if she had sought shelter there from some great peril. He buried his face in the soft masses of her hair, whispering fondly to her till her emotion spent itself. She turned her face shyly up at length and pressed her lips to his. Then, holding herself away from him, she said, with a half doubtful yet radiant look:

"It is not too late yet. I will give you one final chance to save yourself."

He shook his head.

"Then I have done my duty!" She snuggled closer to him. "And you have no regrets?"

"Only one. I am sorry that I can't give you more than my name. I may have to go out into the world and begin all over if Mr. Wayland carries out his threat. I may be the poorest of the poor."

"That will be my opportunity to show how well I love you. You can be no poorer than I in this world's goods."

"You at least have your copper mine."

"I have no mine," said the girl, "not even the smallest interest in one."

"But—I don't understand."

She dropped her eyes. "Mr. Hilliard is a hard man to deal with. I had to give him all my share in the claims."

"I suppose you mean you sold out to him."

"No! When I found you could not raise the money I gave him my share in the mine. With that as a consideration he made you the loan. You are not angry, are you?"

"Angry!" Emerson's tone conveyed a supreme gladness. "You don't know how happy you have made me."

"Hark!" She laid a finger upon his lips. Through the breathless night there came the faint rumble of a ship's chains.

"The Grande Dame!" he cried. "She sails at the flood tide."

They stood together in the open doorway of the little house and watched the yacht's lights as they described a great curve through the darkness, then slowly faded into nothingness down the bay. Cherry drew herself closer to Boyd.

"What a wonderful Providence guides us, after all," she said. "That girl had everything in the world, and I was poor—so poor—until this hour. God grant she may some day be as rich as I!"

Out on the Grand Dame the girl who had everything in the world maintained a lonely vigil at the rail, straining with tragic eyes until the somber shadows that marked the shores of the land she feared had shrunk to a faint, low lying streak on the horizon. Then she turned and went below, numbed by the knowledge that she was very poor and very wretched and had never understood.

Strike May Result.

London, Jan. 27.—A conference of employers and compositors in the printing trade held Wednesday with a view of adjusting their differences and avoiding a threatened strike ended without an agreement having been reached.

The compositors demand a reduction in the hours of labor to a total of fifty hours a week, while the employers have offered to reduce the week's work to fifty-two hours. Neither side is prepared to yield. Twenty thousand compositors in London alone have notified their companies of their intention to quit work on Feb. 1.

Route For the Welland.

St. Catharines, Jan. 27.—That the route for the new Welland canal has been definitely decided upon, and that the work of construction is going to start pretty soon seems evident from the fact that engineers are now at work at Jordan Harbor, which is to be the northern terminus of the new waterway. The engineers are making test holes to find a good bottom which looks significant.

Turkey Purchasing Vessels.

Bremerhaven, Germany, Jan. 27.—The Turkish Commissioners who are here to pick up second hand vessels for use as transports in the navy of Turkey, yesterday purchased the Oldenburg and Darmstadt from the North German Lloyd Steamship Co. The steamers will be remodelled here and immediately after proceed for Constantinople.

The city also gives the company a fixed assessment of $5,000 for three years, $10,000 for seven.

Reflections of a Bachelor

New York Press

It looks as if the devil never took a vacation.

A man with a cold feels heroic; a girl disgraced.

A man who thinks his work is worth dollars a minute will spend an hour looking for a dime he dropped in a room.

There's nothing that gives a woman such a sense of triumph as to keep her husband in bed on account of feeling ill, though she knows there is nothing the matter with him.

FINANCE MINISTER FIELDING PRESENTS TARIFF DETAILS

tariff agreement with the United States is the removal of all duties on both sides of the border on the bulk of what is known as natural products. Among the items on which the tariff duties are to be swept away entirely are cattle, horses and mules, swine, sheep and lambs, poultry dead and alive, wheat, rice, oats, barley, buckwheat, beans, dried peas, potatoes, butter, cheese, milk, cream, eggs, honey, fresh and salted fish, vegetables, fresh fruit and several varieties of dried fruits. This means in effect, if Congress accepts the view of President Taft and his advisers, that the United States definitely abandons the policy of protecting the food producers of that country, leaving the doors open to Canada, the only country from which foods of the sort mentioned can be obtained to supplement the home supply. In meats of various sorts, although the duties are not entirely removed, there are very material reductions, while flour will bear a duty of 50 cents per barrel on both sides of the line, and oatmeal 50 cents per 100 pounds.

Among the miscellaneous articles of importance other than foodstuffs on which duties are entirely removed by both countries are hay, lumber, coke, certain classes of steel rods, typesetting and typecasting machines, cottonseed oil, ties, telegraph poles, wooden staves, pickets and palings.

Considerable reductions are made in the agricultural implement schedule, a uniform scale of duties on both side having been arranged. Among the more important reductions in the Canadian duties are farm wagons, harvesters and mowers, 22 per cent.; plows, harrows, drills, horse rakes, cultivators, thrashing machines, hay-loaders, patent augers, feed-cutters, grain-crushers, fanning mills, hay-tedders and farm or field rollers, 5 per cent. reduction.

There is a lengthy list of reductions on various products of the mine, the most important being a decrease of the Canadian duty on bituminous coal from 53 to 45 cents per ton. The revenue loss from this will be large, over eight million tons of bituminous coal having been imported last year. This would mean about $640,000 in reduced duties on coal. The people of Ontario now pay most of the soft coal duties.

R. L. Borden arose amid Conservative cheers shortly after 5 o'clock. He said this question was one of the deepest moment to Canada, being practically a proposal for a new Canadian tariff. It would dislocate trade greatly, but no man could now say how far this dislocation might proceed.

The Finance Minister had spoken of the importance of cultivating trade with the hundred million people to the south. What about the trade of the three or four hundred million people under the British flag? Was not that trade the first consideration?

Think U. S. Will Kill It.

Montreal, Jan. 27.—The Washington arrangement was received here last night with a feeling of relief, as people wanted to know the worst or the best. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy declined to be interviewed, as he wanted to read the schedule before pronouncing himself.

Mr. Robert Meighen, president of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., says a serious blow has been struck at the Canadian milling industry, while F. M. Thompson of the Ogilvie Co. would not be quoted.

General Manager Jones of the Cement Co. figures that the duty will be lowered five cents per barrel, but says they will be doing business at the old stand.

The manufacturers are evidently pleased that they were not struck with greater severity, although everybody will admit the seriousness of the milling situation. They think, however, that it will be all the same in the end, as the United States Senate will surely kill the measure.

English Views.

London, Jan. 27.—Few of the London morning newspapers comment on the reciprocity agreement between the United States and Canada. The Morning Post, however, says:

"The American Government will rejoice at having forced the door a little way, thereby obtaining leverage to force it further in the future. President Taft expresses as clearly as diplomatic caution will permit, his conception of the agreement as a prelude to some kind of future political union."

The Daily Express declares that the new bargain strikes a deadly blow at the comfortable pretentions of British free traders. It hopes, however, that the treaty with one of Great Britain's trade rivals may do the Empire in valuable service, demonstrating to the Mother Country the necessity of power to negotiate.

HAS $150,000 COMING.

Travers Put Some Money Into Another Mining Venture.

Toronto, Jan. 27.—From papers on file at Osgoode Hall it appears that former Manager W. R. Travers put considerable money of the Farmers' Bank into another mining venture as well as into the Keeley Mine. It is the Welsh Mine at Gowganda and from this may come as large a sum as $150,000, which may be added to the assets of the bank. Wishart is also interested in this deal, and it is from him that the money will come, should there be anything forthcoming. Wishart believes that anything that may be coming should go to swell the assets of the bank.

The crown was not prepared to go on with the case against the four provisional directors of the Farmers' Bank, when it was called in the Police Court yesterday morning.

A further enlargement was had until a week from yesterday, Feb. 2nd, when Crown Attorney Corley thought he would be in a position to proceed with the investigation.

Mr. Corley explained to Magistrate Dennison that it was that he was unable to keep the implied promise made when the gentlemen in question appeared last Friday for the first time to answer a charge of conspiracy to obtain $10,000 unlawfully from the Farmers' Bank.

Dr. John Ferguson, Mr. Alex. Fraser and Mr. Alex. G. Lown, all of this city, and Mr. John Watson, ex-mayor of Listowel, acted as provisional directors of the defunct institution for about two years, while the work of promotion was going on.

They thought—and, had the bank proven a success, might have thought rightly—that their services should be requited in current coin of the realm. They, therefore, are said to have voted themselves $2,500 apiece, and it is because of this action that the existing charge is laid at their door.

The Police Court was again crowded when the four gentlemen against whom summonses were issued answered to the call of the magistrate; the expectation on every hand was that new and interesting developments would be the order of the day.

Your Children's Eyes

MANY PARENTS are culpably negligent of their children's eyes, early attention to which would very often obviate lifelong annoyances and possibly injury to physical health. If a child of yours complains that he cannot see clear, that he has dull pains in the region of the eye, or that he is subject to headache; or if he leers, looks at objects askance or with partly closed eyes, he is suffering from some defect of vision, and it is your parental duty to at once consult a competent specialist, lest your negligence or indifference may result in permanent injury. Always have your children's eyes examined before sending them to school.

The members of Marathon Lodge are to be congratulated on the excellent manner in which they put on the work.

INSTRUCTIVE ADDRESSES.

After a very instructive address by the Grand Chancellor, and other short addresses by the visiting brethren and officers, the lodge adjourned to Coleman's grill room, where there was prepared a bounteous oyster supper.

OYSTER SUPPER AND TOAST LIST.

After supper the usual toast list was run off, and in the toast to the Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias of Ontario, to which Grand Chancellor Hubert was asked to respond, the members present listened to one of the best addresses on Pythianism that has ever been delivered in Peterborough.

PRESENTATION OF P. C. JEWEL.

In Retiring Chancellor's address the toast to the local lodge, in which retiring Chancellor Commander was asked to respond, the Grand Chancellor took occasion to present Bro. Hamilton in a neat speech, with a P.C. jewel, donated by Marathon Lodge as a token of their appreciation for the valuable service he rendered the lodge while occupying the chair in 1910. Bro. Hamilton replied in a neat speech, thanking the members of the lodge for their remembrance, and also for the assistance given him during his term of office. After singing Auld Lang Syne and God Save the King, the meeting was brought to a close.

A Splendid Lecture

It is to be regretted that only a comparatively small audience enjoyed Mrs. Dunn's dramatic readings from David Copperfield on Tuesday evening.

The rare excellence of this lady's work, shown in the vivid and natural portrayal of character after character was a revelation to the delighted gathering. A charming ease of manner and a delightful personality, also characterize this interesting artist.

The members of the W.A.A. have been urged to bring Mrs. Dunn to Peterborough again, when a very large audience is assured her.

THE MAKING OF A NEWSPAPER

Interesting Details Shown in the "Fourth Estate" at Grand Opera House Next Wednesday

Peterborough is to be taken back of the newspaper scenes next Wednesday, Feb 1, and allowed to watch the wheels go 'round. On that evening at the Grand, Liebler & Company will make the first local production of the great newspaper play, "The Fourth Estate," which term takes in everything around a "print shop" from the boy who pulls the galley proofs in the ink-smeared, oily composing room, to the managing editor in the comparative luxury of the chief's quarters. Joseph Medill Patterson whose familiarity with his subject has been won by a many years' apprenticeship of practical newspaper work, and Miss Harriet Ford, who also brings personal observation and experience, have written the play, which has been running all season at Wallack's Theatre, New York. It is said to be a faithful picture of a modern New York publication, capped by a climax most intensely dramatic.

A close study has been made of the interior of a big newspaper office, and the "local color" may be taken to be accurate. As for the story itself, it concerns the campaign of Michael Nolan, proprietor of the Advance, against Donald Bartelmy, a judge of the United States court. Some time before the opening of the play, Mr Nolan has had the bad luck to be caught in a certain actionable connection, having to do with strikes and strike-breaking, and has been promptly "sent away" by Judge Bartelmy. After his penal servitude, Nolan goes west and finds it all gold. When he comes back to New York he comes as a millionaire, and one of his purchases is a newspaper.

The office of the managing editor of the Advance is more than ordinarily active when the new proprietor pays his first visit to it. Wheeler Brand, a young newspaper man, who has decided and unfavorable opinions of Judge Bartelmy has written the same and the Advance has printed them, to the extreme annoyance of the judge and his influential friends. As these friends happen to be the advertisers whose patronage has kept the paper going, it appears to the managing editor that it is the part of wisdom to accede when they request the discharge of Brand. The alternative is the withdrawal of a very appreciable amount of advertising from the columns of the Advance. Mr Nolan arriving at this time, acquaints himself with the situation and Wheeler Brand, from being a dismissed subordinate, rises to the post of managing editor faster than any promotion previously recorded.

That is the first act, the alliance of Nolan, the owner, and Brand, the new managing editor, in the pursuit of the judge, who is hated by one for personal causes, and by the other for the system he represents. In later acts there is more of complication, for the judge has a daughter, and the daughter and the earnest young managing editor love one another—and what is to be done with the campaign of the Advance against Judge Bartelmy? And what is Nolan himself to do when his family point out the Bartelmys as the stepping stones to that social position which the women Nolans so ardently desire? Mr. Patterson and Miss Ford have answered these questions after a fashion that is said to be as sincere as it is forceful. And through all the separate threads of the story of young love and young ambition and purpose, and politics and trusts and intrigues, and bribery and social climbing, there is the rumble of the presses, and click of the linotype machines and the flash of the bulletin, and all the rest of the externals that go to make the mysteriously fascinating "Fourth Estate."

Liebler & Company have given the play as adequate a cast as they have production. Hugh Ford staged the play. The seats go on sale Monday morning.

CHILDISH EXCUSES FOR DEFEAT OF TRENTON TEAM

The Trenton Courier has some rather amusing excuses to make for the defeat of the team here last Tuesday night.

In the first place, says the Courier, a team playing away from home is at a disadvantage.

Second, that the ice surface was a little match box, compared with the Coloseum.

And the chief reason, the utter lack of ventilation. The boys say they were playing in blue air, like a dense winter fog.

But why be discouraged, continues the Courier, and then the writer goes on to tell how changes in the lineup will give an almost invincible team.

How humiliating such dope must be to the Trenton seven. Poor dears, they should be boxed up all alone and allowed to win the championship playing amongst themselves.

An excuse such as the first one is childish, referring as it does to the big, husky looking team representing Trenton.

DOM.-OTTAWA WON OUT 5-4

Best Bank League Game of the Season With Winners Ahead 3-0 at Half Time

In a fast and clean Bank League game, yesterday afternoon, the Dominion Ottawa seniors defeated the Royal Commerce by a 5-4 score, the George street septette leading at half-time 3-0, owing largely to the great work of Ross at cover.

The contest was classy at all times individual and combination play making it easily the best played of the schedule.

While Ross is not credited with a tally, he was the strong man of the winners and only hard luck prevented him from scoring. Of the line Thompson and Corkery were conspicuous. Thompson counted first on a shot on which the puck slid through Hatton and Nagle in the flukiest manner imaginable, and following some half-dozen fine blocks by the goaltender. Corkery took the next in a side shot and Cook made it three from a centre ice hoist.

The Royal Commerce outscored their opponents 4-2 in the second half, Cole being particularly prominent.

Hague Sawers handled the bell, and made the players chase the puck all the time.

The teams were:—

Dom. Ottawa — Goal, Sheffield; point, Quinlan; cover, Ross; centre, Thompson, left, Cook; right, Corkery

BILLY BREEN HAS A REPLY

Sporting Editor of the Review.

Sir,—An item appeared in last night's edition of the Review, in which Artie Edmonds refers to me as a four-flusher, and used other names "unprintable". The first time Artie came before the Canadian public after becoming a professional was through the matchmaking and hard work of the said four-flusher, and in trying to make a match for his appearance in Peterborough, it was in no way to belittle one of the greatest little wrestlers in Canada at his weight. The challenge that I sent in was not one of prejudice, but of business to met and also to him. If in making the challenge I used any words that hurt his feelings, I retract them. Having been interested in all manner of sports this last 15 years, this is the first time I was ever credited with being a four-flusher, also the challenge I sent in was not of my suggestion, but of the manager of the man who would like to undertake the job, and he does not belong to Peterborough. As there is no chance for my getting and staging the bout I will look elsewhere for talent of which there is plenty, and all those who ever had anything to do with me here in Peterborough, let's hear your opinion of

A FINE LINE OF TRAPS FOR THE 57TH BAND

Drummer Will Have a Great Equipment for Next Summer's Concerts

At a business meeting of the 57th Reg't Band, held last night on the conclusion of a splendid rehearsal, it was decided to purchase a complete and modern line of drummer's accessories, commonly known to the profession as "traps." The order, which goes forward to-day, will include a xylophone, which although a solo instrument, is also used in many ways for the embellishment of character sketches.

One of the most popular "novelettes presented by the Imperial Grenadier Guards' Band at the Toronto Industrial exhibition last year was a xylophone, and Bandmaster Gilddon expects to have one or more of these up his sleeve for the edification of next summer's concert-goers. The magnificent set of chimes purchased last year will also be more in evidence at next season's concerts, the management having decided to place a capable musician in charge of this costly addition to the Band's equipment. Speaking of equipment— the quality of which means so much to any musical organization—the Review is informed that out of the sixty instruments owned by the Band, fifty-five are the product of the leading manufacturers in the world. That quality means increased cost, can be best illustrated by the statement that two of the 57th instruments cost as much as a whole set purchased for use in this city a few years ago. Two recruits, both experienced cornet players, were added to the band's strength at last night's meeting.

PETERBOROUGH'S WATER POWER

Should be Used to Advertise City Says J. H. McClelland

"It seeems to me," said J. H. McClelland, superintendent of the Trent Canal, "that Peterborough is missing a great opportunity in not advertising more widely the fact that it has a steady flow of water power all the year round. There is just as much flow in the river to-day as there was in July, and the flow never varies much. This is due to the system of water conservation north of us, by means of the dams, and to be assured of full water-power twenty-four hours aday for six days a week means a great deal to manufacturers.

"In Ottawa the big factories are practically shut down because of low water, or are running but one day a week. Ottawa is making a great boast about its manufacturing industries, but in this important respect Peterborough has it beaten a mile. This point is not emphasized enough in advertising Peterborough's advantages, to my mind, and it is most important. In Watertown, N. Y., where there is an absolutely steady flow, a fine city has been built up on the manufacturing induced by the steady water-power. Why should not Peterborough in as favorable a position strive towards the same object."

LINERS ARE GOURMANDS

New Steamers Will Require $60 000 Per Trip

Table Supplies Reach an Enormous Figure

Some $60,000 worth of American food and drink will be loaded aboard the new ocean steamers Olympic and Titantic each time one of these big boats docks in New York, according to the commissary officers who are victualling such ships. Should the Government make their landing there possible by lengthening two of the Chelsea piers, these two ocean liners can bring and take away 2,700 passengers on each voyage, in addition to a crew of [illegible]. If both boats are able to begin their regular trips next spring to piers adapted to their bulk, $1,500,000 will be spent in New York in a year simply to stock their spacious larders.

MEAT FOR THE MONSTERS

For meats alone $15,000 is to be paid each time either of the big sister ships comes into port. Large quantities of beef, lamb, pork, veal and mutton will be brought from all over the country and stacked away in refrigerators that must hold enough to feed 3,500 people on a transatlantic voyage. Wagonloads of poultry costing $5,400 are to be added to this array, with piles of fish worth $2,000. For shellfish the orders of the ship's cooks will amount to $1,200 in addition.

BILL OF $5,500 FOR GROCERIES

Farmers from all about the neighboring country will be called upon to send $1,000 worth of butter, cream and milk to be used on each trip of these big boats, while $1,800 is also to be spent solely for eggs and $3,200 for vegetables. Fruits worth $3,500 are to be added to the ship's stores, while its bakery bill lays in flour to the extent of $2,300 on each voyage. The biggest bill next to that for meats will be $5,500 for all sorts of groceries. Far away in the frigid depths of the new liners' cold storage compartments $[illegible],200 worth of ice is to be stored.

For cigars $2,000 will be spent. Wines and spirits costing $5,000 are set down as necessary for each shipload of passengers, together with some $3,000 worth of beer and mineral waters.

Altogether the lowest cost of victualling such boats as the Olympic and Titantic is set down as $56,200.

CUMMINGS AND HIS DOUBLES

Queer Mix-up in the West Over Arrests

Saskatoon, Sask. Jan. 22 — Arthur Cummings, arrested in the city last Tuesday and held as a vagrant, was yesterday morning charged before Magistrate Brown in the Police Court with stealing a bank cheque drawn by a firm of Regina lawyers on the Royal Bank there for $169.75 in favor of Alfred Cummings. Defendant elected to take a preliminary hearing which will come up in the local police court on Monday. It appears Cummings called at the Regina post office and asked for the mail of A. Cummings, and was handed the letter in which was the cheque. Cummings came to Saskatoon and endeavored to cash the cheque here, knowing that it was not for him. The case has several very peculiar side issues and is providing a problem for the police here and also at Brandon.

For some time the police here and at Brandon have both been wanting a man named A. Cummings, and descriptions have been exchanged. Immediately on this man's arrest here Chief Dunning communicated with the authorities at Brandon giving his description and asking if it tallied with the man wanted there. The reply was to the effect that they had already secured the A. Cummings wanted and also stated that he in many respects answered the description given by Chief Dunning of a man named E. Spencer, wanted here on a charge of forgery. At the same time the Brandon police are of the opinion that the Cummings arrested here may be wanted ther under the name of Dresser. There are thus two Cummings under arrest, and a third one still wanted. Both men now in custody are thought to be wanted under different names, the Cummings at Brandon in Saskatoon and the man held here at Brandon. Is the Cummings at Brandon the Cummings wanted here, and is the Cummings at Saskatoon the Cummings wanted at Brandon? Or is Cummings Spencer, or Spencer Cummings, or again is Cummings Dresser, or finally is either of the two Cummings, Cummings at all, and then what about the third Cummings

SIR CHARLES DILKE DEAD

Famous Liberal Statesman a Victim of Heart Disease.

One of the Strongest Men in British Public Life, He Would Have Been Premier, But For His Implication in a Scandalous Lawsuit — His Death Directly Due to Work in Recent Campaign.

London, Jan. 27.—Sir Charles Wentworth Dilke, one of the foremost Liberal statesmen of England, died suddenly of heart disease yesterday, at the age of 68. His death was a direct result of the strain of the recent British election. Following the election he went to the South of France to recuperate his failing health and seemed to gain in strength. He returned to England last Saturday, telling his friends that he had been greatly benefitted by his stay on the continent. On Sunday he suffered an attack which necessitated the administrations of a physician.

Sir Charles was one of the foremost advocates of world's peace and was the supporter of an Anglo-American entente with the idea of preventing war between the powers. He was one of the leading friends of the Suffragettes in England and in 1906 introduced a bill in Parliament that every man and woman should be qualified to vote at Parliamentary and other elections and that no person should be disqualified by sex or marriage from being a member of either Houses of Parliament.

He probably would have been made Premier when Mr. Asquith was chosen had it not been for the scandal of the Crawford-Dilke divorce case in which he was involved.

Some of his Parliamentary orations are masterpieces. He was born in 1843 and was educated at Cambridge, taking up the law. Some of the important offices he has held are Under Secretary of War, President of the Local Government Board, chairman of the royal commission for negotiations with France, chairman of the royal commission for housing working people, chairman of the select committee on Income Tax.

He had written extensively on political topics, some of his works being "The Present Positions of European Politics," "The British Army," "Imperial Defence," and many others.

His recreation was fencing.

Change In Montreal Schools.

Montreal, Jan. 27—Sir Lomer Gouin has just received the report of the royal commission, composed of Senator Dandurand, Dr. Kennedy and Abbe Perrier, appointed to enquire into the state of the Roman Catholic schools in the city and district of Montreal, and, as the findings are somewhat radical, the document will no doubt cause a stir in the community.

The commission recommends the abolition of the thirty-one school commissions on the Island of Montreal, as existing nowhere else in the known world, substituting one central commission, three commissioners to be appointed by the City Council, three by the archbishop, three by the local Government and three to be elected by the Catholic taxpayers, for this report does not touch upon the Protestant schools.

This recommending of an elective system for a fourth of the commission is a victory for G. Langlois, the progressive M.P.P. for St. Louis division, and the fact of the report being signed by Abbe Perrier, the choice of Mgr. Bruchesi on the royal commission, is a sign of the times.

Then they favor an independent English-speaking Catholic commission, for it is a fact that while the Irish Catholics are but one-tenth of the population, they pay 27 per cent. of the taxes to the Catholic pannel.

Railroad Around Earth.

New York, Jan. 27.—The Tribune says: "If E. H. Harriman had lived he would have had a railroad around the world. This was one of his great ambitions. Another was to see the completion of the Panama Canal. If the Government had not taken up the task of constructing this great waterway, he would have built it himself."

These two secrets, showing the extent to which the late railroad man's ambitions were leading him at the time of his death, were revealed on Wednesday night by Otto H. Kahn, of Kahn Loeb & Co., who was closely associated with Mr. Harriman for more than ten years, in a memorial address at the Finance Forum. The statement was made after the close of Mr. Kahn's formal address and in response to a question from one of his hearers.

A Black Hand Case.

New York, Jan. 27.—A panic was created in the Italian quarter, on the upper east side yesterday, when a bomb was thrown into the basement of a store and residence building on East 83rd street. The explosion wrecked the lower part of the building, and shook the neighborhood. John Garliago, a grocer, who occupies the basement, admitted to the police that he had received several threatening letters from the "Black Hand."

License Inspector Dead.

Mount Forest, Jan. 27.—Josiah Hampton, license inspector for East Wellington, died at his home here on Wednesday night from heart trouble, following an attack of la grippe. He was 77 years old, a prominent Conservative in politics, having contested the riding of East Wellington twice for the Legislature. Was mayor of the town for several terms, and represented the town at county council, being warden at one time.

ADDRESS TO COUNCIL ON ROAD BUILDING SCHEMES

Inspector Bennett Advocates the County Road System.

G. W. Bennett, Government inspector of county roads and bridges, addressed the members of the County Council yesterday afternoon regarding the systems by which the counties may secure the aid of the Government in constructing their roads and advocating the adoption of the county road system. In his opening remarks the speaker tendered his congratulations to Warden Coben and the members of the Council. That taxpayers appreciated their faithful and conscientious services was evidenced in their return to office. He held that such service should be encouraged as with the continuance of the county as the same body, much more and better work could be done.

He said there were three methods of obtaining aid from the Government for the building of roads and two of these were to some extent being taken advantage of. These were the by-laws and colonization. The best method in his opinion, was the county road system.

It did not call for anything more than the system which the Council employed at the present time. The construction of bridges costing from $5,000 to $15,000 was being carried out and why not the roads. It was not necessary for the whole county to take up this scheme and it might be that it would be quite a task for northern townships. There was some opposition to it, but this was perhaps owing to a limited knowledge of the results. Some of the ratepayers and townships don't like to turn their money over to an outside body to spend.

The speaker pointed out in explanation that the reeve of the township and his committee just as is the case in building a bride, has the work practically in their own hands.

Inspector Bennett stated that there would be no difficulty whatever in securing an official from the department, who would be only to pleased to meet the Council and explain all details of this system. He too, the inspector, was at their service at any time.

As to the by-law and colonization schemes, he advised that the Council look into the method. It was entirely satisfactory. The Government gives one-half of the amount expended and its not at all necessary to spend all of any appropriated amount. For every dollar that is expended the Government will return one-half.

It is a mistake, he held to go into the back country and open up roads that would never be used, but it is reasonable to see that they are kept in good repair. This grant for the colonization scheme are not as they were some years ago.

A discussion followed Inspector Bennett's address, several of the Councillors stating their experiences in road building and asking for further information, which was given.

Warden Coben thanked the inspector for his address and the members expressed their approval in a hearty manner.

HIGHLY ENTERTAINING WAS T.A.S. MINSTREL SHOW

Excellent Chorus and Ridiculously Funny Comedy Work—Many Witty Local Hits—S. R. O. at St. Peter's School Hall.

Witty end men, an excellent chorus, bright music, and laugh producing jokes were all ingredients in the stimulating tonic of entertainmen tha the St. Peters T. A. S. Minstrels, dished out in generous quantities to a highly appreciative audience at St. Peter's Hall last night.

The large hall was taxed to capacity, and every number in the first part and clever olio brought forth rounds of applause. The show was splendidly costumed and the smooth way in which the program was run off reflects great credit on Mr. Geo Lynch, stage manager, and Mr. John Armstrong, the musical director.

The humming chorus which opened the performance was quickly followed by the various numbers of the first part. No trace of amateurism or stage nervousness was distinguishable, and the soloists gave their selections in a pleasing and most acceptable manner. The opening chorus by the minstrels was given with a snap and swing which continued throughout the entire affair and to try and look sedate was sheer waste of efforts it was impossible.

"Back at Dear Old Home Sweet Home," a solo and quartette number was one of the most melodious songs of the night, the solo being taken by George Daly, in a clear, musical voice. The usual side-splitting and nearly all original puns kept the crowd continually on the laugh. The antics and jokes of the end men interspersed between the songs of the first part made monotony an absurdity. James Doris in the role of interlocutor was easily at home, and his witty manner of introducing the performers is worthy of special comment. A cleverer or more saucy bunch of comedians would be difficult to bring together and each found an impish delight in mimicking famous local personages foremost of which were Chief Thompson, Harry Phelan or George Evans. Indeed some of the audience were continually in spasms, and attempts to describe and repeat the jokes would be a difficult task.

Two of the rousing numbers, and most tuneful of the evening were: "Honey I Will long For You" and "If They only let old Adam's rib alone" by Joe Minicola and Herb Calighan, respectively. George Lynch, director and general head push, was as usual at his pranks, and never has his fund of mirth-provoking humor been shown to better advantage. The statement that he was inimitably funny is putting it mild. His selection "Never" was something new and the humor and sheer nonsense of the endless number of verses was irrisistible. Nothing but a laugh from start to end. As the curtain dropped, upon the first part, the audience lay back in their seats fairly weeping with laughter, and many apparently on the road to hysterics.

A CLEVER OLIO

The olio, following the first part was its worthy rival. Here, individual talent was even more to be seen. Jokes, monologues and humorous short sketches were served out in quick order. One laugh followed another, and the sketch "Twenty Minutes for Refreshments" was a scream. Had it continued for more than twenty minutes, doctors in the audience would have been surely required. O'Brien and O'Brien will never starve while they entertain with such effect. Many a vaudeville troupe would like to slide through a knot-hole, after seeing them. It was no effort for the couple to entertain, and "Bill" O-Brien dug into the victuals like a starved dog at a meaty bone.

Messrs. McNichol and Cranfield are some performers on the mandolin the audience being reluctant in allowing them to leave the stage. They were heartily encored.

Little Joe Clancy and Master Frank Galvin bid fair to soloists of distinction. They sang splendidly last night in a duet entitled "During Recess" and were brought back for a second song.

Dave Quinlan's buck and wing dancing was a favorite from the first step. Indeed all the dancing was popular with the crowd, they evidently not being able to get too much of a good thing.

A fitting close to an evening crammed to the brim with sheer absurdity was introduced, when Prof. John Philip Sousa Lynch sprang his rose grained quartette on the audience. Sousa Lynch himself was a sight enough with adding to the absurdity of the appearance of the remainder of the ringers. The curtain dropped upon John Philip Sousa Lynch doing a creditable imitation of a circus contortionist as he beat the time for his ill-assorted looked aggregation.

The enjoyment of the affair was greatly enhanced by the T. A. S. Orchestra. They were very liberal in their selections. The cast for the performance comprised about thirty members.

The following is the programme as it was given.

Among the local men present and identified with the company's operations were, Mr. H. A. Trainer, contract agent; W. Bell, chief clerk to district agent and Mr. F. K. Spriggs.

JAMES GORHAM IS SENSITIVE TO HIS SERIOUS POSITION

Is No Longer Indifferent and Flippant—Anxiously Inquires if a Commutation of Sentence Has Been Received—Is Hopeful That He Won't Have to Suffer Death Penalty.

James Gorham is beginning to realise the seriousness of his position. For a long time he was absolutely indifferent and gave no outward indications of anxiety or fear. But now it is different with him.

KNOWS COMMUTATION HAS BEEN APPLIED FOR.

He knows that his counsel have applied to the Minister of Justice for a commutation of sentence, and he expected favorable action would have been taken some time ago on the jury's strong recommendation for mercy on the grounds that he was rendered insane by drink when he committed the crime. He keeps asking if anything has been heard from Ottawa, and apparently appreciates the fact that there is a possibility of his having to pay the extreme penalty, although he prophesies that his sentence will be commuted. This attitude seems quite natural, as Chancellor Sir John Boyd said when he was sentencing Gorham, that he had no idea that the sentence would be carried out.

R. C. BRAUND PROTESTS AGAINST PROPOSED SIDING; WOULD HURT HIS BUSINESS

E. G. Patterson Asked Council to Approve of Railway Siding Being Laid, Crossing Park Street and Into Property of C.G.E.—Civic Matters of Interest Dealt With.

All members were present at a special meeting of the City Council last night, His Worship Mayor Morrow being in the chair.

E. G. Patterson, for the Canadian General Electric Company, asked that the Council approve of a C.P.R. siding being laid across Park street into the Company's property. Mr. Patterson said that it was understood in the negotiations between the Company and the Council, at the time of the agreement regarding extensions, that there would be no objections on the part of the Council to the siding. It would be of two tracks and would be used for freightage from and to the new building.

A PROTEST.

Mr. R. C. Braund was present with his solicitor, Mr. F. D. Kerr, to protest against the siding being laid, on the grounds that his business would suffer greatly.

Mr. Kerr explained the situation in which Mr. Braund would be placed. At the present time the tracks of the C.P.R. were to the south of his property and in the event of the proposed siding being laid his store would be shut in within the two.

The result would be that his business would suffer. He had started in a small way and had built up a substantial business. Mr. Kerr asked that the Council look carefully into the matter before taking action.

Mr. Braund said there was no ill-feeling on his part toward the company. He hoped it would continue to expand, but his business was growing, and thought that he should not be sacrificed. If the siding must be laid there he claimed the right to collect damages from the people who put it there. With the continual shunting going on, customers would be lost as they would not dare to come with their horses.

Mr. Patterson explained that with the two tracks there would not be more than two or three shunts a day. The building was 350 feet in length, and the present sidings were now overtaxed. The proposition of the company was the only feasible one.

Ald. Bradburn, although sorry that Mr. Braund should suffer, could not see how the request of the company could be refused. It was expanding and helping to build up the city.

On motion of Ald. Morgan and Graham, the matter was referred to the Board of Works, who will visit the proposed site of the siding.

CITY'S BILL.

The city's bill to be presented to the Legislature received its readings and passed, and the secretary and Mayor authorized to sign it.

Ald. Duncan read a report from the Committee of the Whole Council, which met before the special meeting. It recommended "that the secretary and Mayor sign a petition at the request of the City Council of Toronto, asking the Ontario Government to take over and carry on the Bell Telephone Co."

ADVERTISE FOR ASSESSOR.

"That the applications for the position of city assessors at the same salary be advertised for."

CHAIRS NOT SATISFACTORY.

"That the matter regarding the adjusting of the complaint to the Ontario Furniture Bureau regarding the chairs supplied by them to the Public Library be left in the hands of the Property Committee."

The report was adopted.

The chairs were not supplied as agreed in the tender, not being of oak. Moreover, the material is of poor quality.

Ald. Duncan submitted a tender from W. J. Johnston for the erection of a shed at the Isolation Hospital, to be used for rigs. The amount was $90 The tender was accepted.

Miss Mowry, who is taking a course at Ottawa to fit her for a position as nurse at the Isolation Hospital, was taken ill and had to come home. She has returned to Ottawa, and an account of $14.60 for train fare will be paid.

An account for $30 for work done at the hospital will also be paid. The workman has been attending to the furnace and other necessary details.

The chairman of the Library Board and Property Committee will meet to open the tenders for furniture.

Ald. Brown brought forward a complaint from the citizens on George street south, who do not like the idea of the street being closed. No action was taken.

BOARD OF WORKS.

The chairman, Ald. Metheral, presided at a meeting of the Board of Works and read the report of the city engineer, which was a statement of the work contemplated for the year and the amount necessary to be appropriated. It was as follows:

Ald. Metheral, Chairman Board of Works:

Dear Sir,—I beg to submit approved estimates of cost of works to be provided for in maintenance as repairs.

Grading and watertabling	$ 750.00
General street work	1100.00
Hauling and spreading gravel	2100.00
Stone purchased, crushed, rolled	3500.00
Street watering (extra team)	600.00
Removal of snow and ice	750.00
Cleaning streets	1150.00
Cutting weeds and trimming trees	245.00
Repairs to machinery and tools	250.00
Repairs to wooden walks	550.00
Repairs to wooden bridges (and county bridges)	650.00
Culverts to be removed	250.00
Sewer maintenance, flushing, etc.	375.00
Proportion of salaries, office expenses, etc.	1150.00
Total	$13,420.00

SPECIAL WORKS.

Renewal of two large culverts	$ 1025.00
Jackson Park bridge (new deck)	375.00
Diversion of Downie street creek	440.00
Protection wall at creek	505.00
Grading Benson Avenue	375.00
West approach Smith street bridge	1250.00
New grader	60.00
Proportion of salaries, office expenses, etc.	214.00
Total	$ 6,230.00
Grand Total	$19,650.00

Assuming that it is the intention of your committee to use oil on the streets instead of water sprinkling during the year 1911, as experimented with last year, I beg to submit the following comparative estimate:—

The cost of watering 21 1-3 miles of streets last year was as follows:—

Contractors, 4 districts	$ 1832.99
Water Commission for water	1600.00
Extra wages, central district	375.54
Driver Board of Works team	237.50
Repairs, water wagon, $89.46, supplies, $297.14	386.60
Horses' feed	159.00
Expense account	50.25
Total	$4,641.88

A new wagon will be required for water sprinkling, if continued, costing $360.

Oil, such as was used last season, cost 4 1-4 cents per gallon, but it is advisable that a better quality should be used hereafter, which would probably cost 6 cents per gallon.

45,000 GALLONS.

23 1-3 miles would require 15,000 gallons of oil for one application, and not less than three applications should should be estimated on, for while parts might not require more than two applications during the season those streets on which the traffic is heavy should have four applications

A BIG SAVING.

This would require 45,000 gallons, which would cost $2,700, team and driver, $700; repairs and supplies, $75.00, for a total of $3,475, a net saving of $1,166.88 per annum, in addition to which four water wagons could be sold for probably $650.

Yours truly,
T. A. S. HAY,
City Engineer.

Ald. Buller wanted to know why the filling in work on Sherbrooke street was not included.

It will be.

The report was referred to the chairman and Mayor, who will look over the different amounts.

THAT OIL.

As stated in the report, the city engineer advocates the use of a higher grade of oil, which will cost 6 cents per gallon, and yet this method of keeping down the dust is cheaper than the watering cart system by $1,165.

It is not decided whether oil or water will be used. A suggestion was made that the oil be used and George street treated after eleven o'clock on Saturday nights.

The chairman will have a look at the frame building at the Mark street government wharf and decide whether or not the request of the superintendent of the Trent Canal, that it be removed, should be granted.

The engineer will see that complaints against the drainage on Harvey street, near the river, and for which several houses are responsible, are done away with, as soon as sewer operations are commenced.

MUST PAY FEES.

Those merchants who have not paid their fee for illuminated signs, will receive a final request to do so. Only a few have paid.

The Auburn Power Company wish to have the eastern boundary on Water street north defined, as they do not wish to encroach on the property of the city in their operations, which are going ahead. The company is willing to pay half the expenses

A surveyor will attend to the matter if it is found necessary to engage one.

Ald. Duncan wanted the by-law regarding the street railway's duties regarding the snow on the street, covered by their line, read at a meeting. He held that it should be levelled and not left in ridges.

The city clerk produced the agreement and read the clause, which says that the snow must be levelled. The engineer will see that it is.

Ald. Anderson had a complaint from a Bethune street resident against the water from the G.T.R standpipe drainage on his property. Connections will be made in the spring by which this trouble will cease.

The Presbytery met at Knox church yesterday and approved of the call to Rev. T. McCorkindale, a graduate of Edinburgh University, Scotland, from the Lakefield Presbyterian church.

TEN CENTS PER WEEK.

MANY VARIANT VIEWS HELD ON THE TARIFF AGREEMENT

All the People Agree That the Scope is Staggering —What Prominent People Think.

Toronto, Jan. 28.—That the abolition of duty on wheat will mean that the Canadian farmer will get 4c. or 5c. less per bushel, instead of more, is the opinion of Hedley Shaw, president of the Maple Leaf Milling Co.

Mr. Shaw added: "The new regulation will mean that we will have competition in new markets, which we were just building up. The markets most affected are the Indian and South African markets. The United States are placed on the same plane as the Canadian dealers in competing for this trade if they get free Canadian wheat.

E. C. Drury, president of the Dominion Grange, said:

"We are well pleased with the arrangement as far as it goes. We would like a little more, and we will continue on our way until we get what we are after.

"I think the duty on flour should have been removed entirely."

J. W. Flavelle, speaking for the packing industry, said:

"I fear the packing industry will receive a blow of so serious a character that the industry will probably not survive it. The United States packer treats his export trade to Great Britain as an opportunity to dispose of a negligible surplus. He has also treated the trade of the western provinces of Canada in the same way. The Ontario and Quebec packers will find themselves completely cut off from all the trade in the western provinces.

"If the proposals are approved, this interprovincial trade in these food products will cease. Western cattle will be marketed in Chicago in place of Toronto and Montreal. The cured hog products consumed west of the great lakes will be imported from Chicago and western United States packing points. The eggs, poultry and dairy products required for the west will be supplied from Chicago and other western producing centres. The immediate effect will be to create north and south trading conditions in place of east and west."

Local coal dealers seem unanimous in saying that the reduced tariff on slack coal will not materially affect the situation.

That eggs and fruit will be cheaper in Toronto seems the belief of commission houses. It is stated that the price of the former will be regulated by the price in New York and Chicago, where Canada's surplus will go. Cold storage eggs in Chicago are going at 17 cents a dozen, and if this arrangement had been in force they would have been the same price here.

Cement dealers say the change will not affect the price of cement materially.

Automobile manufacturers also remark, "never touched us."

S. N. Waldie of the Victoria Harbor Lumber Co. said:

"I think that the reduction will give us a better market for our lower class lumber. I don't think prices will be affected, though."

Diversity in Montreal.

Montreal, Jan. 28.—Very few of the papers have made straight pronouncements on the tariff question.

La Patrie is afraid of the result, and finds it strange that the Government should completely change the country's fiscal policy, while we are enjoying so great a measure of prosperity.

The Herald is surprised at the scope of the arrangement, and believes that the days of high protective walls are gone for ever.

The Star evidently thinks that it is the thin edge of the free trade wedge, saying: "The Liberal party in days gone by was accused of annexation proclivities, but it has lived down that name, and has proven its loyalty to the Empire in more ways than one. All loyal Canadians will hope that the Liberal party is not entering on a misguided unpatriotic course. Its advent to power, although provocative of wild alarm at the time, has been proven to have been a good thing for the country, through the destruction of adventurous and visionary schemes for gaining power. Surely it is not going back.

A Sincere Effort.

Ottawa, Jan. 28.—The Ottawa Citizen says: "The reciprocity terms submitted by Mr. Fielding appear to be the result of a sincere effort on the part of both Canada and the United States to arrive at a mutual understanding in regard to many articles of every day use and necessity.

The Evening Journal says that beyond doubt a good stroke of business has been done for Canada and on the lines of Sir John Macdonald's standing offer of reciprocity.

"The unexpected has happened. The United States executive has met us half way about food and raw materials, and said practically nothing about manufactures. The acceptance by the United States Cabinet of such an agreement is, frankly speaking, a staggering surprise. If Congress accepts it, an excellent thing we think will have been accomplished for this country."

No Serious Disturbance.

Winnipeg, Jan. 28.—The Telegram editorially says:

"There is not likely to be any wild outburst of resentment or ecstasy in any part of Canada over the reciprocity arrangement. On close study it reveals no semblance of fiscal convulsion, or even of serious fiscal disturbance."

The Free Press says that the people of Canada as a whole will be well satisfied with the conclusions which have been reached.

Fielding Taken In.

London, Ont., Jan. 28.—The Advertiser describes the agreement as a triumph for the Canadian farmers, tempered by the fear that it will not survive in Congress. The favors to Canada have been strong, from the necessities of the Taft administration. The concessions by Canada do not expose a very wide front to the attack of Canadian manufacturers.

The Free Press says:

"What is the broad meaning of the trade proposal? Does the speech of the Minister of Finance give a clue, and is not that clue that the Minister has been overwhelmed at Washington by influences that are not in keeping with the spirit of our people, which is to build up upon this northern half of the American continent a nation that shall be a part of the great British Empire. Here a trade advantage and there a trade loss, but in the aggregate our national wealth thrown open to the despoiler, that he may preserve his own, our manufacturing interests disturbed at the entering of the wedge of free trade with a nation of specialized industries, and a general unsettling of the business that is based upon an agreement which has no greater stability than that either party to it may terminate it at will."

Hamilton Opinion.

Hamilton, Jan. 28.—The Times says: "Parliament and Congress are not bound either by treaty or convention; the changes must stand on the merit of their general reciprocal benefit if they stand at all. Canada's policy of imperial preference is carefully guarded, and the reciprocity arrangement does not impair that policy."

The Spectator says:

"It is well known that in the United States conditions have reached or about reached that stage where in the matter of food products the country is ready to cease exporting and begin importing. The question is what has Canada gained by assenting to a free trade condition when the United States must in a short time be compelled in self interest to remove food duties."

Calls It a Triumph.

Halifax, Jan. 28.—The Chronicle (Liberal), the only paper that comments on the reciprocity announcement yesterday morning, calls it "Fielding's master stroke," and says:

"Taken as a whole the reciprocity measure is a great, even a remarkable achievement. The concessions by Canada in the tariff reductions, in return for the enormous advantage of a free market for her natural products, are not important. Sir Wilfrid Laurier told the manufacturers' delegation that he believed that a reciprocity agreement could be concluded which would be mutually advantageous, without doing injury to any Canadian interests."

A Good Bargain.

St. John, N.B., Jan. 28.—The Telegraph (Liberal) says:

"The best news from Ottawa since the British preference beyond question. So good is the proposed bargain from the standpoint of every important Canadian interest, that our own Parliament will adopt it by a decisive majority."

The Times (Liberal) says:

"The Maritime Provinces will be especially benefited by a wider free market for natural products."

HELD CAPTIVE BY WILD TRIBES

Ottawa, Jan. 28.—That G. F. Caldwell, the missing Ottawa explorer, who has not been heard of since 1907, is a captive in the hands of wild people in the unexplored far north, is the belief of many of the Eskimos in the Hudson Bay region. This statement was made by Harry Ford, interpreter among the Eskimos who arrived in Ottawa after an 800-mile snowshoe tramp from the northern wilds.

The Eskimos say that the wild folks saw in Mr. Caldwell a white man for the first time, and, believing that he would be inimical, decided to deprive him of freedom. They think that the two Eskimos who went as attendants to Mr. Caldwell on his exploration trip are also held captive.

TAFT WILL FORCE MEASURE THROUGH WITH DEMOCRAT AID

He Looks for the Passage of Agreement by Congress —Republicans Disorganized.

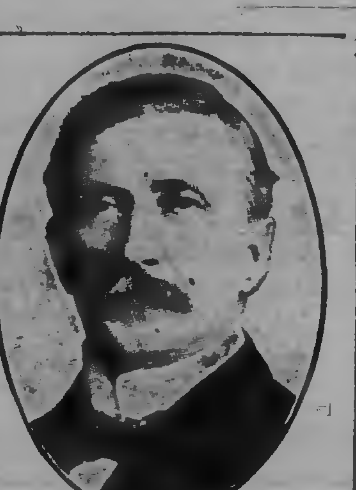
Washington, Jan. 28.—Snags began to loom up in the pathway of the Canadian reciprocity agreement before it had been in Congress twenty-four hours, and confident predictions of its failure were made by pillars of the protective faith. It was said that even should the House accept the terms of the arrangement it could not pass the Senate.

These dire prophesies were carried to the White House by members who visited the President, but Mr. Taft received them with smiles, which indicated that one defeat would not turn him from his purpose. If his own party fails to seize the opportunity and the credit of putting in operation this reciprocal trade pact, the President, it is believed, will not hesitate to submit his program to the Democrats.

One man in the confidence of the President came from the White House last night with the declaration that the proposed Canadian arrangement would not die an easy death so long as Mr. Taft was in the White House.

"The President was never more in earnest in his life," he said. "He would not hesitate to call an extra session if he thought such a course would do the business."

President Taft believes the mutual concessions arranged by the U. S. and Canada promise a great humanitarian movement that ultimately would mean a material reduction in the cost of living. He believes that, even if the promised reductions are not at once apparent, the very presence of this document in Congress will prove a deterrent force against continued advancement in the price of foods.



HON. FRANK COCHRANE.

He will not stand for any change in Ontario's pulpwood policy.

U.S. WILL REFUSE IT

Republicans and Democrats Uniting to Oppose Taft Program.

Special to the Review.

(Washington, Jan. 28.—To-day, after a good look at the situation produced by the tariff agreement, the Republican and Democratic leaders are united in a prophecy that it will never pass Congress. A calm and dispassionate survey of the situation sums the matter up in a few words: No reciprocity with Canada, at least until there is a totally different basis of agreement.

The fact that there has been a general outcry by the people for relief is now being overshadowed by the pressure of all the business interests, and there is one chance in forty that the agreement will pass through Congress without considering the senate. The agreement will never be accepted by the United States in its present form, and a change means the stultifying of the whole deal, until the Democrats take the matter up anew.

HUGHES AND MACDONALD

Col. Sam Makes Merry at Editor's Expense.

Refers to His Charge of Double Paymasters.

Ottawa, Jan. 28.—Col. Sam Hughes (Victoria) precipitated some amusement in the House of Commons yesterday just as the estimates were called, by an attack on J. A. Macdonald, editor of The Globe. Some of the colonel's phrases were well turned, and gave expression to a political vendetta that has existed for years between himself and the editor of the Liberal organ.

Col. Hughes declared that the editor of The Globe was accepting two salaries, one of $2,500 per year, from a Mr. Ginn in Boston, as propagandist for the peace society, and the other as a Canadian newspaper editor. Mr. Macdonald's campaign was to encourage trade north and south, not to stimulate trade within the Empire. He had gone to Washington and brought about the state of affairs now revealed in the reciprocity negotiations.

Mr. Lewis (West Huron) has a bill on the order paper prohibiting the sale of deadly weapons except under license. He arose to draw the attention of the Minister of Justice to the importance of this matter, and quoted almost all the Montreal papers of a week back to show that several crimes in Canada, and especially in Montreal, could be traced to the indiscriminate selling of revolvers, stilettos and daggers of all kinds.

In conclusion the member from Huron asked the Minister of Justice either to make his bill a Government one to amend it, to change it, or to introduce new legislation, anything, in fact, that the end desired that life should not be needlessly sacrificed should be attained.

When the House met, a motion was passed arranging for the printing of the fisheries arrangement protocol, which was laid on the table by Mr. Brodeur.

Mr. Borden asked the Prime Minister when the matter of the new United States tariff would be discussed.

Sir Wilfrid said the exact day was uncertain, but it would be some time in the coming week.

An order-in-council has been passed fixing the pay of medical officers of the navy. Surgeons on entry are to receive $4.50 a day; after four years' service, $5.50 a day. Staff-surgeons on promotion are to get $6.50, and after four years $7.50 per day.

DEBATE ON THE TARIFF MATTER

Drury and Russell at it on the Platform.

Beaverton, Jan. 28.—A detachment of upwards of 100 manufacturers from Toronto, led by Thomas A. Russell, stormed the Grange citadel defended by E. C. Drury, president of the Dominion Grange, and on the floor of the Town Hall here, was fought the battle of the tariff.

Mr. Drury was allowed forty-five minutes and Mr. Russell followed for fifty minutes. Then Mr. Drury was given fifteen minutes for reply and Mr. Russell closed the debate with a speech of ten minutes. After the meeting the Toronto contingent returned via special N.C.R. train. Mr. Russell, in opposition, ably championed the cause of protection from the viewpoint of both the farmer and the manufacturers. Both speeches were given an attentive hearing, and as the decision as to the winner was left to the audience, and as the audience was not called upon to express its opinion, the result was left in doubt.

"I believe in manufacturing in Canada," said Mr. Drury. "Canada is a country of many and varied resources. Agriculture is necessary for the development of them all.

Nor did Mr. Druray stand, he said, as an unqualified free-trader. He believed there might be such a thing as wisely directed protection. When there was a disposition to organize a fully-developed foreign competition protection might be extended to an industry which could not be maintained in the face of that competition. But if so, that protection should be extended for a definite period only.

He maintained, however, that protection was not for the advantage of the nation as a whole, but that the tariff was generally working to the disadvantage of the farmers, and was sure that it would injure the whole nation. Further, Mr. Drury argued that he was "not opposed to a tariff for revenue. That is necessary. But we do not pretend to say that our tariff is one for revenue." The basis of taxation, he continued, was raw material, and industries using these raw materials should be allowed to have a tariff for revenue.

In opening his address Mr. Russell said that his ambition had been not to have the manufacturer and the farmer fight each other as foes, but to meet on common ground as friends interested in each other's welfare. He had no desire to become the champion of one class. He admonished them not to overlook the wage-earning class.

The Canadian market was just as valuable to the farmer as that of the United States was shown (1) by present prices in many lines of produce being higher here than across the line; (2) in that a change of fiscal policy would have an adverse effect upon national transportation routes and national development, and (3) the transitory nature of a bond between Canadian and United States markets.

GORHAM WILL NOT HANG

James Gorham will not be hanged next Tuesday morning. Messrs. O'Connell and Gordon have not received the official notification, but Mr. Gordon has been informed by a cabinet minister at Ottawa that the sentence will be commuted to life imprisonment."

A dispatch has been sent out from Ottawa that the sentence has been commuted, coming apparently from the highest authority, and it is probable that the official notification will be here to-day or to-morrow.

The scaffold has not been built yet, but construction would have started to-day if the information hadn't come.

RECIPROCITY A BLOW TO THE DEVELOPMENT OF CANADA

W. H. ROWLEY.

President of C.M.A., who says that the tariff would be inimical to Canada's interests.

Hon. Robert Rogers Says it is the Death of Imperialism, and Life to Continentalism.

Winnipeg, Man., January 27.—"No great service has been served by the reciprocity negotiations," said Hon. Robert Rogers, in an interview. "On the contrary, I believe a great blow has been struck at our Canadian national development. The development of our national life should be the pride and aim of every true Canadian, and anything that would savor of treachery to Confederation should not be condoned by the possibility that it might save a cent or a dollar to some individual or some company. But what have we done? We have sacrificed the British preference, we have impaired our commercial independence, we have departed from Imperialism. These surrenders and concessions we have made for what? For purely theoretical and visionary benefits.

"The Western farmer gets nothing. President Taft's frank acknowledgement that the United States have to have Canadian wheat to supply the food demands of their large population is simply an official admission of a condition that was plain to everyone. They had to have our wheat in any case.

"If I am not mistaken there will be no appreciable increase in the price of wheat to the Western farmer. We have the world as a market for our wheat, and world conditions determine the price. The Western farmer will lose through the impairment of our wheat standards, in which case this easy access to the American market will prove a costly privilege."

ONTARIO'S PULP POLICY REMAINS

Hon. Frank Cochrane Makes Important Announcement.

Timber Limits Will be Closed to American Mills.

Toronto, Jan. 28.—No doubt need be entertained in regard to the attitude of the Ontario Government with respect to their pulp wood policy. The following is an authoritative statement of the Government's position:

The proposed free interchange of pulpwood, pulp and the coarser grades of paper, which is subject to the consent of the several Canadian provinces interested, is not likely to find favor with the Government of the Province of Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, left for Sarnia with Hon. Mr. Hanna at noon yesterday to address a meeting last night. Mr. Cochrane was asked as he was leaving if he could say what the position of the Government of Ontario would be on the matter:

"It has not yet been considered or discussed by the Government," said Mr. Cochrane, "but I may say personally that I would be strongly opposed to any change in our existing policy. For three years past, in all pulp concessions advertised by the crown, we have imposed the condition that the pulp should be manufactured into paper in Canada. My own view is that this is the proper course to pursue if we are to develop the natural resources of our back districts as we hope to see them develop. In justice to the industrial possibilities of our great north country, and in the interests of the settler, for whom we desire to provide local markets, I could not recommend any other course."

It will be remembered that previous to three years ago the conditions governing the disposal of pulp concessions permitted the manufacture into pulp only or pulp or paper. As a result paper matte could be taken across the line and finished into paper in American factories.

According to corridor reports the time the Provincial Secretary will introduce his bills amending the liquor license act, will depend on the attitude of Government supporters at the coming caucus.

Hon. W. J. Hanna's proposal of last session to wipe out the local boards of license commissioners and create a central license board in their stead will be put before them. It is thought no action will be taken by the Government on this matter till next session, just before the general election. The amendments of the liquor act this session will be for better enforcement of the regulations that now exist, particularly in regard to local option.

THE TRADERS' BANK CONTINUES TO GROW

The Traders Bank of Canada, whose annual meeting was held on the 24th of January, shows a very satisfactory condition of affairs. During the year which ended Dec. 31st, the bank earned $542,351 which with the $102,443 carried forward from the previous year makes $626,794 available for distribution. This was divided as follows: Four dividends at the rate of 2 per cent quarterly, $160,000 transferred to the rest account, $15,000 written off bank furniture, $5,000 transferred to officers pension fund $5,000 transferred to officers guarantee fund, and $153,434 carried forward.

During the year the deposits increased by over $6,000,000 and the net profits and other departments of the bank also showed increases. The bank has now on deposit over $36,000,000 of which $29,000,000 is bearing interest and $7,000,000 not bearing interest. Its assets total over $47,152,000. Of this a very large proportion consists of quickly available assets over $11,730,000 which places it in a very strong position, the commercial loans now reach nearly $33,000,000, indicating that the bank has been doing its full share in meeting the commercial needs of the country. Altogether, the showing has a very creditable one and reflects the highest credit upon the management.

A FINE SHOWING

The annual report of the Toronto Savings & Loan Company, as presented at the meeting yesterday, was certainly the record of a very prosperous year with the institution. It was the best year the company has had, and closed the first twenty-five years of its existence. The report showed gross earnings of $224,657, and net profits after all expenses and losses had been provided for of $128,048. This with a balance of $36,000 carried forward from 1909 gave an amount of $161,477 as available for dividends and other purposes. The regular eight per cent. dividend was paid, and $40,000 added to the reserve fund, which now amounts to $720,000, or 72 per cent. of the paid up capital of the institution. The net investment represented by the holdings of the company is $3,217,000. Such a statement is a fine record of sound business management, one of which the officers and shareholders of the company may well feel proud, and there is every prospect that 1910 will deal even more kindly with the company. The annual addition to the reserve fund gives the company the paid, and $40,000 added to the reserve managed business institution, and although not a chartered bank, its steady increase of assets entitles it to the confidence of every depositor.

THE TARIFF QUESTION

Of incalculable importance to Canadians generally is the tariff agreement reached by the government of Canada and the United States executive. Whether or not this agreement goes into effect unmodified, the conclusions reached by the negotiators initiate principles of trade that will materially affect, if not completely alter, the status of our relations with the United States.

Looking at the objects which the negotiators were seeking to attain, it must be apparent that Canada is making a most important step, one which is fraught with gravest consequences, in seeking the extension of commerce north and south instead of east and west. That the commercial fortunes of the United States and Canada are inseparably connected; and that the progress of commerce and development of material resources must tend towards a greater unification of continential trade, must be admitted. What then, of the initiation of a policy, so radical as this new one, in view of the relation of Canada to the British Empire?

This problem is a great deal deeper than it appears on the surface. It involves the question as to whether Canada as a part of the empire, shall maintain a distinctly separate commercial identity from the United States, and devote her main energies towards the creation of new commercial ties with the empire, or shall permit the fusion of her commercial life with that of the great nation to the south.

President Taft says that now is the time for the United States to enter the wedge. He says that they—meaning Canadians—"must soon decide whether they are to regard themselves as permanently isolated from the United States markets by a perpetual wall or whether we are to be friends." That is true. Canada must now decide whether in seeking closer trade relations with the United States, it is prepared to lose through the course of years its separate commercial spirit—for that is the broad principle underlying the agreement.

The question of whether this man or that man will gain or lose a few dollars through the new tariff arrangement — if carried through — is insignificant beside this "reciprocity" agitation and its result. Canada's position, placed in contiguity with the United States, is anomalous, in that her patriotism, the ties of blood and of kinship, call her across the sea; her commercial spirit must call her across the border. There is no thought in Canada for political union, the idea being abhorrent. But whether the driving in of the wedge will lead eventually to commercial union, with political union some day following—one being a corollary of the other—is a question which will agitate the thinking mind for more than one day. Fortunately it is highly improbable that the United States will permit the agreement to become operative—since so many of its own business people would be hit by the radical departure from high protectionism.

The agreement provides that Canada, in return for getting free access for farm and dairy products, gives the United States a firm grip on our natural resources. Listen to what President Taft tells the American people;

> "Ought we not then to arrange a commercial agreement with Canada, if we can, by which we shall have direct access to her great supply of natural products without an obstructing or prohibitory tariff?"

Later on in his address, President Taft refers to the sentiment in Canada, which Hon. Clifford Sifton, who was the brains of the Laurier Cabinet while he was in it, has been so active in propagating—that of the necessity of the conservation of our natural resources. He has this interesting observation to make;

> "If we give them reason to take the former view can we complain if they adopt methods denying access to certain of their natural resources, except upon conditions quite unfavorable to us? Should we not now, therefore, before their policy is too crystallized and too fixed for change, meet them in a spirit of real concession, facilitate commerce between the two countries and thus increase the natural resources available to our people?"

Is not this the key-note "to increase the natural resources available to our people?" When Canada has the natural resources, is it good business policy to give them away, to permit of their free exportation to the United States, even though Canada gets some compensating advantages in free entry to agricultural products to the United States?

We will do the Canadian negotiators the justice of saying that they have obtained much more out of Uncle Sam in the way of concessions than ever Canadians obtained before. But conditions of trade, the matter of supply of raw material for manufacturing, are forcing the United States to make these concessions. They would have been made to a Conservative government just as well as to a Liberal—had the Conservative government been prepared to sacrifice Canada's national and ultimate good, for the increasing of the market for certain classes of products.

In round figures, Canada wipes out duties on 19 per cent. of its imports from the United States. The United States wipes out 76 per cent. of the duties on its imports from Canada. This looks good, but in actual figures the United States imported in 1910 $39,000,000 worth of the products now to be duty free, or equal to 67 per cent. of its total imports. Canada imported in 1910, $25,870,000 worth of goods now to be duty free, or 19 per cent. So that the disparity is not actually very great.

The result of the paper and pulp negotiations will in effect be nil, since the Provincial governments control the matter. The United States will admit duty free all pulp and paper to a value of 4 cents a pound, providing all provincial restrictions are removed. It will be noted—and this is important—that the United States duty on paper is not abolished unless the provinces permit free exploitation of their pulpwood. Thus there can be no hope of manufacturing paper here, sending it duty free into the United States, while restricting the export of pulpwood in its raw state. This would, of course, give to Canada the control of the newsprint trade. In the matter of pulpwood the situation is "as you were," unless the provinces want to manufacture paper in competition with the American mills getting their supply here free. Which would be a suicidal policy, because in the course of a few years the United States will have to have our paper, duty free anyway, even without free pulp.

In the matter of fruit, the removal of the duties will work a hardship on British Columbia and Niagara district fruit-growers, since California fruit will come in duty free. There is no objection to the reciprocity insofar as oranges, lemons, pineapples, etc., are concerned, as they are not grown in Canada, but in the matter of raspberries and strawberries and peaches, the earlier American fruits will spoil the Canadian market for the home-grown fruit. The superior American packing methods will also militate against the Canadian fruit. Whether with a free American market the Canadian fruit-growers could with their later fruit, equalize matters is problematic. But it means that the price of fruit will be largely an international matter, and that what fruit costs the consumer at Buffalo will also be the Hamilton price to the consumer. This arrangement will stop the glutting of the Canadian markets in the rush season, and cheap fruit to the consumer at the Canadian points of production will cease, a steady price being maintained.

The reductions proposed on United States manufactures do not appear to be very important. That on agricultural implements is the chief, but it is yet hard to say what effect a lower import duty will have. A reduction of many classes of agricultural machinery of 2 1-2 per cent. is not very steep, and while it might be regarded as some concession to western opinion, it will not have any radical effect on prices, the informed people believe.

There is one feature of the negotiations which will strike most Canadians as nullifying the effect of the whole agreement. There is no certainty of the continuity of the agreement, even though legislation were passed giving it effect. It may be altered at any time, by either nation. Mr. Fielding in his address to Parliament said;

> If the United States should change one item in its tariff in a way to prejudice the trade in that particular item, the Parliament of Canada must change its tariff in such a way as to prejudice the trade in a particular article, and if, by-and-bye, one item after another were changed and all the advantages of the arrangement were wiped away, I suppose we would come back to our old condition and it would be a case of as you were.

With the Democrats coming to power with the new Congress, it might easily be imagined what sort of continuity a tariff agreement made by the Republicans would have, when the option was within the reach of the Democrats to change any part of it at any time. The Democrats are essentially a lower tariff party, but that is no guarantee that they would not undertake instanter to destroy by some overt action, the benefits to the United States accruing through a Republican agreement. If the Democrats had made the agreement, with a lease of power of power to come, there might be some hope, since time would assuage the feeling of injury business interests might have, and enable to the people as a whole to readjust themselves to the changed conditions. That is the result, of course, of making tariff agreements with a dying administration, especially when there is no provision for permanency in that agreement whatever.

There will be a great deal of discussion over the agreement, both in Canada and in the United States, but there is no doubt that the agreement will be sadly mangled and mutilated by the United States Congress or Senate—and in its amended form will probably be unacceptable to Canada. The Dominion cannot afford to make any agreement that does not give it at least equal treatment, and we shall see whether the American legislators are not afraid to make a deal that does not give them a great advantage.

There is one feature about the reciprocal trade with the United States that some papers seem to overlook. If the United States opens its markets to our agriculturalists, taking all of our surplus production, as it will, will not our over-sea export trade in all of these lines drop to a mere nothing? This is a natural conclusion, since freight costs will be much less, and a market of 90,000,000 will easily absorb the surplus production of 8,000,000.

Granting that our exports of natural products—our only exports of any account—to Great Britain fall away to a mere nothing, does it not follow that we shall also cease to buy largely from Great Britain in manufactures? With a heavy balance of trade against us every year, does it not follow that we shall turn more and more to the United States for the manufactures we ourselves do not supply?

If we sell to the United States all our surplus production, thereby having a big credit balance, will we not be inclined to buy manufactures from there, against that credit? Most certainly.

With our exports to Britain falling away, our imports from Britain falling away, is it to be expected that we shall maintain the British tie through mere sentimental loyalty? Time will wear it away. Something more tangible is needed. Good trade relations between the members of the empire are necessary to preserve its integrity. Britain is our banker, supplying us with our funds for the development of Canada. To destroy our commerce with Britain, would mean also the destruction of our right, to John Bull's capacious purse, would it not? That means that we, having a billion and a half of British capital invested in Canada, would not obtain another billion and a half. We must look to the United States to supply our financing. And in confining our trade to the continent, very largely, being dependent on the United States very largely for our monetary supply, does it not seem likely that instead of having only $300,000,000 invested in Canada the Americans would get the benefit very largely of all our future progress and development? There is danger of Canada's standing in the British Empire in the suggestion of reciprocal trade.

It is true that opening these markets will give a great stimulus to the Canadian agriculturist, but at the same time the lowering of the barriers, the concentration of attention on development of commerce north and south, means a great blow to our imperial connection. No matter what anyone says, that is a fact which cannot be squirmed away from. Is Canada prepared to pay the price?

THE PROBE AT OTTAWA

It is beginning to look as though there were some breakers ahead for Hon. Charles Murphy, Secretary of State, over the unwholesome condition of things unearthed in the Government Printing Bureau. For several weeks during the summer Mr. Murphy held an individual enquiry into this breach of the government service, with the result that several employes were dismissed and a voluminous report made. The Opposition on one or two occasions already this session has made an effort in the Public Accounts Committee to probe deeper than Mr. Murphy went, and it was speedily found that the one-man investigation of the Minister merely scratched the surface. Now there is a demand for a special committee of parliament to go thoroughly into the whole circumstances, and enquire not only into conditions in the Bureau, but into the investigating methods adopted by Mr. Murphy. If this demand is granted by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and it is hard to see how it can be refused under the circumstances, it should throw a light on the methods which have blossomed and thrived under the Laurier regime, where efficiency has ever been permitted to step aside in favor of political pull, and where business ability is one of the least considerations.

A systematic tabulation has been made by Dr. Edwards, of Frontenac, of the contract price, and the finished price of the armories and military buildings scattered throughout the country, from Halifax to Vancouver. He found that in all cases without exception, the cost, when completed, exceeded the contract price by from 25 to 75 per cent. This is the kind of thing which is permitted to go on by a weak Minister of Public Works. It cannot be defended, and is a wilful waste of the money of the people. There was no hearsay about Dr. Edwards' calculations, as his estimate was based on a return furnished him by Mr. Pugsley's own department. This state of affairs proves that the tender system is a mere farce, and that when parliament votes a sum of money for a building it has no guarantee it will be completed for that amount.

One of the most striking instances of what Mr. Borden termed "the inaptitude and inefficiency" of this government, and the total disregard of business principles was brought to the attention of parliament by Richard Blain, the member for Peel, when he moved a vote of censure on the action of the Department of Public Works in renting certain buildings in Ottawa at prices which gave the owners annually from 15 to 18 per cent. on the cost of their property. Mr. Blain instanced the case of the old Y.M.C.A. building, which was on the market for eighteen months, and was eventually sold for $17,500. The purchaser added a couple of stories and spent some $62,000 on it, so that the total investment in the property was $80,000. The government rents this building to house the Department of Labor, and pay an annual net rental of $14,484. This government is continually boasting of its surpluses. It is a fair question to ask Mr. Pugsley why he did not take $80,000 out of a treasury which Mr. Fielding says is so well stocked with surpluses, buy this building outright, and thus do away with the necessity of paying eighteen per cent. But no. That would have been too business-like a course for this government to pursue. Waste of public money must continue to go merrily on, and it is a significant thing that the supporters of the administration in parliament when confronted with indisputable facts and figures as to the condition of affairs in the renting of buildings at exorbitant prices from political friends calmly by their votes support the hands of Mr. Pugsley in this carnival of extravagance. It is not an inspiring thought that Liberal members are so blinded by partisan feeling that they will defend by their votes, transactions which as ordinary business men in their own everyday dealings they would not consider for a moment. The Liberal party to-day has been so long identified with rake-off and graft that it does not hesitate to support a policy permitting the same to run riot.

YOUTHFUL ROLE AT SIXTY SEVEN

The "Immortal Sarah" in a Remarkable Portrayal

It was like turning back the chapters of history, only to find that it could never grow old, to see Sarah Bernhardt in "L'Aiglon" last night. It was a difficult role to essay, for a woman nearing seventy to portray the character of a boy approaching manhood. But genius knows not the bars of time, nor has it any statute of limitations, and Mme. Bernhardt acted her part with the same royal grace, the same distinction and illusive perfection that most of her audience remembered to have seen or read of when they were many years younger.

True, she had no longer all of the rich melody of accent that charmed a score or two score years ago, while her figure was not suggestive of youth. But these, with an occasional indisposition to indulge in agile movements were the only signs that the great tragedienne was approaching the psalmist's age limit, and had long said good-bye to that ascribed to Dr. Osler.

However, while Madame Bernhardt had not the sweet tones of girlhood she had a deeper accent, which admirably suited the masculine part she was presenting. And throughout she portrayed the various phases of the awakening, growth and breakings of the unfortunate son of Napoleon, with almost painful intensity.

The whole drama was so presented as to really make one forget the prosaic facts of present day existence. With the first appearance of Madame Bernhardt the audience was transported to the heroic days of the great Emperor, and compelled to feel all the emotions of her unfortunate son, who with the hereditary weakness of the Austrian royal house, inherited through his mother, is cursed with occasional gleams of the greatness of his father, from whom he inherits his title, "L'Aiglon," the Eaglet.

As lived—not merely acted—by Madame Bernhardt, it is a very noble character, with a wonderful admixture of the child and the hero. And, strangely enough, her portrayal of the childish instincts of the young prince was even more convincing than those of the more heroic declamation of Rostand's sonorous lines. Where in the third act the young Duke sits with the Emperor and finally wins him by his childish heroics, and the evident glimpses of the military genius of his father, Madame Bernhardt rises to a noble height of appreciation, much more telling than some of the more theatric features of the drama. The extraordinarily boyish abandon with which she curls up on the Emperor's chair and relates in splendid language the high aspirations of the captive prince was a wonderful piece of portrayal.

AS GOOD AS HAVING A DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE

That is what thousands of mothers say of Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets promptly and surely cure all the minor ills of babyhood and childhood and what is more they are absolutely safe — they have never been known to harm the youngest baby — they never will harm anyone — they are good for babies of all ages. Concerning them Mrs. Wm. Higgins, Karn, Ont., writes:—"I shall never be without Baby's Own Tablets in the house as long as my children are small. They are a wonderful medicine and are as good as having a doctor in the house. I gave them to my little boy for colic, and they quickly cured him. I am always glad to recommend them to other mothers. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. Brockville Ont.

STEP-MOTHER WAS FEROCIOUS

Burned Child's Tongue With Red Hot Spoon

More details of ferocious acts of cruelty were given at the South-Western Police Court in London, the other day, when Arthur and Ethel Rankin were again remanded on the charge of ill-treating the eleven-year-old daughter of the former.

It was alleged that the stepmother:

Fractured both the child's arms by twisting them.

Pressing a hot flat-iron against her hands.

Stamped on her toes until a nail was destroyed.

Burnt her tongue with a red hot spoon.

Turned her finger-ends over until the blood came.

Beat her with a copper-stick and other articles.

"She made me put my tongue out," said the little girl yesterday, "and struck me under the chin. The state of my fingers was caused by the way in which she pressed them on the table. I told the inspector that I ran into the park and beat myself until I was bruised. Mother told me to say that."

Dr. J. J. Douglas described many bruises and abrasions which he found on the child's body and limbs.

Dr. H. A. Eccles stated that the right elbow was fixed in a bent position, and a very difficult and dangerous operation would be needed.

Neighbors gave evidence regarding the moaning and crying of the little girl, and a remand was ordered.

INFLUX OF MONEY.

British Elections Said to Be Responsible For It.

Montreal, Jan 28—An enquiry at the leading banks elicited the fact that not only have large sums of money come over to Canada since the last general election in Great Britain, when Lloyd-George and his fiscal policy were sustained by the people of the United Kingdom as a whole, but that the recent succession tax of the State of New York has also been the means of switching a good deal of American capital to the Canadian side as a result of the imposition of a tax amounting to a quarter of a man's fortune, supposing he is worth over a million dollars. The New York act gives to the state five per cent. on the first $25,000, ten per cent. on the next $75,000, fifteen per cent. on the next $400,000, and last, but not least, twenty per cent. on the following $500,000, out of a man's or woman's earthly possessions supposing the deceased's securities belong to the State of New York.

In other words, if a man dies worth a million dollars the sum of $260,000 goes to the State Exchequer.

There is no way of avoiding the payment of the succession taxes unless they are stocks of corporations created by the law of a state which does not impose succession taxes like, for instance, the State of Pennsylvania.

It is not at all surprising, therefore, as announced at the money centres Thursday, that the New York succession tax and the latest creations of the Imperial Chancellor, have both contributed to bring a great amount of money into Canada during the last two months.

It is stated, however, that the greater the amount of money being sent to Canada from Great Britain, the more cautious has become the British Investor. Some months ago the bankers say a good deal of capital found its way to the Dominion without the merit of the cases being too closely enquired into, but that is not the case at the present time, and such a change will be all the better in the long run for the credit of the country at large.

A great many interesting enquiries, for instance, are daily reaching this city, and the story is the same at all the important banking institutions of the Dominion, for first-class bond issues of assured industrial concerns.

It looks, therefore, as if this inflow will be continued during the present year, and probably more money will flow into the different provinces before the end of the present year than during any twelve months since Confederation. This is, in fact, the opinion of people who have given a great deal of study to the financial situation on both sides of the Atlantic.

A PLAY OF MERIT A NOTABLE CAST

"The Fourth Estate"

Joseph Medill Patterson and Harriet Ford's undoubtedly great play of a most important portion of contemporary life, "The Fourth Estate," will come to the Grand Theatre next Wednesday evening. As a drama of devotion and high ideals, moved by an intense heart interest in the conflict between love and duty, this excellently conceived and artistically presented play makes a powerful appeal to the emotions. The action is realistic to a fault wherever the workings of a great newspaper establishment are shown, the sidelights on the society of the newly enriched are clear, there is no mincing of principles and matter when it comes to showing up men in high places recreant to the trust imposed on them, nor any evasion of the picturing of bribery and other nefarious schemes that most unfortunately are too current at the present day, and which it is the function of "The Fourth Estate" ruthlessly to expose. The piece is splendidly balanced and the large audiences that have seen it to date, are vocal in their praises of it. Charles Balsar, as editor, Selene Johnson as the heroine; George Thompson, as the proprietor; Harriet Ross as his wife, Austin Webb as the base of Justice, and the others put forth the play in a powerful manner. "The Fourth Estate" is a creation in dramatic form which it will require much time and work to displace from its position as the newspaper play of the century. The sale of seats opens Monday morning.

EXHIBIT CAR TO BE SHOWN HERE

The car is being exhibited at different points and is on its way east.

The letter stated that if a hall could be secured for a lecture, Dr. Hodgetts new Chief Medical Adviser to the Council on Conservation would come here. Dr. McPherson had made arrangements for the use of the auditorium at the Collegiate Institute, and the lecture will be held Wednesday evening. The public are invited to attend.

SWEET LAVENDER WAS A TREAT

Edward Terry Distinguishes Himself as Comedian

Sweet Lavender, as presented by Edward Terry, the eminent English comedian, and company was well received last night at the Grand by a large audience. Mr. Terry in the part of Dick Phenyl, the penniless, briefless barrister, fond of the glass, but withal good-hearted and ready to do anything for his friends was splendid. His characterization was without a flaw, and he got many calls from the audience. The other members of the company were fairly capable, though they certainly failed to measure up to the mark as regards quality in a couple of cases. The performance was greatly very enjoyable, however, especially for the feminine portion of the audience, to whom the tribulations of the lovelorn youths appealed quite strongly.

An Exponent of the Character

A critic, in writing of Miss Tennant's recital said in part—

"The great selection last night was the potion speech from "Romeo and Juliet." Few indeed, succeed in giving a true interpretation of this most beautiful, but most difficult character that Shakespeare gave to women. As beautiful Barbara Tennant came on the stage, we felt that a great Juliet was in front of us; before she had finished the great scene, we knew it. As she unfolded the lines, picturing the terror of the imagination, the suspense, the bravery and the great love of poor Juliet, she was a truly living exponent of the character. When she had given the great climax 'Romeo I come; this do I drink to thee' with a grandeur worthy of only herself one could well repeat the English critics, 'A great Juliet.'"

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Address of Sunday Evening Service "An Unanswerable Question"

The subject for the address at the Crystal Theatre to-morrow evening will be "An Unanswerable Question" This will be one of the best meetings of the season. There will be a new song, and one in which all will join, "He Will Hold Me Fast", will be distributed in typewritten form, and everybody who was present at last Sunday night's meeting will want to join in singing this good new hymn. The special vocal number will be a duet by two of the members of the staff entitled "Brightly Beams" It is expected that the orchestra will be well represented. There ought to be a good crowd at the Crystal to-morrow night.

Next Tuesday night there will be a social gathering at the Y. M. C. A. The ladies are putting this on and it looks as though it would be one of the biggest events of the season. There will be a good musical program and refreshments will be served.

The usual Bible classes will be held on Sunday at the building. There will be the Sunday morning Bible study Club at 9.30 in the parlour, and the Boys' Class in the Boys' Rooms at 10 o'clock. Then the Gymnasium Men's Class will be held at 4.15. This class is taught by Mr. Thompson, and is a good one.

IMPORTANT TO MOTHERS!

Mothers should know just why Zam-Buk is so effective in cases of rashes, scalp sores, pimples and eruptions on babies and young children.

Most ordinary salves contain animal oil and fat. Every housewife knows that if animal oil or fat be left exposed to air for any length of time putrefactive changes must occur. These changes occur none the less even if they are hidden by some scent.

Now, any salve which sinks into the pores enters the blood. You would not feed your child impure food! Why put into its blood imperfect salve products?

Zam-Buk contains no trace of animal fat or oil, or any mineral poison. It is purely herbal, being compounded of healing juices and essences.

Applied to cuts, burns, bruises and skin injuries, it allays pain, kills disease germs and heals. Sold everywhere at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

SAVED FROM TERRIBLE DEATH BY PASSERBY

Head of Intoxicated Man Rested on Rail, With Freight Train Approaching

By the timely intervention of Providence, an intoxicated man was last evening, saved from being sent into eternity, as he lay helpless at the trestle bridge, immediately west of the Protestant Home, and over which a swiftly moving freight train was about to cross.

He had been walking on the G. T. R. track in a westerly direction, and in coming to the bridge, one foot fell down in the small space between the timbers. His head rested on one of the rails as Edward Tighe, who resides at 513 Donegal Street, came along and noticed him.

A long freight train could be heard approaching, but by acting quickly Tighe managed to pull the unfortunate man from his perilous position to safety, just in time.

The curve commencing at Hunter Street would not have allowed of the engineer noticing the human bundle between the two rails, and, when it would have been possible for him to have seen the man, the short distance would not have given him time to stop his engine until after a terrible fatality had been brought about.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

The public library will be open to the public, so far as the reading room is concerned, on Wednesday, Feb. 1st. The stack room will be closed for a few days on account of the delay occasioned by the non-arrival of the borrowers' cards and other necessary equipment in connection with that department of the library.

It may not be out of place to recapitulate that a cheerful acquiescence in such rules as the Board, in the interests of the whole community, has thought fit to make it essential to the proper and harmonious working of the library. It cannot be too strongly emphasized, therefore, that such an institution is not the place to meet in for the discussion of business or for a quiet chat. It is the wish of the Board that the public shall find therein an atmosphere of refinement and recreation where any one can enjoy an hour or two in perfect quiet and contentment. Conversation and disturbance of any kind are apt to detract from such a desirable condition and will not be allowed.

Reference has more than once been made in the local papers to the fact that very many books were taken out months ago by readers, that have not yet found their way back to the library. The librarian wishes to thank those who have kindly responded to his request for the return of such volumes as may have been in their possession for their promptitude in doing so. So far, close on three hundred volumes have been returned, but there are many still returnable. As a declaration will have to be signed by all who have books marked against them in the old register before they can be allowed to have any volumes from the new library, it would be well that attention should be given to the matter of returning books.

The names of Messrs. Shaw and Knox were added to the Committee of last year, who will deal with the matter in which the Lithographic Stone Co., through their solicitors Bennett and Goodwill ask for the sum of $750 for stone used by the County during the construction of a bridge.

Printing, Finance, Schools, Appointments and Roads and Bridges Committees reports were read and adopted, clause 6 in the Schools being struck out.

The report of the Board of Management of the House of Refuge was also read and adopted.

WORDS OF PRAISE FOR MISS TENNANT

Belleville, Jan. 26, 1911.

Mrs. Hazen Ritchie,
297 Hunter Street,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Mrs. Ritchie,—

I am very glad to see that the King's Daughters are fortunate enough to arrange with Miss Barbara Tennant for an entertainment to be given by her in Peterborough, as this entertainment should be successful, both financially and in the pleasure it will give to those attending. Miss Tennant gave a most enjoyable and instructive evening in Belleville, and she certainly is well worth hearing. It is impossible to describe the wide range which Miss Tennant covers in her entertainment, and the power she has of influencing those listening to her. I trust this entertainment will prove a great success, and wish to congratulate the King's Daughters on their enterprise in getting this up. Anybody who wishes to thoroughly enjoy themselves for an evening, should not fail to be present.

Yours truly,
J. H. LARMONTH.

PROMINENT MEN AND WELL KNOWN WOMEN

Gladly Testify for "Fruit-a-tives"

One reason why "Fruit-a-tives" is winning a welcome in the hearts and homes of thousands from coast to coast, is because so many of the leading citizens of Canada have spoken so strongly in favor of this wonderful fruit medicine. In every province—in every city—in every hamlet—throughout the three million, seven hundred square miles of the Dominion, there are many who owe their health and some who owe their lives, to the marvellous virtues of "Fruit-a-tives".

NELSON BANISTER, ESQ., (Capt. "A" Squadron, 12th Manitoba Dragoons) of Oak Lake, Manitoba, says—"I was stricken with Sciatica and Neuralgia of the Heart—was in bed for six weeks—I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and it completely cured me. Today, my whole family use "Fruit-a-tives."

PAUL J. JONES, ESQ., retired merchant of Sarnia, Ont., testified "I suffered for 25 years with Constipation, Indigestion and Catarrh of the Stomach. I gave "Fruit-a-tives" a trial and find it the only remedy that does me good and I cannot praise it too highly".

MRS. LIZZIE BAXTER, 5 Home Place, Toronto.—"I was a terrible sufferer from Rheumatism for nearly a year. Two doctors treated me but I became a helpless cripple. I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised and decide to take it. After taking five boxes, I was well".

HENRY SPEERS, ESQ., the well known Justice of The Peace of Moorefield, Ont., "I suffered from severe indigestion for almost two years and became almost a skeleton. Two experienced doctors pronounced my case hopeless. My son asked me to try "Fruit-a-tives" and from the outset of taking these wonderful tablets, I was better and "Fruit-a-tives" completely cured me."

N. JOUBERT, ESQ., a well known and highly esteemed citizen of Grande Ligne, P. Q., says "I heartily recommend "Fruit-a-tives" to all who suffer with Constipation."

H. MARCHESSAULT (High Constable of Province of Quebec), St. Hyacinthe, says "Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Chronic Pain in the Back."

EDWIN ORAM, SR., of Sydney Mines, N. S., writes "For many years, I suffered from Indigestion and Dyspepsia—lost 25 pounds—and thought the disease was Cancer. After taking three boxes of "Fruit-a-tives", I was much better and now I can say that "Fruit-a-tives" has entirely cured me."

Be guided by these letters of Canada's well known men and women. Try "Fruit-a-tives" and see for yourself that it will do for you what it has done for thousands of other sufferers.

Downstairs Seven of Transformer Department Won by Score of 8-1

Two teams from the Transformer department of the C. G. E. met in combat at Brock Street Rink last night, the downstair seven winning out by a 8-1 score.

There were many features to the game. Anglessey was particularly conspicuous on the fence. Short circuit Bayers starred for the lonely tally aggregation while F. Derocher for the winners had recent performances of Leonidas of the intermediates, shaded. Campbell scored the majority of the eight goals. Half-time score 5-0. F. Allen refereed and was not injured.

The teams were,

Downstairs — Goal, Derocher; point, Coughlin; cover, Campbell; rover, Hefferman, centre, Melu; right, Peter; left, Moran.

Upstairs — Goal, Bayers; point, Anglessey, cover, Meagher; rover, Elliott, centre, Allen; left, Boos; right Meln.

PUCKLAND

Armstrong, of the Trenton team, had his shoulder dislocated at Cobourg last night.

The Capital seven with an unbroken string of victories in the National Hockey League, play at Montreal to-night against the Wanderers.

More than one complaint has been registered against the practice of smoking at the rink. Certainly the smoke has a bad effect on the players, and if the fans are looking for a championship they should be willing to do without the weed, while in the rink if by their indulgence the players suffer.

The O.H.A. will likely arrange the next groupings for next week. It is probable that either Peterborough or Oshawa will be the next opponents the locals will have to play.—Kingston Whig.

Two teams of young lady hockeyists met at the rink yesterday afternoon. The score was not announced by the referee, Bill Gibson. The two goal umpires at the north enjoyed their work immensely.

Whitby intermediates won the championship of group 2 by defeating Oshawa on their own ice last night, with a 9—6 score. The Whitby team scored 5 goals in the first fifteen minutes of play. To-day's Mail says "Leo Quinn for Oshawa made several fast individual rushes, passing nearly every opponent."

There is nothing new regarding the protest of the Trenton Hockey Club. Secretary of the local club has not received any notifications from O.H.A. headquarter, and while the Toronto papers have reported O.H.A. news, nothing has been published about the Trenton protest.

Y.M.C.A. SPORT

Athletics are now in full swing. There are at present three contests going on in junior, intermediate, and Collegiate classes. In the Collegiate and junior only a few points separate the leaders. The events down for the Intermediates on Tuesday are 60 yard potato race.

On Thursday, Feb. 16, the Intermediate contest will be decided, and the Senior contest on Friday. The events in all three contests will be 60 and 220 yards potato races, running high jump, standing broad jump, fence vault, shot put.

AFTER TREATMENT

He was surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your NEW METHOD TREATMENT for a serious blood disease with which I had been infected for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the NEW METHOD TREATMENT for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I certainly can recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish. W. PILSENER LAGER

A Stabbing Affray.

Porcupine City, Jan. 28—Two Syrians engaged in a stabbing affray at Kelso Mines last Tuesday, and one man known as Metta Sweva lies in a hospital down the country with a broken leg and many bad wounds on the body, which may yet prove fatal, while the other one, bleeding and badly wounded, took to the woods to avoid arrest.

Dispute arose over stage matters, and a quarrel ensued. Knives were drawn and fierce slashes made, Sweva being stabbed several times about the head and shoulders, while his antagonist was struck on the arms.

Sweva slipped as the result of unsound footing, and his foe took advantage of the fall and jumped on him with heavily booted feet. His right leg was broken.

Only occasionally does a fight of this character mar the peace and happiness of the district.

Threw Him Over Bridge.

Pembroke, Ont., Jan 28.—A fight that took place the other night proved to be fatal for one of the parties concerned.

It appears that two young fellows, Wright and St. Denis, met on the Indian River bridge and started a friendly conversation. In the course of it St. Denis asked Wright for a chew of tobacco. The latter refused and matters were complicated. In the quarrel that followed Wright took hold of his adversary and without further preliminaries, it is alleged, threw him over the railing of the bridge on the ice below, with the result that St. Denis died from the injuries sustained within 24 hours.

Wright will likely have to face a charge of manslaughter.

STUART STRATHY, General Manager.

General Manager's Address.

After reading the above Report, the General Manager reviewed it as follows: The statement just read, exhibiting the condition of the affairs of the Bank, will, I am sure, meet with your approval, as it shows a steady growth in all departments. You will see by it our deposits now aggregate over $36,000,000, which, by comparison with the deposits of a year ago, show an increase of $6,200,000, an amount almost equal to the total deposits of the Bank ten years ago. You will see that we have employed these additional funds to the extent of $5,500,000 in commercial credits. Naturally the earning powers of the Bank have increased, and this is reflected in the net profits, which amount to $524,351, as against $467,082 last year.

During the year we have opened eleven new offices, the expenses in connection with which have been taken out of this year's profits. The points are: Beiseker, Alberta; Erskine, Alberta; Haileybury, Ontario; Matheson, Ontario; Munson, Alberta; Porcupine, Ontario; Rosetown, Saskatchewan; South Fort George, B.C.; Steelton, Ontario; Stewart, B.C.; Wroxeter, Ontario.

The sum of $348,360 has been distributed to Shareholders in dividends; $100,000 added to Reserve Fund, which now amounts to $2,300,000; the usual appropriation of $10,000 has been made to officers' guarantee and pension funds, and $15,000 written off furniture account, and the sum of $153,434.79 carried forward to the credit of Profit and Loss new account

Referring to circulation account, this now stands at $3,790,000, as against $3,060,000 last year. Indeed, in all departments of the Bank, the general growth of the country has been satisfactorily reflected. To show this we will make a comparison with the figures of the Bank ten years ago:

	1900	1910
Capital paid up	$1,000,000	$ 4,354,500
Rest Account	150,000	2,300,000
Deposits	6,528,190	36,077,834
Circulation	887,000	3,790,000
Total Assets	9,177,385	47,152,736

Referring to Bank Premises account, we now own 32 properties including Toronto office, all standing in the name of the Bank, the value of which is shown in the statement before you.

Our Shareholders are constantly increasing, and now number 1,817.

It is not needful for me to refer to the wonderful progress the country at large is making. This prosperity is manifest to all. Suffice it to say, our Branches extend fairly well throughout the Dominion, and we are in an excellent position to take advantage of the growth of the country, and confidently look forward to a steady increase in the earnings of the Bank. We have paid a conservative rate of interest to our Shareholders since 1885, and in the meantime have built up a reserve, to protect your capital, to the extent of $2,300,000. Our foundations are well and truly laid, and with the natural growth and prospects of this country, perhaps the equal of which does not elsewhere exist, we have every reason to look forward to the future with the greatest confidence, feeling that the property committed to our care will continue to make a reasonable return to its Shareholders.

All of the Branches of the Bank, including the Head Office, have been inspected during the year. I am conscious that the result of the Bank's operations for the past year, as shown to you by the statement now before you, could not have been accomplished except for the loyalty and efficiency of the staff of the Bank. It affords me greatest pleasure to bear testimony to their devotion to the interests of your institution.

President's Address.

Gentlemen,—I have much pleasure in moving the adoption of the report for the year 1910.

Much of the general prosperity of our Canadian Banks is doubtless due to the great advancement this country has made within the past few years. A large increase in our population and the continued development of the Northwest have added very materially to the wealth of Canada. The extensions of our great railway systems and our rapidly growing trade with other countries have placed this Dominion on a very high level of commercial importance. Banks are becoming every day a more important factor in meeting the increased demands made upon capital and credit for aid in the inauguration of substantial industries and the enlargement of general business. The result is that our banking institutions have become in a material sense the moving power in all national works as well as the necessary adjunct of private enterprise. A wide field is thus opened up with satisfactory results. Securities are improving in character and value. Investments are found to be amply protected. Payments are being more promptly met than formerly. Everything of a financial and commercial character is becoming more substantial. Money is now utilized in larger and more profitable enterprises than at any time in the history of banking. The outlook for the future is most favorable. Add to these facts the rapid strides which our rich north and western Canada is making and the prosperous condition of the older Provinces and it is reasonably safe to say that with careful management and prudent investments, banks occupy a stronger position to-day than they have ever done

The fact that the failure of one or two smaller banks has not affected the standing of the existing institutions shows that our banks are on a solid basis. With anything like careful and conservative management, failure cannot happen if the interests of the shareholders and depositors are safeguarded by watchfulness and business methods on the part of the management and directors, the assets of a bank must always be greater than its liabilities, and whilst this is the state of affairs, the public are safe. Your Directors have always adhered to this principle, and have spared neither time nor consideration in watching all the outgoings of your money. The securities have been closely scrutinized. Investments in the slightest degree of speculative character have been avoided. As a result, we believe that our present record will appeal to the shareholders in a convincing manner, and afford them good ground for the confidence they have in the management. It should be remembered that this bank has only been in existence about half the lifetime of others of about the same volume of business. As a reward to the management and all concerned in the welfare of the Traders Bank, it is pleasing to note that our deposits have increased over last year by six millions, a condition which could not have been created except by thoroughly good management on the part of the Bank officials and the confidence which such management always brings about

There have been eleven new branches opened during the year. This was rendered necessary by reason of the expansion of the Bank, as well as of the business requirement of the country at large For a short time, several of these branches cannot be expected to pay, except indirectly, but our experience is that if branches are opened in proper localities they soon begin to yield a profitable return on their own account, and increase the earning power of the bank as a whole by affording commercial connection, and adding to our facilities to do business.

Our premises still continue to give us a good return for the investment.

For instance, the Head Office building gave 5¼ per cent net for the year. Every room is occupied by desirable tenants. Owing to the increase in the business, it has been found necessary to utilize the large room at the entrance on the ground floor for Savings Department purposes. Already the convenience of this to depositors is felt, and we are beginning to reap the advantages accordingly. You will observe that your Directors have not this year written off any sum on premises account. The reason is very simple. The property is worth much more than it was a couple of years ago owing to the large increase in the value of real estate in a central location like this. The frontage is about 94 feet. The land alone has, on a very moderate estimate, increased in value $2,500 per foot over what was paid for it a few years ago, so that the property is really worth $225,000 more than it stands on the books to-day. To write off any amount under these conditions would not be justifiable, when the sole object is to present a true account of the Bank's affairs to its shareholders.

The policy of the management looks to the making of valuable connection in various parts of Canada, as shown by the character and extent of our new branches, and also to do everything reasonably possible towards making our Reserves and Rest strong and substantial. The amount carried to Rest account this year is very gratifying. After payment of all necessary obligations and providing for bad and doubtful debts and contingencies, we are able to place $100,000 to Rest account and we have increased our profit and loss account by $50,991.39 over last year, this account now standing at $153,434 79. And you will bear in mind that these objects have been accomplished notwithstanding the fact that we paid an increased dividend, now amounting to 8 per cent. and involving an extra yearly payment out of profits of about $44,000

The office of auditor to the board has been found to be of the greatest value. By means of the industry and care of this official, we are continually kept in close touch with all that concerns the welfare of the bank Details and complicated matters with which directors could not ordinarily be thoroughly conversant are placed before the board from week to week, and the board is thereby enabled to judge intelligently of all that goes on from the head office down to the smallest branch. The auditor, as I explained on a former occasion, is an entirely independent officer, not in any way under the control of the head office management, but appointed and subject to dismissal only by your Directors, who fix his remuneration and define his duties. Our experience is such that not only in our own personal interest, but in the interest of all banks a thorough and efficient audit by an independent officer is of the greatest value, and we heartily concur in the suggestion of the appointment of such auditors. I need only add that the Directors feel convinced that a competent and conscientious auditor performing his work thoroughly would be of immense advantage to banks and the public, but his work must be efficiently done, otherwise false confidence may be created and grave injustice done to those who may depend too much on his results. We shall be glad to see a searching and practical system of bank auditing adopted in this country, and hope that some measure having this object in view may become law at the earliest moment.

I do not intend to deal with the condition or prospects of business in any detail. The annual statement and returns of our various banks show the progressive strides Canada is making far more than mere words could do. Our own share in the forward movement is very gratifying. Without further comment, therefore, I move the adoption of this report presented for your consideration

Vice-President's Address.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, the Vice-President, in seconding the motion for the adoption of the report, said :—

In seconding the motion I feel that no very extended remarks are called for. The President has covered the ground so completely that little that has not been said is left for me to say in commendation of the statement, whose favorable features so amply justify the motion. I may say that I fully and freely endorse what has been said. It is very gratifying to me, as it must be to all concerned, that the Traders Bank signalizes the first year of its entrance upon the second quarter century of its existence with a statement so eminently satisfactory, and under auspices which promise a continuous growth and advance. The commercial, industrial and prospectively continuous development of our great and widely distributed and diversified resources will tend to create an active demand and profitable employment of capital. In this regard the Traders Bank is well equipped to have its share ; its assets, very considerably increased during the past year, are strong, while a very important increase of deposits evidences the growing confidence and favor of the public—two of the prime elements in justifying anticipation of a progressively improving and profitable business. We can, I feel sure, regard the future with confidence. If the next decade shows the splendid ratio of advance of the past ten years, with their five-fold increase in assets, their six-fold growth in deposits, and their thirty-three-fold increase in reserve, we who may live to see 1921 will be very agreeably astonished. The generally satisfactory character of the statement is gratifying, not only on account of the creditable accomplishment shown, but it is further to be regarded as the result of shrewd, careful and aggressive management, a circumstance not only of importance to the Shareholders, but to the public as well, as additionally conducing to that confidence both in skill and efficiency of administration, and in stability, which is the foundation of financial success. If there is an indication of necessity in these regards in respect of the banking business generally, for an improvement in assurance in the returns suggestive of amendment of the Banking Act, there will be little ground to objection. As far as the Bank is concerned, there is no objection to the closest scrutiny of its securities, investments, and methods. In this connection, I agree with the remarks of the President, in regard to any inspection that may be considered desirable to verify the several essential items of the annual statement and monthly returns of Canadian banks. The one now before us would not be affected either as to its correctness, or favorable showing, by the rigorous scrutiny of securities and the most thorough independent audit ; it must be satisfactory—as it is a credit—to the management, to the Shareholders, to the Bank's clientele, and I have great pleasure in seconding the motion for the adoption of the Report.

The motion for the adoption of the report was carried unanimously.

It was moved by E. F. B Johnston, K.C., Director, seconded by Rev. J. S. Williamson, Shareholder, and resolved:

That the Shareholders and Directors of the Traders Bank of Canada place on record their hearty approval of any legislation of the Dominion Parliament whereby an independent examination and audit under the direction of the Government of all Canadian banks shall be made from time to time;

Resolved also, that whilst the system of auditing should be determined by the Government, it is hoped that in the public interest the method to be devised will be thorough and efficient, and of a practical character, as the result of a defective system would create injustice and tend to injure those who might be induced to rely on reports having the sanction of a Government or other official auditor.

That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Honorable the Minister of Finance.

In speaking to the motion, Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., strongly advocated the principle of independent inspection and audit. He pointed out the great benefit which the Directors receive from our present system of auditing in this Bank, and, although not claiming it to be perfect, he pointed out that it was a long step in the right direction. The Traders Bank is undoubtedly the pioneer in seeking to work out some method whereby the Directors and Shareholders may receive information and details apart from the general management. Under the proposed legislation the duties of Directors are found to be much more onerous than heretofore, and the penalties attached to want of care or lack of thoroughness will be severe. It is, therefore, most important that the Directors, who are endeavoring to be honest and watchful in their management, should be protected, as well as the public, by some practical method of auditing. He emphasized the fact that whatever system may be adopted would have to be efficient, otherwise there might be a tendency to do more harm than good. The greatest care will have to be taken in devising a scheme which will ensure safety to the public, on the one hand, and avoid danger, on the other hand, from too much reliance upon the results obtained from any official examining the affairs of a bank. He read the resolution appointing the present Auditor to the Board, and showed how very wide and comprehensive are his duties, as defined by the resolution, and how satisfactorily they are carried into actual practice. This official is outside the general management, and responsible to the Board only. His duties involve continuous work, and there is perhaps no officer who works harder than he does. A more extended and comprehensive system, applicable to all Banks, would protect Shareholders and Directors alike, and would be of the greatest value to the public.

Mr. Williamson, in seconding, entirely agreed with these remarks.

It was moved by Mr. Geo. Watson and seconded by Mr. C D. McLeod that the thanks of the Shareholders are due and are hereby tendered to the President, Vice-President, and Directors of the Bank for their attention to the interests of the Bank during the past year. Carried.

It was moved by Dr. J. F. Overholt and seconded by Rev. Wm. Cooper that the thanks of the Directors and Shareholders are due, and are hereby tendered to the General Manager, the Assistant General Manager, and the staff of the Bank for their diligent attention to the interests of the Bank during the past year. Carried.

It was moved by J. Parker, seconded by Mr. Skinner, that a sum not exceeding $20,000 be set apart each year out of the earnings of the Bank for the purpose of paying for all the services, fees, and expenses of the President, Vice-President, and such Directors as now receive remuneration; said sum, or such portion thereof as may be required, to be apportioned as the Board may think proper. Carried.

It was moved by Mr. Jos. E. Baillie and seconded by Mr. Gideon Grant that the ballot be now open for the election of Directors, and to be kept open until three o'clock, unless five minutes elapse without a vote being cast, when it shall be closed, and until that time, and for that purpose only, this meeting be continued. Carried.

The Scrutineers reported the following gentlemen duly elected to act as Directors for the ensuing year, viz., C. D. Warren, Hon. J. R. Stratton, C. Kloepfer (Guelph), W. J. Sheppard (Waubaushene), C. S. Wilcox, (Hamilton), E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., H. S. Strathy.

The meeting then adjourned.

At a subsequent meeting of the newly-elected Directors, Mr. C. D. Warren was re-elected President, and Hon. J. R. Stratton, Vice-President, by a unanimous vote.

Robt. Fair & Co. Limited

The Golden Lion's GREATEST JANUARY SALE

Reductions Are the Price We Pay for Greater Variety During the Selling Season

It is easy to see how that is—the more variety the greater chance of having an overstock in some particular kinds—and herefore, eductions.

Every bit of a bargain which is offered at this sale is intrinsically worth all of the full price, but since we were too liberal in our buying, the opportunity comes to lop off a third and in some instances a half from the price.

Of course, we will have to take some losses, but our purpose is best served by selling quickly, and we are making concessions to do it.

You might as well save as your neighbor.

SURPASSES THAT OF ANY CANADIAN COMPANY

Surplus Profits Earned by Sun Life Insurance Company During the Year Are $1,232,545.63

The report of the directors of the Sun Life Insurance Company for 1910 has been issued and states as follows: The new assurances completed and paid for in cash numbered 14,374, covering $23,512,377.81. This represents an increase over the figures of the previous year of $2,063,104.65, which in their turn were larger than those of any preceding year. Concurrently with this splendid increase in the new business there has been an actual decrease in the amount of assurance dropped or cancelled, so that the net gain has been much larger than in any previous year. By Dec. 31st, the assurances in force had risen to $113,519,276.00, under 99,456 policies.

A feature of the years' business has been the large amount received as consideration for annuity contracts $1,400,199.91 as against $648,329.22, on which we congratulated ourselves in the previous year.

The premium income for assurance policies amounted to $8,067,686.18 an increase of $521,610.96.

The total income for the year from premiums, and revenue from investments was $9,710,453.94, an advance over the previous year of $1,932,321.89.

The disbursements for death claims and other payments to policy holders amounted to $3,023,462.56, bringing the total thus paid since the organization of the Company up to $26,296,630.01.

The assets have been augmented by $5,359,793.00, a much larger sum than in any previous year, and now, amount to $38,164,790.37.

The investments are in a peculiarly satisfactory condition, the funds being invested not merely with safety, but very profitably. The sum of $342,766.36 was realized as net profits from the sale of securities. The present market value of the bonds and stocks owned exceeds the value at which they are taken in our ledgers by $762,764.25.

The surplus profit earned amounted to $1,232,545.63, of which $377,792.34 was distributed to policy holders, $210,850.28 applied to strengthening the Company's reserves by changing the basis for the valuation of Annuity contracts from the Hm. Table to the British Offices Select Life Annuity Tables, in accordance with the result insurance legislation. The sum of $643,903.01 has been added to the undivided surplus as a provision for the future profits of policy holders and to further strengthen the Company, making the total surplus over all liabilities and capital stock $3,952,437.54.

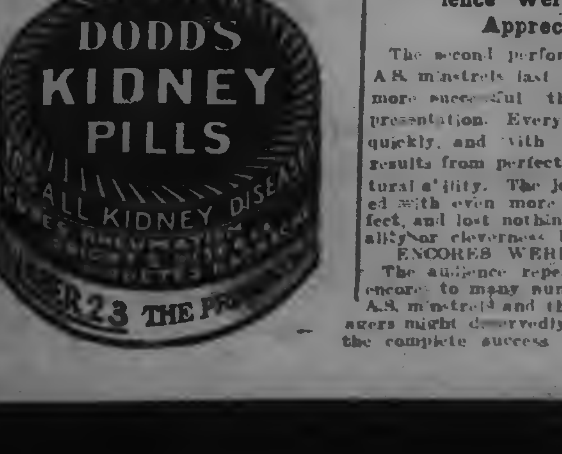
The annual banquet of the Laymen's Missionary movement, (Anglican section) was held in Toronto last night. Two representatives of St John's church, Peterborough, attended. They were J. A. Aylmer and Geo A. Smith, and they report a splendid gathering, with most interesting addresses.



T.A.S. MINSTRELS MADE ANOTHER SPLENDID HIT

Their Second Performance Was a Brilliant Success — Jokes Were Popular and Audience Were Highly Appreciative

The second performance of the T. A.S. minstrels last evening was even more successful than on its first presentation. Everything went along quickly, and with the smoothness results from perfect training and natural ability. The jokes were delivered with even more side-splitting effect, and lost nothing of their originality or cleverness by repetition

ENCORES WERE POPULAR.

The audience repeatedly demanded encores to many numbers, and the T. A.S. minstrels and the energetic managers might deservedly feel elated at the complete success which greeted their efforts in presenting such a high class entertainment.

ADJOURNED TO HOOPER'S GRILL

At the conclusion last evening the members of the company, about thirty-five in all, adjourned to Hooper's grill room. An elaborate spread was first done justice to, although "Bill" O'Brien's appetite was slightly less than usual, which was not to be surprised at.

AN ENJOYABLE TOAST LIST.

A lengthy toast list was next run off, the toast master's duties being ably discharged by "Interlocutor" James Doris.

The following toasts were proposed and responded to—

"The King," responded to by James Doris.

"The Minstrels," James O'Brien, Ab. Quinlan and Claude Brady.

"The Ladies" Gerald McFadden, Geo Daly and James McNicholl.

"Pickaninny Days" responded to by a song entitled "Pickaninny Days," by Masters Frank Galvin and Joe Clancy.

The toast to "Absent Minstrels," responded to by "Bill" O'Brien on behalf of James Fewer, who was prevented from taking part through illness.

Toast to "The Manager," by Harry Quinlan.

In response to the last toast, that of "The Interlocutor," the chairman, James Doris, made a neat speech, thanking the minstrels for their support, and congratulating them on their excellent performance.

SHE CURED HER HEART DISEASE

When She Cured Her Kidneys With Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. Henry J. Jacques Found a Speedy Relief for all Her Troubles, and Now Enjoys the Best of Health.

St. Rose du Lac, Man., Jan. 27.—(Special)—That Heart Disease is one of the results of disordered Kidneys, and is consequently easily cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills, is the experience of Mrs. Henry J. Jacques of this place.

"My heart troubled me all the time," said Mrs. Jacques in an interview. "And I knew what terrible results might follow. The fact that my limbs would swell and my back ache led me to believe that I also suffered from Kidney Disease, so I determined to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I bought four boxes, and before I had finished the third box the swelling was gone, my back was well, and my heart no longer troubled me. I am now in the best of health and I owe it all to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Heart Disease is one of the troubles that come from unhealthy Kidneys. They fail to strain the impurities out of the blood, and those impurities are bound to affect the heart, which is the engine that propels the blood through the body. To cure Heart Disease cure the Kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills; to prevent Heart Disease, keep the Kidneys toned up and healthy by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

ATTENDANCE WAS RATHER SLIM

At the Market This Morning—Eggs take a Drop — Little Change Otherwise in Prices.

The slim attendance at the market to-day was responsible for the drop in the price of a couple of articles, eggs and fowl chiefly.

PLENTY OF MEAT

The outer market was very small and meat predominated. The price of it differed very little from last week. Apples by the bag and peck were in evidence also a few bags of potatoes. Russet apples and "Spys" were the main sellers. The strong, cold wind was the reason one farmer gave for the smallness of the market.

FAIR ATTENDANCE IN THE HALL

The market hall itself was fairly well attended. As usual butter and eggs were in most abundance. Fowl was slightly lower in price. Only a few small turkeys were offered.

PRICES TO-DAY

The following prices reigned to-day.

Potatoes — 85c a bag.
Apples — $1.75 and $2.25.
Pork — 12 and 13 cents.
Beef — 8 and 10 cents.
Butter — 25 cents.
Eggs — 30 cents.
Turkeys — $2.00
Chickens — 75c, a piece.

The most noticeable feature was the big decrease in the price of eggs. The supply exceeding the demand was the only reason for it discernible.

MR. BRAUND'S CASE.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—While I know, it is not fair to think, I cannot expected to stop the Canadian General Electric Co. putting a siding or two sidings as they ask, across Park street, at Albert street corner into their new plant, still I think it is the height of injustice to allow these switches to parallel my store on the north side, and for all time to have the inconvenience of smoke on my store front and the goods which I would put out to show, and further, it will be evident to every merchant, citizen and farmer that farmers' produce, wagons and buggies, as well as city vehicles, cannot stop on the street in front of my store if a switching engine is running up and down there.

I think it is only fair that I ask the Council that the Railway Commission shall settle what my damage will be to my business and my store as a business property and that the Canadian General settle with me before they allow the switches to be put in.

Surely this is nothing but fair play! Why should a rich corporation be allowed to damage the property and business of a smaller concern without settling with them the damages?

If ten or twenty stores were in the same position as my store. Or say if a siding was wanted to run up the east side of George street, would not the whole city, mayor and council rise up and say with thundering voice, No, no, we can never allow such thing to happen.

They why is it not just as vital to me to object to this disastrous proposition to my business property and business?

I would humble ask every citizen and the mayor and council to demand that my case be left to the Railway Commission of Canada to decide my damages and I am perfectly satisfied to accept their decision as to what damage it is.

R. C. BRAUND.

ON THE VERGE OF A BREAKDOWN

Dr. Williams Pink Pills the Only Hope for Weakened Nervous People

This warning will be read by thousands of people who only just succeed in getting through the day's work without a breakdown. If you feel always tired out, have but little appetite and a poor digestion, cannot sleep well, suffer from headaches, backaches and nervousness it may mean that you are on the verge of a serious breakdown.

Dr. Williams Pink Pills cure weak nervous troubled men and women because of their direct action on the blood. Every dose of these Pills helps to make new rich blood, which tones the vital organs, strengthens the nerves and brings renewed health and strength. Mr. Geo. Johnson, of Lequille, N.S., suffered for some years as a result of overwork and strain, but found no help for his condition until he began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mr. Johnson says — "While working on a railway, handling heavy ties I hurt my back and had to give up work. Later I was able to do light work, but for about six years I suffered from dreadful pains in the back and down my legs. This condition became aggravated by indigestion and chronic constipation, and my life was one of constant misery. During those years I was treated by different doctors, but did not get any help. One day a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and proved his faith in them by presenting me with a box. It was more to please him than from any belief that they would be of service to me that I began taking the Pills. Before the box was finished, they seemed to be helping me, the pains in my back and legs grew less intense, and the bloating in my stomach, caused by the indigestion disappeared. I continued taking the Pills until I had used over a dozen boxes, when I found myself fully restored to my former health. I am now able to do heavy farmwork and for the past year have not lost a day, or had the least symptom of my former troubles, and I attribute it entirely to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT BECOMES CANADA'S GOVERNOR-GENERAL

He Will Arrive Next Sept. With the Duchess—Appointment Very Pleasing.

Ottawa, Jan. 30.—The official announcement of the appointment of the Duke of Connaught as Governor-General of Canada, in succession to Earl Grey was received yesterday.

A cablegram from the Colonial Secretary to His Excellency states that His Royal Highness will be here in September, and that the term of his office will be two years, with no doubt the possibility of extension.

The Duchess of Connaught will accompany him.

London, Jan. 30.—(C.A.P.Cable.)—It is officially announced that the Duke of Connaught will succeed Earl Grey in September as Governor-General of Canada. He will hold the appointment for two years, subject to further extension.

The London Daily Mail says that the Duke of Connaught will have an immense success.

The Mail asks: "Does Connaught succeed to an empty throne? Has Canada, by drawing nearer the United States, set her foot on the road to separation from Britain? Some will see in the reciprocity agreement the end of imperial federation. Undoubtedly, these relations will grow till Canada and the United States have a common market. Now the agreement gives rein to forces, against which the preference the British imports is of no avail.

The Graphic says: "In Connaught we send of our best in a double sense." It recalls that 41 years ago the duke smelt powder in the Fenian troubles. Canada, in regard to the agreement may safely assume it says, that mutual affection will be undiminished by a commercial arrangement adding prosperity to the Dominion.

The Morning Post remarks: "The Duke of Connaught's appointment marks the final stage of the entrance of the oldest and largest Dominion as a nation, equal in status to the inhabitants of the United Kingdom, constitutionally connected with them by no link, except allegiance to a common sovereign. It is a momentous experiment.

"Canada is destined to be either British or else American. Touching her economic interests or defence interests and moral interests conjointly, if her economic interests become predominantly American, so will her defence policy. The national idea of the people may not wish it so, but if an economic bond is established, the sequence will be beyond power of their control.

"Nations are master of their fate only for a time. This country has still the opportunity, though it is rapidly receding to revert to commonsense and lay the basis of imperial union by establishing imperial reciprocity."

Prof. Hewins opines in The Morning Post that a complete reciprocity treaty will follow, facilitating the known aims of many far-seeing Americans for political absorption. Britain, he says, will now have to face the world-wide competition of the Canadian market.

The Telegraph discusses the appointment, eulogizing Canada, and declaring that a fresh, bright page opens a new regime. Canada's heart will go out to the representative of the consummation of many loyal hopes.

The London Express says: "The appointment is a new departure, entirely in consonance with the new conception which has taken place of the crown in imperial life. It is a tribute to all the dominions overseas, and its significance will nowhere be ignored."

The Times says the appointment will meet with warmest appreciation in both Houses. The duke will reach the Dominion at a profoundly significant period. It is gradually being recognized that the tariff arrangement is a momentous departure. We should be the last to believe that Canada's acceptance of America's terms implies any weakening of her allegiance. On the contrary, it involves so profound a modification of conditions that the basis of consolidation the trade policy of both must be reconsidered. Canada is only on the threshold of her national life. Britain must not relax the fibre strengthening and maintaining the imperial system. The Duke of Connaught will take a wide view.

RUSSIAN PRINCE FOUND HANGED

St. Petersburg, Jan. 30.—There is much mystery in the death of Prince Tchin-Pomil, ex-Korean minister to Russia, whose body was found hanging in his lodgings in a suburb of St. Petersburg. It was thought at first that the Prince had committed suicide. Letters from the dead man addressed to the Korean and Russian emperors were found lying on the table, together with another letter indicating the reason for the taking of his life.

The police suspect that the Prince was murdered and that after death his body was placed in the position in which it was found.

Prince Tchin-Pomil was a cousin of the emperor, but during the last few years he had lived in want in small lodgings.

Confession of Former Bank Manager Said to be a Startling Affair—40 Typewritten Pages.

Toronto, Jan. 30.—The statement of W. R. Travers, former manager of the Farmers' Bank, containing a sensational story of the affairs and transactions of the Farmers' Bank, is now in the hands of Inspector of Detectives Duncan. This confession consists of forty or fifty typewritten pages, and it is said to contain a full account of dealings which were not set down in the books of the bank and could not be discovered by the curator. The story of Travers is said to be to the effect that he was at the mercy of a clique of men who made him treat them liberally with the funds of the bank. One man, whose name is withheld, obtained $60,000 from Travers because he had threatened to put the bank out of business. Two of the men most severely blamed by Travers for assisting in his downfall have quietly disappeared from Toronto and the police so far have not located them. Travers, it is alleged, was advised in some of his irregular dealings by a lawyer whose name has not yet appeared in connection with the bank, and action is threatened against him, if a clear case can be made out.

One of the missing men is said to have reported on several mining propositions for Travers.

KING TO PRESS THE CHARGE

Will Clear Morganatic Marriage Story Out of Way.

London, Jan. 30.—The News of the World says that King George's advisers have instituted criminal libel proceedings, with the objects of ending once for all rumors which have been freely circulated for years that His Majesty, when Prince of Wales, was morganatically married to a daughter of an admiral at Malta.

The defendant in the case is Edward F. Millus, who is said to be connected with the paper, The Liberator, publisher in Paris, which printed the statements on which the libel charge is based. Millus was arrested some weeks ago, charge at Bow street, committed for trial and sent to jail.

In the ordinary way the case should be tried in the Central Criminal Court, but on application of the crown it will be brought up in the high courts on Wednesday next, before Lord Chief Justice Alverstone and a special jury.

According to a statement in The Liberator, the defendant intends to file a plea of justification and also to subpoena the King as a witness. The constitutional law, however, makes it impossible for His Majesty to give evidence in his own courts, notwithstanding that he may be anxious to do so.

Practically all of the London morning papers publish stories of the intention of the King's advisers to carry the case to the courts on the charge of criminal libel. It is noteworthy that The Morning Post, referring, in a recent article, to the arrest of Millus, on Dec. 26., said that he was charged with being concerned in the publication of seditious statements, but the paper made no reference to the alleged morganatic marriage, merely saying that the alleged seditious statements referred, among other things, to the policy followed by this country in Egypt and India.

Scottish Landscape Painter Is Dead.

London, Jan. 30.—John MacWhirter, the Scottish landscape painter, died Saturday. Born at Slateford, near Edinburgh in 1839, he was educated at Peebles and later pursued his art studies at the Edinburgh School of Design, becoming an Associate of the Royal Scottish Academy in 1864, and associate of the Royal Academy in 1879, and academician in 1894. MacWhirter was intensely national in sentiment and was a brilliant member of the Scottish school, excelling in his transcriptions of the wild scenery of the highlands. One of his specialties lay in the drawing of the mountain boich, that graceful tree inspiring many of his finest canvases. His diploma works was "Nature's Archway," and his "June in the Austrian Tyrol," purchased out of the Chantrey bequest, is now in the Tate Gallery in London. The deceased artist married, in 1872, Katherine, daughter of Prof. Menzies of Edinburgh University.

AN EMPTY THRONE?

The London Daily Mail says the Duke of Connaught will have immense success but it asks: "Does the Duke of Connaught succeed to an empty Throne? TO DEDUCT $500,000

Arbitrators Make Award in N.T.R. Dispute.

Over-Classification and Overbreak by Contractors.

Ottawa, Jan. 30.—Half a million, approximately, is to be deducted from contracts on the eastern division of the National Transcontinental Railway, in respect to over-classification and allowance for overbreak.

This is the effect of the award of the arbitrators—Gordon Grant for the Transcontinental commissioners; B. B. Kelliher, for the G.T.P., and Collingwood Schreiber, C. M. G., chairman. The report has been sent to the Government, and represents several months of work, in which the different sections were examined and notes taken on each cut.

The finding of the arbitrators does not say in so many dollars how much is to be deducted, but it takes each particular part of the work complained of and lays down a ruling as to what the measurements and allowances should have been. This will be compared with what was allowed, and if the latter is in excess of the arbitrators' findings, deductions will have to be made accordingly. As stated, about half a million dollars will be taken off contractors and subcontractors. It will come out of the drawbacks held by the Government.

The complaints were made by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, whose concern arises from having to pay interest on the total cost of the eastern section.

If dissatisfied with the award the contractors will have the right to appeal to the Exchequer Court. The contracts involved are about $60,000,000.

CORSICAN HAS STORMY TIME

Halifax, Jan. 30.—The Allan liner Corsican, which arrived in port on Saturday night from Liverpool with the English mail and five hundred passengers. She encountered terrible weather off Halifax in a blizzard on Saturday morning. Captain Cooke arrived off the harbor at six o'clock, and ran into the worst storm of the winter. The wind was blowing fifty miles an hour, and after several attempts to make the harbor the captain decided to anchor until the evening, when the wind shifted. The blizzard that swept the coast was one of the worst for years. It is remarkable that considering the fierceness of the storm, how little damage was done.

Mrs. Ward Dies.

Newton, Mass., Jan. 30.—Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward, author and lecturer, died at her home at Newton Centre Saturday night, after a short illness, at the age of 67. Her husband, Herbert D. Ward, was in the south when she was taken ill, and reached home only yesterday.

Mrs. Ward was born in Boston on Aug. 31, 1844. She began to write for the press when but thirteen years of age. She was the author of "The Gypsy series" of four volumes appearing in 1865. From that time until very recently, hardly a year passed that a book from her pen was not published.

TARIFF AGREEMENT GOES TO WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE

EARL GREY

Whose departure will be regretted by all Canadian people.

American Representatives Carefully Preparing for the Bill—Extra Session Not Likely to be Needed.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Representative McCall of Massachusetts, a member of the ways and means committee, Saturday introduced in the House the administration bill to carry out the reciprocity agreement with Canada. The bill was referred at once to the ways and means committee.

The introduction of the bill by the Massachusetts man, instead of by Mr. Payne of New York, chairman of the ways and means committee, occasioned some comment. It is interpreted in many quarters to indicate that Mr. McCall will take a prominent part in steering the bill through the committee and in engineering its progress on the floor of the House.

While members of the committee decline to discuss their prospective attitude on the measure, it has become fairly well established that the McCall bill will pass through committee and come out on the floor of the House within a comparatively short time.

The first move will be to take up the bill at a meeting early in the week and determine if any hearings will be held upon the measure. It is the opinion of several members of the committee that if certain delegations representing industries seriously affected by the lowering of the tariff rates wish to be heard by the committee, an opportunity will be afforded before any final action is taken.

There will be no extended hearings, however, and no opening of the bars to all the tariff arguments that might be introduced for and against the terms of the new arrangement. Members of the committee believe the facts upon the various items were fully elicited in the hearings held during the preparations of the Payne-Aldrich bill; and that to renew extensive hearings upon the reciprocity agreement would needlessly and dangerously delay its consideration by the House.

As a bill to raise revenue, it will be subject to amendment and change, unless a rule of closure is first put through the House prohibiting amendments and forcing the House to vote on the reciprocity agreement as a whole.

The negotiations are received in a definite and concrete arrangement, which cannot be changed in any particular, without upsetting the balance and the effectiveness of the whole agreement. For this reason, it is the opinion of those who favor the approval of the Canadian pact, that the ways and means committee and the rules committee will have to prepare a rule providing for its consideration as a whole, and without amendment.

The impression has been strengthened that President Taft's determination to secure action on the measure at this session is such that he will resort to an extra session if it becomes necessary to bring the matter to final consideration in both Houses of Congress. The extra session talk has caused no little worry at the capitol. The leaders of the Senate do not believe an extra session will be necessary, even in the light time remaining in this session to dispose of the trade agreement in both Houses.

If defeat comes, it is said in the Senate, the Democrats of the House, after a fairly careful poll by the leading members of the minority are apparently disposed to accept the treaty and to support it in debate and with their votes. They look on it both as a tariff change in line with Democratic ideas, and as a serious attempt on the part of a Republican President to take the tariff out of polities and elevate it above political dispute.

The McCall bill, after indicating the duties that are to be levied upon Canadian products, proposes that they shall become effective as soon as the President ascertains and issues a proclamation showing that Canada is levying similar duties against American products. The free importation of certain articles is to become operative as soon as the President becomes satisfied that Canada is doing the same to the United States.

RIVERS OVERFLOW; FLOOD SEVERE

Ohio, Monongahela and Alleghany Rivers Cutting Capers.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 30.—The Ohio, Monongahela and Alleghany rivers are overflowing their banks, and a devastating flood threatens a great district. Much damage to life and property is feared.

BARRIE DOCTORS BURNED OUT

Barrie, Jan. 30.—Fire which did damage to the extent of about $2,000 broke out about 11 o'clock Saturday night in the beautiful home and offices of Drs. W. A. and Fred Ross on Dunlop street. The fire started in the disinfecting cabinet in the basement, Dr. W. A. Ross having been called out on a case during the evening which was thought to be contagious, on return home removed his clothes, placing them in the cabinet and started the disinfecting apparatus.

After the doctor had been upstairs but a short time, it was discovered the clothing had caught fire, and in turn had set fire to the building. Some of the family, who had retired for the night, were quickly gotten out and removed to safety in neighboring houses.

BLACK SNOW IN SWISS ALPS

Strange Phenomenon is Observed by Scientists.

Geneva, Jan. 30.—A strange phenomenon recently occurred in the Emmenthal Valley and the surrounding mountains when "black" snow fell to a depth of fifteen inches, giving the whole country, which was white with snow before, a funeral and most depressing aspect over a large area.

The first few inches of snow was of a greyish color, as if mixed with ashes, but the grey became darker and darker in hue, until now it is almost black.

Such a phenomenon has been witnessed in the Alps in former years after volcanic eruptions in different parts of the world, and on this occasion Swiss scientists are of opinion that the black snow is due to ashes blown over the sea and Alps after the recent eruption of Mount Etna.

The cold in the Alps on the Swiss-Italian frontier is intense, the thermometer registering 12 degrees below zero centigrade on the Simplon. In a hut between the Simplon and Domodossala three persons have been found frozen to death.

To Force Chinese.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 30.—Russia is on the point of employing pressure to improve its trade conditions in Mongolia. It is intended to force China's consent to the opening of a consulate at Kobdo, in Western Mongolia, thus lifting obstacles now in the way of Russian commerce.

The Novoe Vremya calls upon the Governmer to send to China an ultimatum on the situation, embodying in it a threat to reoccupy Kulja, Chinese Turkestan, which, from 1871 to 1881, was a Russian possession.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME

This morning reminded us that we are getting more like Chicago every day.

If President Taft throws all his weight behind that tariff agreement, it will need the whole Senate to stop it.

When is a preference not a preference? When we make a deal with Uncle Sam.

Saturday Night is lucky. It escaped the Examiner's blank, blank, "impudent falsehood," "cowardly villain" announcement on Saturday.

We wonder if the Fourth Estate shows a reporter getting his calls for being scooped. If so, the "langwidge" will shock the audience.

This word "reciprocity" ought to be familiar to us all pretty soon.

TAFT TO ANNOUNCE TO-NIGHT ABOUT THE EXTRA SESSION

U.S. Representatives Will Fight Tariff Bill on Sectional, Not Party, Grounds.

Special to the Review.

Washington, D.C., Jan. 30.—President Taft is expected to announce to-night if a special session will be called of Congress to deal with the reciprocity proposal. The outlook to-day is that the matter will be fought on sectional, rather than on party lines. It will be strongly opposed by the manufacturing communities, except in some lines of trade, and the representatives of the agricultural districts will strongly support them.

The Daily Review

MONDAY, JAN. 30, 1911.

A NEWSPAPER FARM

The managing editor of the Farmers' Advocate is a brave man. To demonstrate the theories advanced in the Advocate, to run farming affairs in accordance with the Advocate's plans, a farm of 135 acres has been bought six miles from London. This newspaper-farmer man will run it as a farm without frills, to show what can be cone scientifically as preached through the columns of the journal.

That farm will probably be a great object of curiosity to the farmers around, the practical men who make their living off the land. Of course a man who writes about the farm constantly is perfectly qualified to run one—perhaps. A man who writes about a poor-house is qualified to operate one very successfully. A man who writes about a manufacturing industry knows better how to manage it than the men whose money and livelihood are at stake!

The Farmers Advocate model farm of course, will be a great place on which to experiment for the benefit of the community at large, and if the Advocate's ideas are sound, there is nothing like proving them in practice, to the satisfaction of all concerned. If the ideas do not pan out properly, well, the Advocate will find it out more quickly than anyone else, and will shut up—so looked at from various angles it ought to help improve the Advocate by providing the gold of actual experience instead of the gilt of theorising.

THE RESULT OF IT

A thorough perusal of the agreement on the tariff, shows the following effects, probably resulting from it, if carried through—

Kill our milling industry.

Lower the grade of flour to the American standard.

Hurt Canadian railway traffic east and west, by diverting the western trade north and south.

Lessen the dependence of the west on the east, especially in fruit, dairy products, and hurt Canadian lake navigation interests especially.

Assist in rapid Americanization of the west.

Make the Hudson Bay Railway unnecessary, by providing southern outlet for wheat.

Raise the cost to us of all our farm products admitted free into the U.S. to the American level, prices being regulated from across the border.

Cattle prices will be regulated by the great meat market and beef trusts of the United States.

Our market for fish, cattle, dairy products, grain and produce greatly widened.

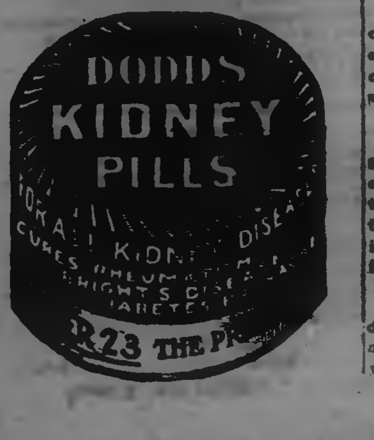
Make a British preference for our natural products impossible.

Lessen our over-sea export trade in all natural products, and increase our imports from the United States to the detriment of Britain.

Cheapen California fruits considerably, and make the American price on fruits, such as we produce, our price.

Give Canadian farmers a slightly lower cost on their implements.

Exhaust our timber areas, in permitting the free exportation of our lumber in a rough sawn state.



MOTHER AND COUSINS

The London newspapers see in the tariff agreement the shadow of political union on the wall. Having foremost in their mind, Canada's position in relation to Britain and the empire, they see the wedge. Some of them say that it is Britain's own fault in not binding Canada closer with a preference, others deplore the signs of Canada seeking trade expansion outside the empire, but recognize that it is but natural.

Britain is in the position of the loving mother who sees her grown up son breaking gradually away, forming new ties and affections. He finds more attractions in the young of his own class, and takes on new relations of manhood. His old mother is always remembered and thought of, but is no longer his chief tie. She is a secondary consideration to his beloved.

In developing free trade with the United States in so many articles, in lowering the tariff on others, and facilitating trade generally, Canada will weaken its British ties more than some people think for. It may be a natural movement, situated as we are, but it nevertheless means much to us. It means that we go out from the paternal roof of British imperialism, and take up quarters with our new found friends. How they will use us after the first acquaintance wears off, remains to be seen. They may get tired of the arrangement whereby we live with them, and throw us out. Shall we then run back to old mother?

We know that old mother will always use us right. She gives us money to develop ourselves and protects us against the big bad boys around the corner. We will always be sure and safe in this home. In breaking away, in transferring our affections to our cousins across the way, we might get a good reception. We have apples in our pocket that they want, and must have, for they are hungry, and the apples look good. Of course we run the risk of getting pinched, or slapped, or kicked out, but we are a big, husky boy, though much inferior in strength to our big cousins.

Shall we stay by mother or go to the cousins?

A CONTRAST

The persistent and determined opposition of the high tariff Republicans to any sort of agreement lowering the tariff barriers is in strange contrast with President Taft's sweeping arrangement for absolute free trade in so many natural products. It points to far greater freedom, both on the part of the executive head of the party and by the party men under him, than we have in Canada. In the United States there is much less hidebound partyism than in Canada.

Imagine Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Fielding making an agreement so contrary to the recognized party principles, and the Liberal following in Parliament rising almost en masse to join the Conservatives in the fight against it. Would it not be an extraordinary spectacle! Imagine Sir Wilfrid Laurier making an agreement, only to have it upset by his own followers in Parliament. It would be to laugh!

Yet, that is what is happening in the United States. There is much greater freedom of political action, more democracy, among the members of Congress, and less autocracy by the head of the party. We might well copy some of the spirit of independence that makes the Congressmen vote as their constituents want, and not as the party lash cracks. The agreement is against Canada's national interest, against the British tie, our imperial connection, yet watch the Liberal members, whatever they may individually think of the deal, stand solidly behind Mr. Fielding.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The story that those New Gloucester men put up a black flag on receipt of the tariff announcement has a fishy flavor.

Congress will be through in five weeks. If it doesn't take more than five weeks to hear the tariff speeches of the representatives, we are sadly mistaken.

May we be permitted to remark that the Examiner's silence on Saturday, in reference to the Saturday Night article, was in rather striking contrast to its "impudent lie" editorial announcement of the week previous!

The reduction of eight cents a ton on the duty on coal won't be much comfort when we look at the empty coal bin, and figure how much more will be needed to last the winter.

In many cities there is an agitation going on against the law exempting churches from taxation. Most people think that their duty's done when they do their share toward supporting one church, without helping to finance the others.

In a battle in Honduras thirty soldiers have been killed. You can't have a civil war every six months or so without hurting somebody. And you can't make a tariff agreement with the United States without hurting a whole lot of somebodies.

The writer happened to be a visitor at St. Paul's Presbyterian church last night, and was much struck by the lack of congregational singing of the hymns. An excellent choir is all right in its way, but it should lead the singing of the hymns, not be left to almost monopolize the opportunity. We do not doubt that the same might be said of most of the other churches of the city, more or less. The congregations are either too timid to be heard in song, or are too cold and impassive to loosen up. Much may be said about the choice of hymns, the congregations preferring a swinging, martial air, or one of the recognized favorites. But it seems to us that as hymn-singing is one of the greatest powers of the church, the method by which the Gospel can reach into the soul more quickly than by any other way, it is a sadly neglected art in many churches. At least the congregational silence last night was rather painful.

Evenings at Home

I'm sitting in my easy chair before the fireside's cheerful flare. All modern comforts are at hand; electric lights and music canned; the triumphs that great men have wrought are gathered in my cosy cot. The neighbor children gather round, to hear me drivel and expound about the good old times gone by, which I applaud—I wonder why! I wonder why old men are prone to view the present with a groan and talk of vanished years as though they were the smoothest goods below! The children listen while I tell of times when everything was well, when girls were angels, minus crowns, and men were saints in hand-me-downs, and life was one long round of joy, without a sorrow to annoy. And in my heart I'm conscious that I'm simply talking through my hat. I'd hate like thunder to be swung back to the times when I was young! I'd hate to read by smoky lights, and sleep on ticks of straw at nights, and go to bed at six o'clock because no candles are in stock, and go out doors to get a drink, and find the cistern on the blink. We lived like horses in those days, and yet, much to my own amaze, I brag and brag, in prose and rhymes, about the good old vanished times.

Immense Plant For Long Sault.

Washington, Jan. 30.—The Malby bill to provide for the connection of dams, locks and canals and other structures in the St. Lawrence River at and near Long Sault Island, in St. Lawrence County, New York, was ordered to be reported to the House to-day by the rivers and harbors committee after limiting the grant to 99 years.

The bill is part of the authority necessary for the erection of an immense power plant at Long Sault for manufacturing purposes, the beneficiary being the Long Sault Development Co., a New York corporation.

Big Canadian Merger.

Welland, Jan. 30.—The Canadian Steel Foundries, Ltd., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000,000, with headquarters at Montreal. It is said that it is in this concern the Montreal Steel Co. and the Ontario Iron & Steel Co. are to be merged. The Ontario Iron & Steel Co.'s works are at Welland, Ont. A syndicate has obtained a controlling proportion of the stock of each of the companies.

Orgies of Lloyd-Georgism.

London, Jan. 30.—J. L. Gervin, editor of The Observer, in an article in that paper yesterday, says that British democracy is likely to pay dear for the "Orgies of Lloyd-Georgism."

"The first forfeits," he continues, "will soon be demanded. What the tariff reformers prophesied has at length happened. President Taft has secured the initial triumph for North Americanism."

U. S. Gunboat Safe.

Washington, Jan. 30.—The gunboat Wheeling arrived in Guantanamo, Cuba, Saturday. This advice was flashed to the Navy Department by wireless, setting at rest the fears for the vessel's safety. It was rumored to have met with an accident at sea.

By GASTON LEROUX Author of "The Mystery of the Yellow Room."

CHAPTER I.

A Foredoomed Marriage.

THE marriage of M. Robert Darzac and Mlle. Mathilde Stangerson took place in Paris at the Church of St. Nicholas du Chardonnet on April 6, 1895, everything connected with the occasion being conducted in the quietest fashion possible. A little more than two years had rolled by since the events which I have recorded in a previous volume—events so sensational that it is not speaking too strongly to say that an even longer lapse of time would not have sufficed to blot out the memory of the famous "Mystery of the Yellow Room."

In this almost unknown parish it was easy enough to maintain the utmost privacy. Only a few friends of M. Darzac and Professor Stangerson, on whose discretion they felt assured that they might rely, had been invited. I had the honor to be one of the number.

I reached the church early, and naturally my first thought was to look for Joseph Rouletabille. I was somewhat surprised at not seeing him; but, having no doubt that he would arrive shortly, I entered the pew already occupied by M. Henri-Robert and M. Andre Hesse, who in the quiet shades of the little chapel exchanged in undertones reminiscences of the strange affair at Versailles, which the approaching ceremony brought to their memories.

"I never felt quite easy about Robert and Mathilde," he said, "not even after the happy termination of the affair at Versailles," said Henri-Robert, "until I knew that the information of the death of Frederic Larsan had been officially confirmed. That man was a pitiless enemy."

It will be remembered perhaps by readers of "The Mystery of the Yellow Room" that a few months after the acquittal of the professor in Sorbonne there occurred the terrible catastrophe of La Dordogne, a transatlantic steamer running between Havre and New York. In the broiling heat of a summer night upon the coast of the new world La Dordogne had caught fire from an overheated boiler. Before help could reach her the steamer was utterly destroyed. Scarcely thirty passengers were able to leap into the life boats, and these were picked up the next day by a merchant vessel, which conveyed them to the nearest port. For days thereafter the ocean cast up on the beach hundreds of corpses, and among these they found Larsan.

The papers which were found carefully hidden in the clothing worn by the dead man proved beyond a doubt his identity. Mathilde Stangerson was at last delivered from this monster of a husband to whom, through the facility of the American laws, she had given her hand in secret in the unthinking ardor of girlish romance. This wretch, whose real name, according to court records, was Ballmeyer and who had married her under the name of Jean Roussel, could no longer rise like a dark shadow between Mathilde and the man whom she had loved so long and so well without daring to become his bride. In "The Mystery of the Yellow Room" I have related all the details of this remarkable affair, one of the strangest which has ever been known in the annals of the court of assizes and which without doubt would have had a most tragic denouement had it not been for the extraordinary part played by a boy reporter, scarcely eighteen years old, Joseph Rouletabille, who was the only one to discover that Frederic Larsan, the celebrated secret service agent, was none other than Ballmeyer himself.

"You see, my dear fellow," said M. Henri-Robert to M. Andre Hesse, "you see, in this world one can always find the bright side. See how beautifully everything has turned out, even the troubles of Mlle. Stangerson. But why are you constantly looking around you? Do you expect any one?"

"Yes. I expect Frederic Larsan."

M. Henri-Robert laughed. But I felt no inclination to join in his mirth.

"What's the matter, Sainclair?" whispered M. Henri-Robert, who noticed my expression. "Hesse was only joking."

"I don't know anything about it," I answered. And I looked attentively around me, as M. Andre Hesse had done. And indeed we had believed Larsan dead so often when he was known as Ballmeyer that it seemed quite possible that he might be once more brought to life in the guise of Larsan.

"Here comes Rouletabille," remarked M. Henri-Robert. "I'll wager that he isn't worrying."

The young reporter joined us and pressed our hands in an absentminded manner.

"Good morning, Sainclair. Good morning, gentlemen. I am not late, I hope?"

It seemed to me that his voice trembled. He left our pew immediately and withdrew to a dark corner, where he knelt like a child and prayed. His fervent devotion astonished me. When he raised his head his eyes were filled with tears. He did not even try to hide them. He was lost completely in his prayers and, one might imagine, in his grief.

But what could be the occasion of his sorrow? Had not the good fortune of Mathilde Stangerson and Robert Darzac been in a great measure brought about by his efforts? Perhaps from joy that he wept. He rose from his knees and was hidden behind a pillar.

And the next moment Mathilde Stangerson made her entrance into the church upon the arm of her father, Robert Darzac walking behind them. Ah, the drama of the Glandier had been a sorrowful one for these three! But, strange as it may seem, Mathilde Stangerson appeared only the more beautiful for all that she had passed through. True, she was no longer the beautiful statue, the living marble, the ancient goddess, the cold pagan divinity, who at the official functions at which her father's position had forced her to appear had excited a flutter of admiration whenever she was seen. It seemed, on the contrary, that fate in making her expiate for so many long years an imprudence committed in early youth had cast her into the depths of madness and despair, only to tear away the mask of stone which hid from sight the tender, delicate spirit. And it was this spirit which shone forth on her wedding day, in the sweetest and most charming smile, playing on her curved lips, hiding in her eyes, filled with pensive happiness and leaving its impress on her forehead.

But what I shall always remember is the strange expression which came over her visage when she looked through the rows of faces in the pews without seeming to discover the one she sought. In a moment she had regained her composure and was mistress of herself once more. She had seen Rouletabille behind his pillar. She smiled at him and my companions, and I smiled in our turn.

"She has the eyes of a mad woman!"

I turned to see who spoke the heartless words. It was a poor fellow whom Robert Darzac out of kindness had made his assistant in the laboratory at the Sorbonne. The man was named Brignolles and was a distant cousin of the bridegroom. Long ago he had lost both father and mother. He had neither brother nor sister and seemed to have broken off all intercourse with his native province, from which he had brought an eager desire for success, an exceptional ability to work and a strong intellect.

One beautiful morning in the preceding spring and, consequently a year after the occurrences in the yellow room Darzac had presented Brignolles to his pupils. The new assistant had come direct from Aix, where he had been a tutor in the natural sciences and where he had committed some fault of discipline which had caused his dismissal. Darzac was suffering from the reaction following the strong emotions which had nearly weighed him down at the Glandier and at the court of assizes. We remarked that from the day that Brignolles came to him—Brignolles, whose friendship should have been a precious solace—the weakness of M. Darzac seemed to increase. However, we were obliged to acknowledge that Brignolles was not to blame for that, for two unfortunate and unforeseen accidents had occurred in the course of some experiments which would have seemed on the face of them not at all dangerous. The first resulted from the unexpected explosion of a Gessler tube. The second, which might have been extremely grave, happened through the explosion of a tiny lamp against which Darzac was leaning.

At the time of the second accident I was present, having come to seek Darzac at the Sorbonne. I myself led our friend to a druggist and then to a doctor, and I begged Brignolles when he wished to accompany us to remain at his post. On the way Darzac asked why I had wounded the poor fellow's feelings. I told him that I did not care for Brignolles' society for the abstract reason that I did not like his manners and for the concrete reason on this special occasion that I believed him to be responsible for the accident. Darzac demanded why I thought so, and I did not know how to answer, and he laughed.

My suspicions of Brignolles were doubtless ridiculous. All the same, I was so strongly prejudiced against the young man that I blamed him for the slow improvement in Darzac's physical condition. At the beginning of the winter Darzac had such a bad cough that I entreated him to ask for leave of absence and to take a trip to the Midi. The physicians advised San Remo. He went thither, and a week later he wrote us that he felt much better. "I can breathe here," he wrote. "When I left Paris I seemed to be stifling."

This letter gave me much food for thought, and I took Rouletabille into my confidence.

He agreed with me that it was a most peculiar coincidence that Darzac was so ill when Brignolles was with him and so much better when he and his young assistant were separated. The impression that this was actually the fact was so strong in my mind that I would on no account have permitted myself to lose sight of Brignolles. No, indeed! I verily believe that if he had attempted to leave Paris I should have followed him.

Darzac returned home at the end of four weeks almost completely restored to health. His eyes, however, were still weak, and he was under the necessity of taking the greatest care of them. Rouletabille and myself had resolved to keep a close watch on Brignolles, but we were satisfied that everything would be right when we were informed that the long deferred marriage was to occur almost immediately and that Darzac would take his wife away on a long honeymoon trip far from Paris—and from Brignolles.

And now we all—a dozen or so persons—were gathered in the sacristy. The witnesses signed the register, and the rest of us congratulated the newly wedded pair. The sacristy was yet more dismal than the church, and I might have thought that it was on account of the darkness that I could not perceive Joseph Rouletabille. But assuredly he was not there. Mathilde had already asked for him twice, and Darzac requested me to go and look for him. I did so, but he had disappeared.

When the bridegroom brought this news to his wife she appeared to be both pained and anxious. She called me to her side and said:

"My dear M. Sainclair, you know that we are to take the train in two hours. Will you hunt up our little friend and bring him to me and tell him that his strange behavior is grieving me very much?"

BRONCHITIS COMPLETELY CURED.

St. Jean, P.Q., Jan. 5th, 1910.
Father Morrisey Med. Co. Ltd.,

I can gratefully testify in favor of Father Morrisey's Remedy for Bronchial trouble. I had suffered for some time from Bronchitis, and could get nothing to give me ease, until I tried Father Morrisey's Prescription (No. 10). To my great surprise, after I had taken this remedy I commenced to grow better, and soon after I was completely cured.

Mde. GEORGE DESMARAIS.

Everybody knows that many common roots, barks and herbs contain Nature's own provision for the relief of coughs and colds. It remained for Father Morrisey, with his wonderful medical skill, to combine extracts from these in such a way as to make the most effective cure for all forms of throat and lung troubles.

His prescription, known as "Father Morrisey's No. 10" or "Lung Tonic", stops a cough by curing the inflamed condition of throat or lungs which causes it. It goes a step further, too, and earns its name of "Lung Tonic" by strengthening the weakened parts.

TARIFF AGREEMENT

N. Y. American's View.

New York, Jan. 30.—The American's Washington correspondent thus sizes up the reciprocity situation:

"Canadian reciprocity faces defeat in the present temper of Congress. A poll of the two Houses taken yesterday by The New York American discloses such opposition to the reciprocal trade agreement which President Taft made public Saturday as to suggest that all the force of the administration will be necessary to secure action at this session.

"The committees to which the agreement has been referred—finance, in the Senate, and ways and means, in the House—are apparently in agreement against the plan. By delaying a report on the agreement either can defeat action.

"Arrayed on the side of the members of these committees are most of the stand-patters in both branches of Congress. The Republican leaders have learned nothing as a result of the November elections. On the other hand, the Democrats are almost soldily in favor of the agreement.

"An extra session of Congress looms up in consequence. President Taft is averse to this action, but there is reason for believing that if assurance could be given that the Democrats will ratify the reciprocal agreement as submitted without attempting to tack on to it amendments that would upset the plan, the President would issue the call.

"A large non-committal vote in both branches of Congress is disclosed by The New York American's poll. President Taft is concentrating all of his powers of persuasion on these members, who hold the key to the situation.

"Representative McCall of Massachusetts, a member of the ways and means committee, yesterday introduced in the House, the administration bill to carry out the reciprocity agreement. The bill was referred at once to the ways and means committee.

Contract Let For New Railway.

Montreal, Jan. 30.—It is learned that a contract has been signed with the Bishop Construction Co. for the building of a railway from a little below Ste. Anne de Beaupre to St. Catherines Bay at the mouth of the Saguenay River, a distance of about 160 miles.

This work, which will pass through Murray Bay, and will skirt the River St. Lawrence all the way down, is to be started at once and rushed forward to completion. It will be remembered that the railway in question was financed by Rudolphe Forget, M.P. for Charlevoix County, and will be subsidized, so it is said, by both the Federal and Quebec Governments.

Should Be Taught to Write English.

New York, Jan. 30.—A special cable to The Tribune from London says: One of those literary discourses which are always read with delight was delivered Saturday by Lord Morley to the members of the English Association. English boys, he said, were not taught to write English, and the significance of that was the indifference implied to one of the noblest and most powerful of tongues. Surely not the least stupendous fact in British annals was its consequence in the boundless area of the habitable globe, influenced by the English language. There was in the past no parallel to it.

A Venturesome Peer.

The adventures in strange lands of Lord Headley, who was sixty-five recently, would provide material for more than one fascinating volume. An Irish peer, he has seen a great deal of soldiering. He fought in the Carlist wars, and went through the Franco-Prussian War with the French Army Corps. And he has made long journeys and explored the slopes of the Andes and the hinterland of Peru. Some months after Lord Headley was expected back from a shooting expedition in Mashonaland, a grisly story arrived of his having been cut to pieces by Matabele. But he came home safe and sound, while obituary notices of his career were still current.

New Provincial Board of Health.

Toronto Jan. 28.—The new Provincial Board of Health appointed for the next three years by order-in-council of the Government for Ontario are: Dr. Adam Wright, Toronto, chairman; Dr. David B. Bentley, Sarnia; Dr. George Clinton, Belleville; Dr. W. H. Harvey, Sudbury; Dr. Paul J. Maloney, Cornwall; Dr. James Roberts, Hamilton, and Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, re-appointed secretary and chief health officer of the province.

The board succeeds the one appointed in 1906, of which Dr. Sheard was chairman.

Wants a Recount.

Kingston, Jan. 28.—T. J. Rigney, barrister, on behalf of F. R. Leslie of Hinchinbrook Township, made application before Judge Price for a scrutiny of the ballots cast in the recent local option vote in that township. The petitioner testified that there had been grave irregularities in connection with the vote. People had cast ballots who had no right to do so. Local option carried by five votes over the sixty per cent. required. Judge Price decided to hold a scrutiny of the ballots on Feb. 9.

Robbed Thirteen Houses.

Toronto, Jan. 28.—Thirteen was an unlucky number for Thomas Bredin and Edward Shields, who appeared in the Police Court yesterday morning, charged with stripping that many houses of brass taps and lead pipe. Bredin will be away three months, while Shields will not be seen outside the Central Prison for three times that period.

Raised the Rates.

Winnipeg, Jan. 28.—Following a million-dollar loss in Winnipeg last year and $400,000 this month, the Western Canada Underwriters' Association decided yesterday to raise the rates by 10 to 50 cents on the $100. This will be partially offset by the increased reduction where signal services and automatic alarms are installed.

Dr. McPherson arranged to have Dr. McCullough come for Wednesday night and Dr. Hodgetts on Thursday. The former will speak on the subject of "Tuberculosis," while Dr. Hodgetts, who is medical advisor of the Commission of Conservation, will deal with the housing question and its relationship to the general health. Both lectures which will be illustrated, are free and the public are asked to attend. The exhibit car will be placed on a siding at the C.P.R. station.

A Coasting Experience

A number of the children of East City have been in the habit of coasting down the hill near the lift lock, and on Saturday one sleigh load met with a mishap which might have been attended with serious results. While descending at a high rate of speed, a cutter hove in view, crossing the road. To avoid it, it was necessary to steer into the ditch. Miss Addie Dickson, one of the load, had her finger injured, and Miss Myrtle Coon sustained some injuries to her face. None of the others were injured to any extent, but their escape was pretty narrow.

PRAYERS FOR THE IMMIGRANTS

At Services at St. John's Church – Reference to Death of Mrs. Clementi

At St. John's Church yesterday, the rector, Rev. Canon Davidson, sympathizingly referred to the death of Mrs. Clementi, who was a former member of the congregation.

At the morning and evening services, prayers were offered on behalf of the British immigrants throughout Canada, in view of the many difficulties experienced by them in the new land. In connection with this Canon Davidson expressed the highest appreciation of the splendid services rendered to the congregation by English men and women whose faithful work had been most valuable. He also referred to those who had not seen fit to connect themselves with the church of their fathers and in many cases were not connected with any particular church, to their own great loss. The Church of England he held was a living link for Englishmen, between this country and the old land.

RAIN AND SLEET FROZE ON RAILS

As a Result, Street Car Traffic Was Impossible — Service Commenced at 10 O'Clock

It was a change for those citizens who have been accustomed to riding on the street cars to and from work to have to walk to-day. The inconvenience however was unavoidable and the weather man was responsible for it, not the Radial Railway people.

SLEET FROZE ON RAILS

The rain and sleet which fell during the night froze on the rails immediately to a depth of half an inch, and although a car was kept on the line and a sweeper brought into requisition, it could not be cleared. As a result no cars were running this morning. A force of men armed with picks and scrapers had to go all over the street railway route and lay bare the rails before the cars could be operated. All of Charlotte Street and the Jackson Park route was tied up.

SERVICE RESUMED AT 10 O'CLOCK

Service, however, was resumed shortly after ten o'clock, schedule time being adhered to as closely as possible.

MOVED INTO NEW OFFICES

Bank of Nova Scotia is Doing Business To-day in New Chambers—Handsomely Fitted Out

The handsome new chambers of the Bank of Nova Scotia are now open to the business public and their spick and span appearance is arousing much favorable comment.

The facilities for handling increasing business have been much benefited by the change of offices, there being more wickets for each department of the business. The stuccoed ceiling and solid varnished oak material in the building give it a thoroughly modern and well equipped appearance.

The outer lobby is a new feature and the manager's office is large and placed in a convenient locality for patrons. The staff is doing business to-day and everything is in place.

BRIGHT MEETING

Sunday Night Services in the Crystal are Growing in Interest

One of the best meetings of the year was that held in the Crystal theatre last evening. The singing was brighter and the number who attended was larger than usual. These meetings are kept on a high level, and the people appreciate them so that they delight to attend.

Mr. J. M. Green sang a beautiful solo, entitled "How Sweet the Name of Jesus Sounds," and the Y.M.C.A. duet sang "Brightly Beams Our Father's Mercy." The new Alexander song, "He Will Hold Me Fast," has taken hold of all who have heard it, and the audience sang it last night without the books.

Next Sunday evening there will be a couple of selections by a local male quartette, and a more than usually bright meeting is expected. The message last night was a straight-from-the-shoulder talk on the question, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"

The social tea to be given by the Ladies' Auxiliary to-morrow evening promises to be one of the big events of the season at the Y.M.C.A. The ad in another column of this paper reveals a programme of rare merit. After the conclusion of the programme there will be a delightful menu of refreshments served in the reading room.

The Bible classes were held as usual yesterday in the parlors of the association.

FRACTIOUS STEED CAUSED SOME EXCITEMENT

A horse and cutter, driven by a resident of Smith who did not care to have his name mentioned, were the participants in a lively runaway on Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

Turning the corner at Charlotte and George streets, the cutter upset, throwing its occupant out. The horse took fright and made out Charlotte street at a John Gilpin pace. Five miles or more did the frightened animal annihilate space before letting up for a breathing spell. Two young lads drove out after it in another cutter, and brought the outfit, slightly battered, back to the city. The owner met them on George street and was very profuse in his thanks to them.

Passers-by, who saw the incident, stated it was one of the speediest runaways they had ever witnessed.

Sang Very Effectively

The musical part of the services yesterday at Charlotte street Methodist church were greatly strengthened by the presence of D. E. Fleming, of Lethbridge, a talented baritone soloist. He sang very effectively both morning and evening. Wooller's "Consider and Hear Me," a difficult composition, was interpreted in a most expressive and masterly manner by him, and in the evening he sang "Abide With Me," by Liddle, in a voice of extreme richness. His voice is one of great range and lends itself readily to expression. His two selections were greatly appreciated yesterday. Mr. Fleming is baritone soloist in Knox church, Lethbridge, and is in this vicinity representing F. C. Lowes & Company, financial brokers.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES AT ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

Rev. Canon O'Meara Spoke to Large Congregations

Large congregations were present at the anniversary services of All Saints Church, held yesterday, and the two discourses by Rev. Canon O'Meara, LL.D., principal of Wycliffe College, Toronto, were listened to much interest and profit.

It was the first anniversary to be observed in the new edifice. Another year will see greater work accomplished. The activities of the parish, will be extended, and guided by their earnest and energetic rector, the congregation of All Saints is sure to grow, and prosper.

The discourse of Rev. Canon O'Meara, at the morning service, was a missionary one. His text taken from Ephesians. 2; 12, "Without God in the World" was applied in speaking of the position of the heathen. He pointed that it was the duty of hose who know of Him and receive of His love to enlighten the millions who are in darkness, intellectually, morally and spiritually. It was not what we had done that God was looking at but what we had not done.

There were all kinds of theories and ideas as to the position and attiae of the heathen. But God's photograph of their position was revealed in the words of the text. What would it mean to us? We would be without the Bible; every message of scripture would be taken away. There would be no Lords' day, no churches, no Jesus Christ; we couldn't live. Our position would be that of the heathen. Then are we, who are enjoying all His privileges, willing to give them to the nations across the seas who are without. Put every other aspect aside and face this question "Am I as an individual and Christian, willing that the great majority of my fellow men, shall remain without God in the world.

With 294,000,000 millions of souls in India there are more idols than people, yet not one of these idols, claim to be able to give light to the soul. We have Jesus Christ who can give life and life eternal.

Rev. Canon O'Meara made a strong appeal, for an individual effort to assist in the work of evangelization, in his concluding remarks.

PETERBOROUGH IS LOW ON LIST IN BUILDING ACTIVITY

The Contractor, a paper devoted to the building trades, in the last issue shows a great volume of building done throughout the Dominion last year. It says:—

The building returns for 1910 submitted by the principal cities of the Dominion, show an average increase of 44 per cent. over 1909. In 1910 the expenditure was $94,180,778, compared with $65,459,456 for the preceding year. December, 1910, showed an increase of more than two and one-half millions over December, 1909.

Toronto maintains its place at the head of the list with an increase of 16 per cent. During the first six months of 1910 a gain of 11 per cent. was recorded over the corresponding period of 1909, so that the final return can only be regarded as an evidence of steady development and well maintained prosperity.

Perhaps the most noteworthy feature of the returns in Montreal's gain of 103 per cent. The figures are particularly striking when it is considered that they are exclusive of the returns from the suburbs. Allowance must be made, however, for the fact that the annexation at the beginning of the year brought in the town of St. Louis, one of the most rapidly developing districts on the island, and other municipalities later on in the year. Thus, had the total from municipalities which became part of the parent city in 1910, been added to the Montreal total for 1909, a more accurate basis of comparison would be reached. As compared then with returns from practically the same area of $15,815,859 was about 50 per cent. and not over 100 per cent., as would at first appear.

Of the other eastern cities, Hamilton had a gain of 60 per cent. and Port Arthur an increase of 82 per cent.

The following table shows the amount of building done in 25 of the business centres of the Dominion:

THREE LEADING QUALITIES THAT WOMEN DEMAND IN MEN

A Forcible Sermon in Plain Language Delivered by Rev. Mr. Rollins—Urged Young Women to Demand Several All-Important Principles in Young Men—The Spirit of God the Only Safe-Guard

> Young men, when you find a young woman who seeks all these things for you, and not how fast she can spend your money in operas and amusements, then you may safely place yourself under her influence, because she wants you to be a man.

"And it shall come to pass afterward that I will pour out my spirit upon all my flesh, and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions."—Joel 2, 28th.

From the above text, Rev. Mr. Rollins, of St. Andrew's church, spoke to a large congregation last evening in his church. His subject for the evening, as previously announced, was "Woman's Ideal Man," and he expressed himself in a plain, truthful manner, and in easily understood words, what the woman expects of the ideal man.

Part of the reverend gentleman's address was as follows:—

YOUTHFUL VISIONS NATURAL.

"Visions have always been associated with youth, but they are not always. An individual is just as young as he is young. We are young just as long as we see ideals and visions which make nations, even if we see them at sixty years of age. Only two classes of ideals will be dealt with, and they will be the ideals which young men and young women entertain for each other, and with the ideals that pertain to the Kingdom of God.

GRAND WOMANHOOD COMING.

There is a grand womanhood coming, under the influence of a consecrated manhood. One reacts upon the other. The woman is dreaming and seeing visions for the man and the man for the woman.

BETTER TYPES OF MANHOOD.

Who are the women who are demanding a higher type of manhood. Not the woman with the small head and the large hat. Not the woman who is set a tingling by the latest fashions, not the woman who judges man by the style of his necktie or the cut of his clothes, nor is she the ideal women who urges the man to take her to the theatre, the dance and the moving picture show, constantly, and then after marriage complains because the furniture is not paid for. Nor is she the woman who loves dogs and cats more than babies. These are not the types of

"Noble women, nobly planned,
To warn, to confront and command."

These women are not ideals. The women meant are those who are in sympathy with the Kingdom of God, and who are working for its establishment here on earth.

THEY QUAIL BEFORE WOMEN.

Undesirable types of manhood always quail in the presence of true womanhood. When the baser types of manhood exist they exist because true womanhood is not present to discountenance it.

There are three leading qualities that the true woman looks for in ideal man.

A MAN AMONG MEN.

First, every true woman demands that the ideal man shall be a man among men. It is a great thing to be, a man, not a cad, or a blackguard among men. And to become great among men never happens by accident. It is the reward of effort. The man who becomes great must have possessed and cultivated manly qualities. He becomes great, or a man among men by making a success of himself. It is a mistake for a man to think he can attain to greatness in a blaze of light.

It is pluck, not luck, that makes a better philosophy of success in life. It is the man who builds into himself perseverance, generosity, kindness, manliness, that is making a man a success, and which caused him to be recognized as a man among men. He is not ashamed of his work, position, or to make sacrifices.

Young men, when you find a young woman who seeks all these things for you, and not how fast she can spend your money in operas and amusements, then you can put yourselves under her influence because she wants you to be a man.

SPOTLESS PURITY DEMANDED.

The second quality which every woman should insist on in man is spotless purity. There is nothing in this world more admirable than a woman or man whose heart and life are white. Woman has a perfect right to demand it in a man. Woman's ideal man embodies purity, which every true man will keep and guard.

SHOULD BE A MAN OF GOD.

The third quality which she should and nearly always does demand in the ideal man is that he should be in the simple and true sense a man of God, that his purity shall be fortified by religion, that around his life may hover all the restraining influences of God. If a man is to do his best, at home, at work, in public, it will be accomplished by the indwelling in him of the spirit of God.

While a man may be magnificent by nature, magnanimous, and large-hearted, and the man who sits by his side in church the meanest soul on earth, yet if the latter will yield up his soul to God he will come out on top and surpass the former in character. A man of God is as Mt. Blanc is among the Alpine peaks. He is nearer God and reflects most of the glory of the Son."

The sermon was one of great helpfulness and instruction and was listened to with the closest attention. On the coming Sunday the pastor will preach a companion sermon to the one last evening, entitled "Man's Ideal Woman."

THE FINAL TO-NIGHT

Cobourg or Grillers Will be District Champions at the Finish

With the change in the weather, the ice will be hard and fast for to-night's junior game between Cobourg and the Grillers. A win means the championship of the district for either team, and according to reports the visiting seven will put up a big fight for the honors. They are coming by excursion train, bringing over one hundred rooters.

The locals have been practicing faithfully and are confident of taking the large side of the figures.

The team will be the same as played in Lindsay.

The line-up will be—Patterson, goal; Reynolds, point; Heffernan, cover; Houghton, rover; Hall, centre; Matthews, left wing; McMartin, right

HOUSE OF LORDS WERE DEFEATED

Clarke's Boarding House Seven Won Game With 6-3 Score

The House of Lords went down and out Saturday night, Clarke's boarding house seven crushing them to bitter defeat, not in a battle of words, but in a hockey match, the final score of which was 6—3. The attendance was large, as were also the nets—a fact too much so, for Bill Landry, who found the rubber disc a heavier proposition than the softer sphere used with the racquet. Goaltender Clarke, on the other hand, was just as much at home, blocking difficult shots as he was making smiles with Holy Shepherd, and thus the disaster was brought about. The variegated uniforms were a strong feature of the contest. Keith Lech handled the ball. The teams were:

Clarke's Boarding House — Goal, Clarke; point, Mulholland; cover, Landry; forwards, Minns, Bush, Ross and Hall.

House of Lords—Goal, Landry; point, McDonald; cover, Thomas; forwards, Fuller, McLean, Ackerman and Lord.

WANDERERS BLEW UP

Montreal, Jan. 30.—In the presence of more than six thousand spectators at the Arena Saturday night Ottawa defeated the Wanderers by 5 goals to 2, and secured a grip on the National Hockey Association championship that is not likely to be loosened.

After holding Ottawa scoreless for three-quarters of the time, the champion Wanderers wilted and suffered a humiliating defeat. With less than fifteen minutes to go, the Montreal players led 2 to 0. Then followed the biggest "blow up" seen on the Arena surface for a long time.

Five goals in less than two minutes and eight to five minutes show how completely the home team wilted after they had kept Ottawa shut out for 50 minutes of the hour's play.

LACROSSE

James Murphy, manager of the Toronto Lacrosse Club, was on Saturday unanimously elected president of the National Lacrosse Union for a three years' term.

Indoor Baseball

The indoor baseball games for Tuesday night are No. 2 vs No. 6, at 7.30, and No. 8 vs Bugle Band at 8.45. The players of the four teams are asked to be on hand in good time.

Y.M.C.A. SPORT

In the Junior Boy's athletic contest Saturday morning the following events were run off, and furnished some very exciting finishes.

In the running high jump Brown's team defeated Horsefield's team by a foot. The standing broad jump was also won by Brown's team defeating Arnott's team by 10 in. Stewart's team won a well earned victory from Horsefield in the 100 yards relay, but was defeated by Horsefield and Arnott in the 30 yard swimming race. Brown defeated Stewart in the obstacle and Arnott in the potato race after running a dead heat in the latter.

Every boy in the class is on a team and it is up to every fellow to turn out every Saturday morning and help his team. The standing of the different teams follows:—

C. Brown's team, 153 points.
A. Horsefield's team, 140 1-2 points.
C. Arnott's team, 84 3-4 points.
C. Stewart, 52 points.

Owing to an entertainment that is being held by the Ladies' Auxiliary, on Tuesday evening, there will be no intermediate class that night. But athletics will be resumed on Thursday night as usual.

There will be a meeting of the intermediate class held Tuesday evening to talk over plans for a summer camp to which every member of the class is requested to make a special effort to be present.

Saturday night's entertainment in the boy's department was well attended and this was much appreciated by the boys. It was the first since Christmas. Next Saturday another programme will be given from eight to ten o'clock.

PUCKLAND

Speaking of the Cobourg-Trenton game, the Toronto Star says—The game was unnecessarily rough in the latter period, the local defence men causing the trouble, and their penalties undoubtedly cost their team the game. Hand was the chief offender. Two of the aspiring group champions' goals were scored while two locals roosted in the penalty box at the same time.

The Bank League fixture played Saturday afternoon between Montreal and Toronto-Nova Scotia went to the former by a 10—2 score.

The Machinists of the C.G.E. or the Lock Works could not score in their Mercantile League game Saturday.

Had Nothing Much To say

James Gorham had very little to say when told by jailer Nesbitt he would not be hanged but instead spend the rest of his days in prison. He was naturally greatly relieved to hear after days of expectancy that the death penalty would not be carried out.

The date of his departure for Kingston is not known, but official ratification is expected within a short time.

Execution of a Rat

About the queerest means to kill a rat ever thought of, was taken by a conductor on an M. S. R. car this morning. At the corner of St. Catherine and St. Dominique Streets, he stepped out of the car, carrying a rat by the tail. It was very low, being able to wiggle but feebly. Then this resourceful man, who was also carrying a frown, went in front of the car, put the rat on the rail where he held it with the brushy end of the broom, and signalled the motorman to drive ahead. That worthy did so, slowly approaching the place of execution with his huge weapon. Death was almost instantaneous. The victim bore it heroically, squeaking but once.

The conductor had found the rodent in his car. After a manful hunt, with his broom as an instrument of offence to defence, he managed to subdue the rat until he was able to catch it. The hunt was very exciting, because the rat was nimble until the conductor had pounded it many times. Then he led it forth to the slaughter, and it went like a lamb.

The payroll of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company for December amounted to $196,000.

The population of Calgary is estimated at 50,000, and is increasing at the rate of from 12,000 to 15,000 a year.

Turks Attack Consul.

Constantinople, Jan. 30.—J. Ridgley Carter of the American embassy, with the rank of minister plenipotentiary, Saturday lodged a protest with the Porte against the assault and indignities to which the American consular representatives at Smyrna and Alexandretta were recently subjected.

It appears that a sergeant instigated a mutiny among fifty Turkish soldiers, who were being transported on the steamship New Jersey. When the vessel reached Alexandretta she was flying the American flag, and the United States consular agent, John T. Peristiany, went on board to investigate. There he was set upon by the soldiers and driven from the ship. During the attack his hand was cut and his coat torn off.

The local police arrested some of the soldiers, but the captain of the New Jersey refused to surrender the sergeant, the ringleader. The vessel proceeded subsequently to Smyrna, where there was a second row over the question of whether the soldiers or the sailors of the New Jersey were primarily at fault. When the vessel docked, its second mate was arrested. At this stage of the quarrel the American consul-general, Ernest L. Harris, took a hand, with the result that he was roundly abused by the warring factions.

Killed by Bandits.

Mexico, Jan. 30.—San Juan Evangelista, terminal of a branch of the Tehuantepec Railway, and San Juan, Jalampan, near Coatzacoalcos, are reported in despatches from Vera Cruz to have been occupied by revolutionists under the command of Dr. Enrique Silmenares Rivas, president of a political club in Atoyac, State of Vera Cruz.

Rivas is said to have been at the head of former rebellions in Guatemala, and to have passed several years in Cuba.

An account of murder and savagery, of which an American Mormon family, and a young Canadian, were victims, reached here yesterday in a private letter from Dublan, near Casas Grandes. Four bandits attacked and robbed the home of James Mortensen, and brutally mistreated Mrs. Mortensen and a thirteen-year-old daughter.

Subsequently the latter was shot and killed while preparing a meal at the command of the robbers. An American by the name of Madison escaped, and in reply to his appeal Marius Cox, a native of Canada, attempted to assist the Mortensens, but fell dead under the fire of the bandits.

London Printers Strike.

London, Jan. 30.—The general strike in the job printing trade is already under way and the number of employes involved will be rapidly increased this week when strike notices expire. The men have been offered a working week of fifty-two hours, but they demand a maximum of fifty hours.

The principal firms this far affected are Spottiswoods & Co., Ltd., contractors for much Government and other official work, and Waterlow & Sons, Ltd.

The weekly periodicals managed to appear as usual Saturday, but curiously the new daily, started in support of the printers' campaign, failed to publish on Saturday.

The daily newspapers are not affected and their compositors have agreed each to contribute $2.50 weekly in aid of the strikers.

Aviator as Herdsman.

Houston, Texas, Jan. 30.—Rene Simon, the aviator, known on two continents for his daring, has added new laurels to his record, when for the first time in the history of aviation, he demonstrated Friday afternoon that herding cattle with aeroplanes was possible.

Simon left the aviation field, and heading across the prairies, darted directly for a herd of cattle grazing half a mile away. Cowboys were just arriving preparatory to rounding up the animals, when Simon descended and circulating around the steers soon had them on a trot toward the aviation field. He drove them up to the fence separating the field from the prairie and then started them off westward, delivering they to the cowboys.

Lost—£100.

Years ago when the electric telegraph was a new idea and a mystery to the masses, there came trouble one Saturday night in the Bank of England. The business of the day had closed, and the balance was not right. There was a deficit of just one hundred pounds. It was not the money, but the error, that must be found. For the officials and clerks there could be no sleep until the mystery had been cleared up. All that night, and all Sunday, a force of men were busy. The money was surely gone from the vaults, but no one could discover whence.

On the following morning a clerk suggested that the mistake might have occurred in packing, for the West Indies, some boxes of specie that had been sent to Southampton for shipment. His chief acted on the suggestion. Here was an opportunity to test the powers of the telegraph—lightning against steam, and steam with forty-eight hours the start. Very soon the telegraph asked a man in Southampton, "Has the ship Mercator sailed?"

The answer came back, "Just weighing anchor."

"Stop her in the Queen's name," flashed back the telegraph. "She is stopped," was returned.

"Have on deck certain boxes (marks given), weigh them carefully, and let me know the result," telegraphed the chief.

This order was obeyed, and one box was found to be somewhere about one pound and ten ounces heavier than its mates—just the weight of the missing sovereigns. "All right. Let the ship go!" was the next order.

The West India house was debited with the one hundred pounds, and the Bank of England was at peace again.

A training ship is proposed for Vancouver boys.

THE VALUE AND BENEFIT OF PAIN

Rev. C. Carpenter Addresses Men's Meeting in Theatre

At the men's meeting in the Princess Theatre yesterday afternoon Rev. C. Carpenter gave his second address on the subject of "Pain." A week ago his discourse was on "The Mystery of Pain." He now took "Victory Through Pain," and after briefly summarising his previous address, and emphasising the fact that pain rightly used will elevate, proceeded to state that Biblical history showed this, and further gave numerous instances of the way in which character was evolved and progress made.

Our first parents, as soon as they had fallen, began to suffer pain and sorrow by the natural law that sin and sorrow were necessarily connected, and the only way to trace them back was by suffering, and it was therefore not a curse, but a blessing. Cain after his abominable murder, was placed under the law of a long-suffering, teaching him that life was precious, and as a warning to him and his descendants.

Then as to the flood. The deluge was caused by the sin of the world, and by it successive generations have been corrected and warned, and the path of progress has been followed, and now prospects and ideals generated by the flood. By the time of Abraham the difference in the moral life of the nation showed that something had occurred. Abraham himself was refined and ennobled by suffering. By his great trial when told to offer up his son Isaac; by the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah; when he had to leave his own land and his own people, he rose to such a height as, without pain, would have been impossible. The great promise, again, was not made to him in definite form until he had passed through much suffering.

Jacob was brought out by pain. In his early days, the pampered son of a fond mother, he was mean and grasping. But as he inflicted suffering, so he suffered. He had to flee for his life from the anger of his fierce brother. He lay with a stone for a pillow at Bethel. He was treated cruelly by Laban, then driven away. He wrestled with the angel, and later suffered much by his children. But for this suffering he would never have become the great Israel, who learned the secret of the inner meaning of life. Then Joseph had his great sorrows. He was sold and imprisoned, and through his sufferings he was kept pure, and became the power in Egypt that he was. Thus far we have dealt with individuals. Now, as to the Israelites, when they dwelt in Egypt. Hitherto they had been a wandering, nomadic tribe; they had no nationality, no code of laws. But during their cruel captivity it came to them that they should be no longer a tribe but a nation, full of patriotism and religious zeal, a nation welded together by sorrow and suffering. The passover was to be a continual reminder of their troubles, of the plagues of the Egyptians and a warning for the future.

During their forty years wandering in the desert much weariness and suffering were their's, but they emerged with their nationality and their laws developed, and able to march forth as a conquering nation. Here is a lesson of self-restraint, and of remembering not to please themselves, but to work for the honor and glory of God, and to distinguish plainly their ideals.

They learned by their code of laws, and their ceremonials that God was only to be approached through sufferings and pain. No sooner had they settled down in peace, than they began to go backwards and to degenerate. Famine, pestilence and wars came upon them, until, at last, a greater calamity was necessary for their recalling. They fell into bondage. Their temple was destroyed and all that they prized best was lost, that they might be cleansed from idolatory.

In the time of Christ they were weaker in numbers and had been conquered by Rome, yet they had a greater conception, and a greater trust in the ideal that their mission was wholly religious and not worldly. They began to realise that the saviour was to be a spiritual King and their previous sufferings rendered them more noble, refined and moral according to their lights.

Pain, in the New Testament dispensation, is essential. The Apostles suffered to the extent of giving up their lives, and through them the victory of Christ's church has been attained through bloodshed and martyrdom.

All along unto the church of today, suffering has and does make the church pure.

Mr. H. Sewers gave a sacred song.

LITTLE ALICE

She Afforded a Grown Man Delightful Entertainment

By LLOYD WILLIAMS

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Bixby was one of these fellows who think that the young men of America should take an interest in politics. He was a shrewd man—we all think ourselves shrewd—and could "see through a millstone" as well as any one. He believed in the Machiavelian type of diplomacy and prided himself upon being able to conceal his meaning by his words as well as the great diplomat himself. He was ambitious, and ambitious men are liable to overtax their strength. At any rate, Bixby overtaxed his and was ordered to go away by himself into the country and live the simple life of a domestic animal. That is, he was to eat and sleep and not think.

He chose a farmhouse. The season was not propitious, for the summer and part of autumn had passed, and the days were short. Bixby received the morning papers from the city by 11 o'clock, and between breakfast and their receipt he walked. It was all very well for his doctor to tell him that he must do nothing. Everybody knows that Satan provides work for idle hands to do. So long as he was busy he lived as innocent a life as any man of his acquaintance. Just as soon as he ceased to work he got into mischief.

Chance furnished an opportunity. One morning he started out for his constitutional. It was a cold, lowering day and spitting snow. Nevertheless Bixby craved exercise and enjoyed stepping out at a brisk pace. He had not gone far before he saw a girl coming in the opposite direction. When she passed him he knew at once that, like himself, she was not country born and bred. Her dress coming only to the tops of her boots left Bixby in doubt whether she had yet emerged from young girlhood or whether she had adopted a short skirt for walking. In passing Bixby she lowered her eyes with that modesty one expects to find either in young girls or in eminently correct ladies.

The next morning Bixby took his constitutional at the same hour and on the same road. He had no idea of meeting the girl he had met the day before. Indeed, he had quite forgotten her. Passing over a crest and looking ahead, he saw a farmhouse, and at the same moment a door was opened and a woman came out and took the road toward Bixby. She had not come very far before he recognized the girl he had met the day before. She was now carrying some books under her arm.

"Schoolgirl," remarked Bixby to himself.

Bixby had just turned thirty-five, and if his thoughts the day before had inclined to a possible relief from the tedium of his exile with this girl the discovery that she was a schoolgirl put the idea quite out of his head. He permitted his eyes to dwell upon her for the moment during which he was passing her, and she, as before, lowered hers.

The next afternoon Bixby was out rambling—indeed, he had nothing to do but ramble—when it occurred to him that he would like a glass of milk. At the moment he espied in the distance the house from which he had seen the schoolgirl emerge the day before. The natural consequence of wanting the milk and seeing the house at the same time was a thought that he might see the girl. In telling the story he never speaks of this last thought, leaving one to suppose that the two first contingencies alone resulted in his going there.

On reaching the place he opened the gate, went deliberately up the walk and rapped on the door. A woman opened it, and Bixby asked if he might beg a glass of milk. His request was granted, and he was invited into the living room to wait while the woman brought the milk. At a table, with books—presumably schoolbooks—before her, was the girl.

Bixby took a seat. The girl did not look up, but kept on with what she was doing, evidently studying. The woman was some time bringing the milk, and, since it was embarrassing to sit in the same room with a person without speaking, Bixby concluded to make a remark.

"Are there good schools near here?" he asked.

"No, not very good schools, I believe. But I don't know anything about them. I don't go to school here."

Bixby was too well bred to ask where she did go to school. He remarked upon the beautiful country round about and how he enjoyed walking.

The girl told him that walking in cold weather was her delight, but she couldn't take as long walks as she would like because it was not considered safe for her to go alone. Then Bixby told her why he had come to the country, that he had nothing to do all day and if her father and mother would permit her to go with him it would give him great pleasure. To this she replied that her father and mother were not there and there was no one to prevent her doing what she liked. Bixby considered this tantamount to accepting his invitation and said he would probably be coming past the farmhouse the next morning. If he did so he would stop and take her along. To this she replied that she would walk his way and they might meet on the road.

About this time the woman came in with the milk, set it down on the table and went out. Bixby drank it, conversing with the girl the while. He gave her every opportunity to explain why she was there and tell him all about herself, but, whether she did not understand his hints or was singularly reticent for one so young, anyway she failed to enlighten him. When he took his leave she arose from her seat, and Bixby noticed that she was pretty nearly as tall as he was. But Bixby was not a large man, and the girl seemed to be large for her age. Some girls get their growth by fourteen, and Bixby concluded this was one of that kind.

The next morning was delightful, not a cloud in the sky and the air dry and cold. Bixby started for his walk and felt as if he would rather run. There was ice in the little ditches beside the road, and, being fresh frozen and glassy, it afforded especially good slides for boys and girls. Looking ahead, he saw the girl he was to meet sliding on one of these stretches of ice. Indeed, she slid on every one she came to. When Bixby came up to her her cheeks were aglow. She looked very pretty. "She'll make a stunner," remarked Bixby to himself, "when she is a few years older."

After the greetings Bixby told her that if they were to walk together they must know each other's names. He said he was Mr. Bixby, and she said her name was Alice. He asked her "Alice what?" and she said Alice Middleton.

"Well, Alice," he said, "what do you study at school?"

"What do I study? Why, I study—oh, don't let's talk about school work! Let's talk about the hills and the valleys and the trees. It must be very beautiful here in summer. I can picture it as it will be in April, when the leaves are budding and on the forest trees is that delicate pale shade of green that we see only about ten days in the whole year. And I can fancy the melodious piping of some bird away up in the highest branches as if it came down from heaven. Do you remember how beautifully Coleridge describes the sounds in his 'Ancient Mariner'?

"Around, around flew each sweet sound,
Then darted to the sun.
Slowly the sounds came back again,
Now mixed, now one by one.

"Sometimes, a-dropping from the sky,
I heard the skylark sing.
Sometimes all little birds that are—
How they seem to fill the sea and air
With their sweet jargoning!

"And now 'twas like all instruments,
Now like a lonely flute,
And now it is an angel's song
That makes the heavens be mute."

"Good gracious," exclaimed Bixby, "where did you learn that?"

"Where did I learn it?" she hesitated, then added, "Why in our English literature course, to be sure!"

"You have a high poetic sense."

"You mean a musical sense."

She began to imitate a bird with a voice that astonished Bixby, and when an echo came back from a neighboring hill it seemed to him that she had really been answered by a nightingale.

Bixby stopped stock still with a look of astonishment on his face. The girl burst into a laugh.

There were neither miles nor hours in that walk—at least not for Bixby. He had been bored by women—highly educated women, too—and here was a girl scarcely in her teens whose gift of appreciation enabled her to keep holding up before him pictures, giving each the peculiar coloring of her own individual vision. Finally they came to the farmhouse.

"Will you walk with me tomorrow?" asked Bixby.

"I'm sorry I can't; I go away in the morning."

"What!"

Bixby spoke the word as if some one had told him that he would be shot at daylight.

"Give me your full name and address in the city," she added; "there's something I wish to send you."

"When?"

"After your return."

Bixby gave her his card with his address on it, and she ran into the house.

The next morning the weather changed for Bixby. The country seemed uninhabitable. He stood it for two days longer, then went back to town.

A few days after his return he received tickets to an opera. There was no reason that he knew for any one to send him complimentary tickets, and he supposed these had been sent through mistake. He concluded to use one of them.

What was his astonishment to see in the prima donna the "little girl" Alice, though this was not her stage name. She looked about twenty-two years old. She saw Bixby, gave him a smile and sent him an invitation to visit her between the acts. When he saw her she explained that she had been resting away from everybody preparatory to a long engagement. It was not her fault that he had taken her for a schoolgirl. She wore her dresses short for convenience in tramping and had permitted him to remain in error.

Bixby has given up business and is following an opera troupe. It is needless to say that little Alice is the attraction for him. Although it is not yet a year since he first met her in the country, it seems to him that she has grown to be ten years older than she was then. She tells him she's not a year older and, considering the age he then took her to be, must grow for four or five years before she will be marriageable. He says he will follow her if necessary till she reaches her second childhood.

A CORNER IN FEATHERS

AMUSING TALE OF THE RETURN FROM SOUTH AFRICA.

The Volunteers Who Robbed a Merchant of His Ostrich Plumes After the Boer War Proved Too Clever for the Searchers, But Their Plot Was Finally Discovered—Then the Innocent Privates Profited.

Towards the close of the Boer War a company of volunteers were camped at Green Point, Cape Town, awaiting to embark on their homeward voyage. It was during this temporary stay in Cape Town that the following amusing incident took place. Every day a number of Jews went round the camp offering a collection of curios for sale, which the soldiers readily bought to take home as presents. One morning the daredevil of the company (a sergeant who had narrowly missed being reduced to the ranks on many occasions) went round the camp and gave the following order: "The general commands that all goods offered for sale by hawkers in this camp shall be confiscated." The command was taken seriously, as the N.C.O. was on duty at the time he gave it.

Presently a hawker came into camp carrying a Gladstone bag full of ostrich feathers. He entered one tent smiling, and saying "With your permission," knelt down and opened the bag. As he was displaying his feathers and talking freely with the men two crept quietly behind him with a blanket, and before he was aware of anything he was trussed up, a struggling mass of humanity in the blanket. The bag and contents were immediately pounced upon and carried to another tent by the culprits to divide the spoil. On opening the bag a great surprise was in store for them, for instead of their captive being an unlawful hawker, as they supposed, the contents proved him to be the representative of one of the leading firms in Cape Town.

Here the men were in a fix, they could not go back now, for the man had got loose from his bonds and was searching around for his bag. Had he reported his loss to the officer at once a search would undoubtedly have been made and his bag found, but he went to his firm, who reported the case by letter. During the night a consultation was held by the men, and it was decided to carry the thing out to the full extreme, as it would go hard with the persons who tried to explain matters. Various suggestions were given, and it was decided to throw the bag into the sea, and distribute the contents. But how was the feathers to be hidden, for a search was sure to be made the following morning, and the company was due to sail in the afternoon? A bright idea struck one of them, and each took a feather and thrust it down the barrel of his rifle and replaced the sight protector.

Early next morning a search was made whilst the men were on parade, but without avail. Nothing further was heard of the matter until the wagons were packed and all were ready for marching to the quay. The march had just begun when an officer came riding up and thundered the words, "Halt! Each man take one kit, open contents on the floor, and stand by for inspection."

It was amusing to see the expression on the face of the officer as he poked about the articles with his cane. He no doubt thought that if the report of the man was true he would surely find the feathers packed in some kit bag at the last moment. Nothing of an incriminating nature was found, and the men were allowed to proceed to the ship.

On arrival at the vessel another surprise was in store for the men, for every rifle was immediately handed over to the arms room. A few days later, as the armory-sergeant was cleaning the rifles, he came across a feather snugly concealed in one of the rifles. He placed it back again, thinking it was a new way which the soldier had thought of to bring his feathers home safely. But the next rifle was the same, and the next, which aroused his suspicions, and he sent for the officer of the company. All the rifles were overhauled and about fifty feathers found.

The officer was in a dilemma, for he dare not send them back, still he did not wish to let the men have their ill-gotten gains, so he placed a feather in each of the rifles which had not contained anything. On arrival at the barracks the men proceeded to take the feathers out, but great was their consternation to find that the rifle of every man who was in the plot was empty, whilst those who had had nothing to do with the affair had a beautiful feather each. No doubt many pretty girls are wearing those feathers now in their hats, little thinking of the many eventful episodes which those feathers had passed through.

From Errand-Boy to Peer.

Lord Furness, who has told the British Employers' Federation that unless they agree to arbitration in their dispute with the Shipbuilding Trades Unions and thus bring to an end the lock-out which is causing so much suffering in the North, he will dissociate himself from them, is one of the largest shipowners in the world. He started life as an errand-boy, but made such good use of his opportunities that before he was 20 he was a partner in a large firm trading in foreign produce. To-day he controls some 140 vessels, and the firms in which he is directly interested employ 40,000 persons, with an annual pay-roll of over two millions.

Charity.

"Thank heaven, I never have had to depend on charity for anything."

"Are you sure of that? It seems to me the people who put up with your manners must have to project a good deal of charity in your direction."

REPORT ON HOUSE OF REFUGE FOR THE YEAR

Cost of Maintenance Was Higher—Thirty-one Inmates, With Very Little Sickness Beyond the Usual Amount.

The following report of the Board of Management of the House of Refuge was presented to the County Council at its session last week:

To members of the County Council:

Gentlemen,—We, your Board of Management, respectfully beg to report as follows:—

Having made the statutory visits to the institution and other visits necessary, we are pleased to say that everything appeared satisfactory, except the hailstones, which, of course, did a lot of damage that has necessitated the buying of feed for stock and will require considerable more.

Very little sickness prevailed beyond the usual that will always exist amongst a lot of old people.

As you are all aware of the building of a septic tank and cost, we will say that as far as we can see it is working very satisfactory, and we do not think it is too much to say that it is a credit to the Bogue Bros., who built it.

The cost of maintenance is a little higher this year than last, but you will observe that the produce off the farm used in the House is charged to inmates as per request of Inspector of Prisons and Charities.

Respectfully submitted.

IS HYDRO-ELECTRIC SCHEME TO BE A FINANCIAL FAILURE

Financial Post Claims Municipalities Cannot Use Half of Power Contracted for—Large Annual Losses to the Municipalities in Sight—An Interesting Study

(Financial Post.)

The Financial Post through investigating the causes of the interruptions in the various municipalities taking power from the Hydro-Electric Commission has become possessed of some valuable information regarding the present condition of the operating municipal plants and their future prospects, which it now presents to the public. The Post is not a prophet of evil, but has formed opinions which lead it to believe that there are very grave difficulties in the way of the success of the project, while there are those, in fact, who think that it is foredoomed to failure on economic, if not other grounds.

Reference has already been made to engineering troubles which have caused serious interruptions to the power and light services in the fidderent municipalities, to the great inconvenience and loss of the citizens, and at present it is unnecessary to say more on that subject.

We believe that the result to-day is that only three, or at most four, of the municipalities now taking power can use the amount of power they have contracted to purchase from the Government, and in some of the others the amount to be taken and used will not be greater than 25 per cent. of the amount contracted for.

Berlin, Guelph and Woodstock, who have for years operated their own plants, will be able to take the quantities contracted for by them respectively, and will be able to pay for it, although in these towns the citizens will gain nothing, because the rates to be charged for power and light will be the same as those heretofore charged in Berlin.

In London, Dundas, Preston, Stratford, Galt, Hespeler and Waterloo the municipalities will apparently not be able, certainly not for many years, to take the quantities which they have agreed to take and to pay for.

CAN CITIES BREAK CONTRACTS

It is common talk on the streets in these places that the Hon. Adam Beck has publicly stated that none of the municipalities need take more power than they actually use and that they are at liberty to disregard their contractual obligations to that extent. If this is true, then what becomes of the estimates of cost which are based upon all of these municipalities taking the amount of power allotted to them and paying for it? There will be a deficiency in the revenue and who is going to meet it? If Mr. Beck says the municipalities are not to meet it, then the loss will fall upon the Government, which means that the citizens of the province east, west and south must "pay the piper"; on the other hand, if the Government declines to assume this responsibility, each municipality will be sued for and must pay the money that it will owe as shortage at the end of the year.

The Hydro-Electric Commission has got to pay the Ontario Power Company for 75 per cent. of the total amount of power which it calls for so that in order to balance accounts, the municipalities must in turn pay that amount to the Commission. Under these circumstances the saving or benefit of any kind in power rates, or otherwise, to the citizens of these municipalities is very problematical. There is evidently ahead of them serious loss, no matter how that loss may ultimately be met.

A solicitor of prominence in Stratford has stated that he could not understand the contracts or the system; that the Government had got the municipalities into this trouble and in turn the Government would be called upon to get them out of it. As the Post understands it, the Government policy was to deliver power "free as air" to the citizens; then later to give the white coal to the people at cost, so that they would effect an enormous saving over the extortionate rates which were being charged by the local companies.

The Government has spent three and a half million dollars; the citizens of Toronto have voted $2,750,000; the municipalities have raised the necessary capital for local distribution amounting to millions of dollars or more, and it begins to look as though a large part of this money may be wasted and perhaps permanently lost.

There has not been, and never can be, any substantial permanent reduction in the rate by reason of the project, unless power is sold below what is an economic price.

TORONTO.

In the case of Toronto it is not fair to say what will happen, but no doubt Toronto could easily take and use the full amount of power which it has contracted to take, but this does not ensure, by any means, the success of the enterprise, because the Toronto Electric Light Company will prove no mean competitor. The rates to be charged to the citizens for power and light will not be less, or substantially less, than those now charged by the local company, and the company claims that it can easily meet any prices charged by the municipal plant, unless it sells below cost which the Post cannot believe it will ever be permitted to do.

take 2 two Financial Post.

LONDON

An estimate made on the ground is as follows:—

Earnings of the municipal plant	$ 60,500.00
Cost of power and fixed charges on distribution system, operating expenses etc.	102,875.00
Deficit	$ 42,375.00

This estimate is for one year and makes a liberal allowance for customers for both light and power, and pre-supposes effective work on the part of the city plant. The rates will be cheaper than those heretofore paid in London, but everybody knows that it is impossible for the municipal plant to pay at those figures, and it will not be long before they are put back where they were before.

GUELPH, BERLIN, WOODSTOCK

In Guelph, Berlin and Woodstock as stated the quantity of power contracted for can be taken and used. The municipal management will continue and the rates will be 7.10 cent per kilowatt hour for light and about $25 or $30 for power. These rates are the same as have heretofore been charged in Berlin.

STRATFORD

Stratford has contracted for 1000 h.p., and has built a transformer house for that quantity. The local company, doing all the present business available, has never been able to use more than 300 h.p. The local company earned $25,000 last year expenses $19,000, leaving a net profit of $6,000.

The municipality will have to pay a minimum power bill and other fixed charges amounting to $35,000 per annum. Merchants of Stratford believe that the city has repudiated the situation altogether, and that the Hydro-Electric Commission is running the business itself.

GALT

Galt is said to have stolen the business from the local company because it is stated that it paid for he poles and wires, and refused to buy the machinery. Merchants are using steam in their factories, as they have waste materia for fuel, and they need steam for heating purposes, and it is cheaper than Hydro power. J. R. Fryer, one of the chief movers and speakers for the Hydro-Electric Commission, is manager of the Malleable Iron Works, but cannot afford to use Niagara Power, as steam is cheaper. The same may be said of Mr. Scott, chairman of the Fire and Light Committee, part owner of Getty & Scott, boot and shoe manufacturers. Other steam power users are the Canada Machinery Corporation, Goldie & McCulloch. The municipality has asked for 1200 h.p., and there is not a market for more than 250 h.p. at the very outside.

The rates in Galt will be the same as in Berlin.

PRESTON

Preston has contracted for 600 horse power. Its actual use of power at the present time is 200 horse power. There is more business available in Preston which may ultimately go to the munlipcality.

The races in Preston are the same as Berlin.

DUNDAS

There are two large factories in Dunda staking 1,000 horse power from the Cataract Company of Hamilton.

If the municipality takes the Street lighting, and gets all the business to be done in competition with the Cataract Company, it figures out approximately as follows:—

Receipts	$ 9,000
Expenses	20,000
Deficiency	$11,000

If the Cataract Company is successful in the competition, what then?

HESPELER

Hespeler has contracted to take 400 horse power. They are using 100 horse power, and do not know when they will be able to use any more.

The rates here will be the same as in Berlin.

WATERLOO

Waterloo has contracted to take 685 horse power. Present total use of power is 125 horse power, and there is no new business in sight.

BRANTFORD

Brantford is quietly contemplating the electrical vicissitudes of its municipal neighbors, its ratepayers having had the wisdom more than two years ago to defeat the by-law for the power project.

After the installation ceremony the brethren present repaired to the banquetting hall, where an excellent supper was served, following which toasts to the King, the Grand Chapter of Canada, Our Country, Visiting Companions and the Officers of 111, were proposed and duly responded to. It was not until the small hours that the enjoyable convocation came to a close and the companions departed for their several homes, "Happy to meet, sorry to part, happy to meet again."

THE PERFUME OF THE LADY IN BLACK

The New Serial Story Which Commences in To-days Issue

The gripping qualities of this story reveal a gifted French author in his best vein. While it is a detective story ranking with the Sherlock Holmes series, revealing further adventures of Rouletabille, the sensational solver of mysteries, the narrative also presents several character studies of engrossing interest—Rouletabille, the bewildering hero of "The Mystery of the Yellow Room," who is here confronted by the nerve racking mystery of "the body too many;" Larsan, the fugitive from justice and master mind of the polished criminals of two hemispheres, who reveals himself only when he wishes to show where he is not, and the Lady in Black, whose inspiring faith is unshaken by the unspeakable tragedies in which she is the central figure. The dreadful power for evil that can be exerted by a perverted brain has never been more clearly portrayed. The heartbreaking test of the unfortunate son who realises that he must kill his father, who has never known his son, to save his mother, whom he might never see again, is a vivid portrayal of some of the penalties of human existence.

The Alberta Government has paid the second instalment of the interest on the Alberta and Great Waterways railway bonds.

WAS FATALLY HURT IN GAME

Shannon of Campbellford Injured at Havelock.

Doctors Won't Hold Out Hopes of Recovery.

Base of Skull Was Fractured Accidentally.

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Jan. 31.—A very serious and possibly fatal accident occurred here last night in the Havelock-Campbellford hockey match. Patrick Shannon, who was playing rover on the Campbellford team, received a fracture of the base of the skull in falling in a mix-up. The injury was quite accidental, but is very serious, and fears are entertained that the lad will not recover. Three doctors have been called in attendance, and everything possible is being done for the injured player, but the doctors will not hold out any strong hopes of recovery. Shannon was taken to the house of W. J Armstrong on being removed from the rink, and his condition is too serious to permit him being moved.

It was not suspected during the night that Shannon's injury was so serious at the time, but his Campbellford team mates are very anxious as his progress.

LEAVING HOME IN ROW-BOATS

Ohio Valley People Having a Wet Time.

Special To The Review.

Pittsburg, Jan. 31 — Residents of the Ohio Valley homes are being removed to-day in boats, as the water overflowing from the river is flooding a large portion of the valley. The rising of the flood is already causing a great deal of damage, some estimates placing it close to $5,000-000. There does not seem to be much prospect for immediate relief.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT HELPS REPLACE ONTARIO LIBRARY

Bill to Help Deserted and Abused Wives Comes Before the Legislature.

Toronto, Jan. 31.—Sir James Whitney moved in the Legislature yesterday afternoon a resolution of thanks to the Imperial Government for copies of the records of the House of Lords, House of Commons, and other historical volumes. The resolution will be forwarded to the Imperial Government through the Lieutenant-Governor and the Governor-General.

Sir James also moved a resolution of thanks to the persons named in the librarian's report who had contributed books to the library of the House. Both motions were seconded by Hon. J. J. Foy, and passed.

Sir James indicated his desire for the prompt transaction of business. The Prime Minister said he did not know that there would be any reason to rush or hurry business, but it would be too bad to have nothing done on Mondays. There was no Government business on the order paper for yesterday, but on some Monday the Government might possibly wish to take up some Government business. He would, therefore, give notice of motion, seconded by Hon. Mr. Foy, that Government orders be placed on the order paper for next Monday and each succeeding Monday of the session.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane introduced a consolidation bill respecting the cutting of saw logs on Government lands.

Hon. Col. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, gave notice that he would to-day move the House into committee of supply and ways and means. It is understood that the estimates will be presented to the House this afternoon, and the budget speech be made on Thursday.

As a result of a number of deputations which have called upon the Attorney-General on behalf of the "deserted wife," Hon. J. J. Foy is bringing in a bill, the objects of which are to secure a modification of the difficulties in the way of securing maintenance. The measure removes the necessity of proving repeated cruelties and assaults which often has stood in the way of a summons, and now permits the crown to act on her behalf by a simple proof of the husband's cruelty, and his denial of a comfortable home.

It will also change a troublesome clause in the old bill, which read to the effect that a deserted wife could summon the delinquent husband by proving him capable of maintaining "his wife and her family," which was sometimes interpreted as meaning her mother or father. The new bill reads "his wife or wife and family."

It will provide that orders for payment of money into court for purpose of maintenance are made enforcible by summons.

A FARMER'S AWFUL DEATH

Windsor, Jan. 30.—Twelve hours after he had been missed from home the mutilated body of James Calder, aged 60 years, a well-known farmer of Staples, twenty-two miles north of this city, was found lying face downwards in a hog pen. The discovery was made by Mrs. Calder who had become alarmed at her husband's long absence from home and started in search of him. The man evidently became unconscious and fell among the swine, who ate his flesh. Mr. Calder had been subject to giddiness and it is believed he fell into the pen and was eaten as he lay helpless and unconscious.

PRESIDENT TAFT TALKS OF "COMMERCIAL UNION" WITH US

Gives Expression to the Big Brotherly Love Sentiments — Speaks at Ohio Dinner.

Washington, Jan. 31.—The last public utterances of President McKinley in favor of reciprocity, made the day before he was assassinated at Buffalo, were recalled last night by President Taft in an address at the Ohio Society's anniversary banquet in commemoration of the McKinley birthday.

President Taft eulogized the character of the martyred President and paid a high tribute to his attitude on the commercial expansion of the country, with particular references to the declarations in favor of reciprocity made by President McKinley at the Pan-American Exhibition at Buffalo.

"The broadening effect of the national responsibility McKinley had had to carry," said President Taft, "shows itself in no respect more conspicuously than in this change of view on his part in respect of a policy of which he had always been the chief exponent. May we not hope that the change that he advocated may soon find expression in our national policy towards our good neighbor of the north, who has come half way to meet us?

"The Canadian agreement, if confirmed by legislative action, will be a fitting close to a century's controversies, and permanently establish good feeling and commercial union between kindred peoples. We shall find a rapidly increasing market for our numerous products among the people of our neighbor. We shall deepen and widen the sources of our food supply in territory close at hand.

"Our kinship, our common sympathies, our similar moral and social ideas, furnish the strongest argument for supporting this agreement."

ITALIAN WAS QUICK WITH GUN

Police in Fort William Have an Exciting Time.

Fort William, Jan. 31.—On Sunday night two Italians, giving the names of Alexander Amadi and Guinello Donacanora, entered the home of Mrs. Lilly Ross, Northern avenue, and at the point of a revolver demanded her money. She gave them $17. Just at that minute, a boarder, John Rowe, entered, he, too, looking into the muzzle of the 38-calibre weapon, and was forced to disgorge $14. While Donacanora kept the two covered, Amadi left with the money, remaining outside until his pal joined him.

Mrs. Ross telephoned police headquarters two blocks away. Getting a description, Donacanora was seen by the chief sergeant and one of the constables, who were driving. Sergt. Watkins, jumping from the rig, declared him arrested. The Italian apparently acquiesced, but suddenly drew his revolver. Watkins jumped for him and pinioned his arms, but the Italian fired, the powder burning the officer's fingers and the bullet passing between the chief and the constable, so close that the powder from the discharge scorched their eyes. Amadi was captured yesterday morning by Port Arthur Police Chief McLellan at his boarding-house in Water street. Amadi made a grab for his weapon on the dresser, but the chief was too quick but had a desperate struggle with him.

Dover, England, Jan. 31 — A tremendous storm is sweeping the English channel and the strait of Dover to-day. A French vessel was wrecked on the sands, and all the crew perished. Cremated In Caboose.

Thamesford, Jan. 31.—Robtert Lane, a Canadian Pacific brakeman, was burned to death in his caboose which took fire yesterday afternoon after being wrecked. The train on which Lane was running west, stopped at the station here for orders, and while the conductor was inside, another train, also bound west, crashed into the rear end of Lane's train. The brakeman was caught in the debris and burned to death before the fire brigade of the village could rescue him. The car in front of the caboose was also burned. The station took fire twice and the brigade, which had only buckets to work with, had a hard time saving it. Lane leaves a widow in Stratford.

TO REFORM THE SENATE

Commons Agrees as to Desirability of Change.

Sir Wilfrid Ready to Entertain a Good Scheme.

Ottawa, Jan. 31.—For the third successive time during the present Parliament the resolution of A. E. Lancaster (Lincoln), for the abolition of the Senate, was defeated in the House of Commons. The debate lasted for nearly five hours, with the result that every speaker, including Sir Wilfrid Laurier, admitted that there was need for reform in the Upper Chamber.

Mr. Lancaster alone seemed resolved on total abolition, contending that the Imperial Parliament would serve the purpose of a second chamber for the Dominion. Sir Wilfrid did not agree with this, as it would impose the will of Imperial Parliament on that of Canadian people, as expressed through their representative. W. F. Maclean (South York) said the life term should cease, that the Senatorial term should be, says, six years; that some Senators should be appointed by the Provincial Legislature and other by the Government.

A. E. Lancaster, in moving the resolution, said that had the fathers of Confederation realized the progress Canada was destined to make in the next four decades, they would not have decided on a second chamber. They thought it would be a safeguard against the passage of ill-advised legislation, and provided it as a "cooling" place for dangerous enactments.

The Senate was supposed to exist to correct bad laws passed by the Commons and to protect minorities. As all Canadian legislation has to be passed upon by the home Government, the necessary protection could be given by that body. Beside the member of the Commons, being member of an elective chamber, are more directly responsible, and are more likely to protect their interests than the appointed members of the Senate.

Mr. Lancaster then proceeded to argue that the Senate fails in its duty to protect minorities. He instanced his bill to protect level crossings.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in taking up the defence of the Second Chamber, pointed out that this was the third session in which the member for Lincoln had introduced the resolution, and he hoped that next year he would present some tangible plan.

The remedy of disallowance by the Imperial Government, which Mr. Lancaster proposed, would be far worse than no check at all on legislation. Certainly it would not improve the relations between Canada and the Mother Country.

"Would my hon. friend take the stand as a check upon the Province of Ontario that we ought to disallow the legislation of that province?"

He was in favor of bicameral system of legislation, and thought a reformed Senate, partly nominative and partly appointive, would suit the purpose.

Dr. Sproule was of very much the same opinion as the Premier in regard to the Upper House.

Hon. George E. Foster quoted from Liberal newspapers to show that a demand for the reform of the Senate was general. He pointed out that there were only 20 Conservatives in the Upper House, out of a membership of 87, which was absurd. Soon there would be none. The whole difficulty, he said, was in two questions —mode of appointment and tenure of office. A strong committee of both Houses should be appointed, make a thorough examination and report to the Government their plan of reform.

REEVE IS HOIST BY HIS OWN PETARD IN GRAFT INQUIRY

HON. DR. REAUME.

Who is in London on behalf of Ontario's commercial trade with Britain.

Man Who Started the Investigation is Pilloried —Handled $10,000 Without Accounting for It.

Woodstock, Jan. 31.—The Oxford County graft enquiry has given human interest a feast.

Sam M. Fleet, reeve of Ingersoll, who was one of the foremost in the agitation for a Government inspection into graft rumors that have been rife in the county, was himself dragged into the mire on a charge of having handled nearly $10,000 of the county's money for which, it is declared, he gave no detailed accounting.

Judge Sinkle will be put on the witness stand in the morning to clear his skirts of allegations of irregularities while an arbitrator on the sale of a toll road to the county. He was not well enough to go on the stand yesterday.

E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., chief crown investigator, was also called upon to vindicate himself and the crown concerning rumors around here that he had entered into a secret agreement to call his dogs off of M. T. Buchanan, "county boss" and ex-warden, who was accredited with several charges of taking graft.

Mr. Johnston was white with rage when the court opened yesterday afternoon.

"It is said in Woodstock, my lord," he announced, "that some agreement has been entered into between Mr. Buchanan and me. That is absolutely false, and I wish it understood that we are ready to investigate all matters that should be investigated, and if they are not investigated it will be the fault of the people of this county who brought us here, in not coming forward with their information. Anything they think should be looked into will be investigated, as I have announced several times.

Later on in the proceedings, Mr. Johnston startled the crowded court room by calling upon Sam. M. Fleet, reeve of Ingersoll, who was chairman of the committee which petitioned the Government for an investigation and hired detectives to trace up cases and seek out facts for probing.

Judge Snider announced that it was charged that Fleet had, in the past three years spent upwards of $10,000 on good roads in Ingersoll, for which no accounting was given.

Mr. Johnston wanted witness to explain how much of the county's money was entrusted to him during the years of 1908, 1909 and 1910.

Fleet fumbled amongst some slips of paper, but could not make his estimates tally with the county check books, which accredited him with $3.023 in 1908, $3,255.18 in 1909, and $3,100 in 1910, a total of $9,377.18. Impatiently crown counsel broke in on his fumblings:

"You have talked a good deal about this investigation? You have taken the liberty of saying that Mr. Buchanan and myself had came to an agreement."

"Er—well—"

"Have you any evidence to bear it out?"

"No."

"Be a little more careful how you couple my name and Mr. Buchanan's after this."

"Now, sir, have you any evidence concerning any of these alleged graft cases that the crown hasn't gone into?"

"No."

Recurring to the $10,000 expenditure for which no accounting was given, witness told Mr. Johnston that he had no statement to show when or how the money was received, but counsel could learn that by scanning the county checks.

"You had only to pay $126 in June; why did you draw out $350?"

"We paid other bills."

"Got the receipts?"

"No."

"And you carried that money in your pocket?"

"Yes."

"With no bank account, no check-book."

"No."

"Didn't Mr. Buchanan ask you for an accounting, which you refused to give?"

"I wouldn't account to anyone but the county council."

"Is your account audited by the county?"

"No, because it cost the county $60 to audit the six or seven towns, and they decided not to do it."

Judge Snider: "Well, well, no wonder they have rumors here."

At this point the crown called all the other members of the committee

CONGRATULATED NEW GOVERNOR

Best Wishes to Connaught on His Appointment.

London, Jan. 31.—The Lord Mayor at the Guildhall banquet, referring to the Duke of Connaught's appointment, said they had all read the announcement with the keenest interest. Whilst their first feelings were one of regret, their loss, great though it was, would be a corresponding gain to Canada, and they congratulated the Dominion their good fortune.

Among the guests were Lord Strathcona and the agent-general from Canada.

The duke in the course of his speech at the Guildhall said it would shortly be his pride to be closely, he hoped affectionately, associated with the Dominion of Canada.

Ottawa, Jan. 31.—The announcement was made yesterday that Earl Grey will take his official departure from Canada about the latter end of August, crossing the incoming Governor-General, H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, as is customary, in mid-ocean.

Three Hundred Killed.

Manila, Jan, 31—Latest Government reports confirm the previous report that 300 persons have been killed by the earthquakes and eruption of Mt. Taal.

Five villages were obliterated and three partially destroyed by a 12-foot wave, which came soon after the four-foot wave that followed the earth shocks. Coincident with this a superheated blast from the volcano practically cremated those who escaped drowning.

Lemery and Taal are believed to have been totally destroyed.

Wellesley Inquest.

Berlin, Ont., Jan. 31.—The inquest into the murder of Franz Lobinski at his lonely shack near Wellesley Village, a couple of weeks ago, was resumed at Wellesley yesterday afternoon. Little evidence of importance was brought out and Coroner Dr. Glaister decided that there was not sufficient to warrant bringing in a verdict, and again adjourned the inquest until Feb. 15.

McCURDY WILL TRY TO FLY BACK TO AMERICAN MAINLAND

Has Been Awarded the Prize for Flight—The Hero of the Hour in Cuban Capital.

Special to the Review.

Havana, January 31.—McCurdy, the Canadian aviator, is the hero of the day here, but he takes it very coolly and quietly. The aviation tournament is on and he is the central figure in it. McCurdy stated that he might make the effort to fly back to Key West from Havana and is being urged to make the attempt.

The newspaper which offered an $8,000 prize for the flight has decided to award it to McCurdy even though the flight was not quite accomplished.

The feat of flying one hundred miles over the sea is a very remarkable one. McCurdy is the first man to sail out of sight of land in an aeroplane.

The cause of McCurdy's failure to make the last ten miles was caused by lack of lubricating oil for the machinery, forcing him to descend to the water.

Kipling's Father Dead.

The elder Kipling won considerable renown in his profession as an architectural sculptor and illustrator. He illustrated a number of his son's books.

HYDRO POWER FAILS LONDON

Two Big Plants Close Down—Insulator Broke.

London, Ont., Jan. 31.—London yesterday was without electric power so far as the hydro-electric is concerned, and two of the biggest plants, McClary's and White's, have been obliged to partially close down. The street lighting system was out of commission most of Sunday night. Engineers say the trouble was caused by breaks in the insulators, one at St. Mary's and one at Stratford.

By the end of this year, the Ottawa dress artistes ought to be able to retire with a comfortable fortune.

THE FRUIT GROWERS

The fruit growers of the Niagara peninsula have a strong case to present against the action of the government in making fruit one of the free trade items. It means the practical ruination of the fruit business of Canada, one which has been built up after many years of laborious effort and expense. It will bear very hard on the Niagara peninsula and the fruit men, most of whom are strong Reformers, naturally feel very much aggrieved at the step decided on by Mr. Fielding.

A deputation of five hundred or a thousand growers will be hurried to Ottawa to protest against the killing of one of Canada's great industries. Had the duty been removed on all fruits that Canada does not produce, there would have been nothing expressed, but satisfaction, but the arrangement means the taking of the Canadian market by the California fruit-growers, and the relegation of the Canadian grower to a secondary place both in his own country and the United States.

The fact of the matter is:—Canada cannot alter that agreement now without violating the entire document. Many Canadian interests will be hurt, if it goes through, but what of that? Is not the Laurier Government getting down to its pet free trade theories?

THE DUKE'S COMING

The official announcement of the coming of the Duke of Connaught sets at rest all doubts as to whether Canada is to have a taste of royalty or not. We believe that Canadians as a whole will be glad the Duke is coming, marking as it does, a radical departure in the relation of Canada to Britain. We believe also that the announcement was made now BECAUSE OF A DESIRE TO REMIND CANADA OF HER BRITISH CONNECTION, when she is about to plunge into a deal that will estrange her ultimately both in a business and a sentimental sense.

That the Duke will act as Canada's Governor-Generals have always conducted themselves no one who knows the Duke or the habit of British royalty will be inclined to doubt. The Duke will not hold royal court at Ottawa. There will be no flunkeyism, no toadying, none of the pageantry of royalty, unless the people of Ottawa themselves lose their heads and run wild.

The Duke of Connaught's mission apparently will be to bind the British tie closer, through the presence of a prince of the royal blood; and at a time when the government and a large number of its people, are making ready to loosen that tie, the appointment comes none too soon.

Some day in this century may see the seat of royalty for the empire at Ottawa, but that will never be, when Canadians deliberately set to work to destroy the imperial connection, in favor of close relations and perhaps union with the United States.

Welcome to Connaught! May he so conduct himself in relation to people of this country that he will be the strongest link in the chain of imperialism; that he will give such an impetus to Canada's desire to create further empire bonds, that there can be no doubt as to Canada's permanent connection with the greatest empire that has been.

THE HYDRO-PROSPECT

The Financial Post has been making an investigation into the way the municipalities in the hydro-electric chain are likely to figure out with their power supply. It charges that in nearly every case the municipalities have contracted for far more power than there is any demand for, or any market for, and that the figures based on the contract will be found to work out as an impossibility.

It says that in London, although the municipality has made a lower rate than the one existing, the deficit in a year, after making generous provision for a good market, will amount to $40,000, and that the price must go back to the old figure, the new one being commercially impossible. Stratford has contracted for 1,000 h.p. with a total market available of 300 h.p.; Galt has asked for 1,200 h.p. and there is not a market for more than 250 h.p. at the outside. Preston has contracted for 600 h.p. (with 200 h.p. now being used. Waterloo has contracted to take 685 h.p. and the present market is not over 150 h.p.

The result of the Post's investigation shows that only three or four of the municipalities taking power can use the amount contracted for, and the others will have to pay for far more than they use or break the contract. Inasmuch as the commission has got to pay the Ontario Power Company for 75 per cents of the total quantity of power called for, and many of the municipalities will not use 25 per cent. of the quantity contracted for, and on which the estimate of cost was based, it looks as if the commission would have to make good the difference. It has been stated that the cities can break their contracts, if not satisfied, and with a big annual deficit in the operating of the distributing plant, such as some of them face, the outcome will be of interest. It will be noticed that if this is true, the millions spent by the commission and municipalities will not bring as profitable a result as it should. Peterborough has not electric power from the commission, but it will watch with keen interest how the scheme actually works out from the municipal standpoint.

THE PREFERENCE

An Inquirer wants to know what becomes of the British preference on the articles which Mr. Fielding now proposes to admit free from the United States. The query is quite in order, its point being obvious. If we admit certain classes of goods free from the United States, can we admit them from Britain under any greater advantage?

Mr. Fielding, in the House, said that the British preference could be safely left in the hands of those who created it. A perusal of the classes of products in which the United States gets our best terms—as good as we can extend to any nation—shows that the preferential idea gets a serious blow from the Laurier Government. Laurier is going a long way toward the old Liberal fetish of free trade—as far as the circumstances of the country will permit

An examination of the imports from Britain in the classes of products which now are wiped off the preferential list, and put on the free list with all, shows that we imported in 1910 nearly a million dollars' worth from Britain under the preferential arrangement. Provisions, such as butter, cheese, eggs, lard and meat, vegetables and fruits, are the chief of these. Of course, our imports from Britain in these classes are comparatively small, our export trade being much heavier. But the fact that the preference even on these has been killed by reciprocity, leads to the well-grounded fear that the list will be added to, as the United States influences permeate Canadian commercial affairs more strongly, and that some day, so powerful will it be, that our preferential tariff with Britain will become a thing of the past. In that case, of course, commercial and political union with the United States is no spectre, but a grim reality.

EDITORIAL NOTES

An item in the Free Press Winnipeg, tells of a man named Prince, inventing a wind machine thirty years ago. And we are still at it.

The news that Lloyd-George is suffering from a serious affection of the throat, which will impair his vitality and perhaps cripple his political career, will be a matter of regret. Many people may not agree with his political views, but one cannot help admiring the energy, the ability which has placed him in the front rank of British statesmen.

To a Canadian, Aviator McCurdy, falls the honor of making the longest aeroplane sea flight. McCurdy was not heard of in the aerial navigation world to any extent, before, but his feat makes him the new object of attention. You can't keep the Canadian down when he once gets started.

The population of Calgary is estimated at 50,000, and is increasing at the rate of from 12,000 to 15,000 a year.

WOMAN'S THOUGHTLESSNESS

A discussion arose recently in regard to the practice of some ladies of this city, going to the larger cities to do their shopping or patronizing the mail order houses. One of the members of the group, while defending the ladies against any wrongful intent, stated that women did more harm through thoughtlessness than men did from deliberate malice. There seems to be considerable foundation for this contention, and certainly if our fair friends gave as much thought to the matter as they should, they would appreciate the far reaching effects of their actions.

It is strange that women will give largely of their time, energy and money towards educational and charitable institutions, with a public spirit and disinterestedness that is highly commendable, and yet will thoughtlessly do their community sufficient harm to more than offset their good work in other directions. Yet it is true that many of the evils which these ladies work so assiduously to overcome, are directly traceable to this pernicious habit of dealing with mail order houses.

If there is poverty or distress, the ladies will bestir themselves. For the sake of sweet charity they will do wonders. They will organize bazaars and patronize them, paying ridiculous prices for things they do not want or at least do not need. They will waste sufficient money in this way to buy many useful articles from our local merchants. They will expend valuable time and energy, and in the end they have accomplished what?—They have simply helped to partially undo the mischief that was caused by their own thoughtlessness and mistaken frugality. If the same amount of vital force that was expended in these charitable schemes was directed into other channels, our whole community would be benefited, morally, physically and spiritually. We emphatically state that much of this charity is necessitated by the worse than foolish habit of discriminating against our own town and our own neighbors. Our friends can surely see that if the benefit of their purchases remained with the local merchants, these merchants would be in a better position to contribute to local institutions and also would be better able to offer employment to many of the young people who have at present to seek other fields.

Putting the matter into plain language, the women who do not patronize the merchants of the town where their living is made, are blind to their own best interests. The fathers, brothers or husbands of these women are making their livelihoods here in Peterborough for themselves, and those dependent upon them, and if some of these men are forced out of employement on account of lack of business, hard times, etc., the respective wives, daughters and sisters are apt to complain of things in general and this town in particular. How many of them will look into the matter sufficiently to realize that they themselves are partially responsible for the lack of business?

If each reader of this article will give the matter careful thought we believe there would be a very great improvement in local business conditions. Do not wait for some person else to act. Do your duty as you see it. Deal at home.

A Creston, B.C., boy, shot a cougar weighing 100 pounds two miles from the town.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Reciprocity wheat selling at Winnipeg to-day without limit had a depressing effect on the market here. Assertions were made that Canadian traders loaded themselves with the grain, anticipating a tariff agreement, but found no buyers except at a sacrifice. Closing prices showed a net loss of 1c to 1⅛c to 1¼c to 1⅜c. Corn finished ⅛c to ⅜c up to ⅜c down. Oats off ⅛c to ¼c, and provisions at 5c decline to 15c advance.

Wheat and corn futures closed in Liverpool on Monday unchanged to ⅛d lower.

Woodward bought 300 cattle for Swift & Co. as follows: 115 steers for London, 1314 lbs. average weight, at $6.05 average price, or a range of $5.90 to $6.20; also 16 bulls, 1700 to 1900 lbs., at $5.20 to $5.50. Hogs.

W. J. Johnston reports prices as follows: Selects, fed and watered, $7.40 and $7.05 to $7.10, to drovers for hogs, f.o.b., cars at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Jan. 30.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Jan. 28 were 1000 cattle, 925 sheep and lambs, 3475 hogs and 175 calves, while the offerings this morning amounted to 800 cattle, 400 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 75 calves.

A feature of the trade was the stronger undertone to market for cattle on account of smaller run, and prices scored advance of ¼c per pound. The quality of stock coming forward is better than it has been of late, as in most cases it is well finished, which drovers claim that they have to pay more money for in the country, but, as the supplies that are being fed are larger than a year ago, and as the export demand is somewhat limited for them at present, the indications are that values will not go much higher, if any.

The attendance of buyers was fairly large, but owing to the advance in prices noted above the demand was rather slow, and purchases were principally in small lots to fill actual wants, consequently trade on the whole was only fair. Choice steers sold at 6¼c to 6½c; good at 6c to 6¼c; fairly good at 5¾c to 5⅞c; fair at 5c to 5½c, and the lower grades at 4½c to 4¾c per pound. There were a fair number of good to choice heavy bulls offered, which brought 5c to 5¼c per pound.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for hogs, and prices since this day a week ago show a decline of 20c to 25c per 100 lbs. This is attributed to the fact that supplies were somewhat in excess of the actual requirements, but at the above reduction the demand from packers was ample to absorb all offerings, and sales of selected lots were made at $7.90 to $8 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. The impression here is that prices will not go much higher than they are at present.

The tone of the market for sheep and lambs was steady on account of the small supplies. The demand was fair for small lots, and sales of sheep were made at 4½c to 4¾c, and lambs at 6c to 6¼c per lb. Calves were scarce and in demand at fair prices. Choice stock sold at 5½c, and the commoner ones at 4c to 5c per pound.

The Perfume of The Lady In Black

By GASTON LEROUX Author of "The Mystery of the Yellow Room."

Copyright, 1909, by Brentano's.

And I began a wild goose chase after Rouletabille. But I appeared at the station without him. Neither at his home nor at the office of his paper nor at the Cafe du Barreau, where the necessities of his work often called him at this hour of the day, could I lay my hand on him.

There was three minutes yet before the departure of the train. But no Rouletabille. We were all so grieved and moreover so surprised that we remained on the platform, looking at Mme. Darzac, without thinking to wish her a pleasant journey. She cast a long glance upon the quay, and at the moment that the speed of the train began to accelerate, certain now that she was not to see her "little friend" again, she threw me an envelope from the car window.

"For him," she said.

And almost as though moved by an irresistible impulse, her face wearing an expression of something that resembled terror, she added in a tone so strange that I could not help recalling the horrible speeches of Brignolles:

"Au revoir, my friends—or adieu."

CHAPTER II.

Rouletabille's Revelation.

ROULETABILLE had been treated by the Stangersons and by M. Darzac as their deliverer, and especially since Mathilde had left the sanitarium, in which for several months her shattered nervous system had needed and received the most assiduous care—since the daughter of the famous professor had been able to understand the extraordinary part which the boy had played in the drama that without his help would inevitably have ended in the bitterest grief for all those whom she loved—since she had read by the light of her restored reason the shorthand reports of the trial, at which Rouletabille appeared at the last moment like some hero of a miracle—she had surrounded the youngster with an affection little less than maternal. She interested herself in everything which concerned him. She begged for his confidence. She wanted to know more about him than I knew and perhaps more even than he knew himself. She had shown an unobtrusive but strong curiosity in regard to the mystery of his birth, of which all of us were ignorant and on which the young man had kept silence with a sort of savage pride.

I returned from the Lyons station still pondering over the numerous fantasies, the strange caprices of Rouletabille during the last two years. But nothing that entered my mind could have warned me of what had happened or, still less, have explained it to me. Where was Rouletabille? I went to his rooms in the Boulevard St. Michel, telling myself that if I did not find him there I could at least leave Mme. Darzac's letter. What was my astonishment when I entered the building to see my own servant carrying my bag. I asked him to tell me what he was doing and why, and he replied that he did not know—that I must ask M. Rouletabille.

The boy had been, as it turned out, while I had been seeking him everywhere (except naturally in my own house), in my apartments in the Rue de Rivoli. He had ordered my servant to take him to my rooms and had made the man fill a valise with everything necessary for a trip of three or four days. Then he had directed the man to bring the bag in about an hour to the hotel in the "Boul' Mich."

I made one bound up the stairs to my friend's bedchamber, where I found him packing in a tiny hand satchel an assortment of toilet articles, a change of linen and a nightshirt. Until this task was ended I could obtain no satisfaction from Rouletabille, for in regard to the little affairs of everyday life he was extremely particular and despite the modesty of his means succeeded in living very well, having a horror of everything which could be called bohemian. He finally deigned to announce to me that "we were going to take our Easter vacation" and that since I had nothing to do and the Epoch had granted him a three days' holiday we couldn't do better than to go and take a short rest at the seaside. But my silence did not disturb Rouletabille in the least, and, taking my valise in one hand, his satchel in the other, he hustled me down the stairs and pushed me into a hack which awaited us before the door of the hotel. Half an hour later we found ourselves in a first class carriage of the Northern railway, which was carrying us toward Trepot by way of Amiens. As we entered the station he said:

"Why don't you give me the letter that you have for me?"

I gazed at him in amazement. He had guessed that Mme. Darzac would be greatly grieved at not seeing him before her departure and would write to him. He had been positively malicious. I answered:

"Because you don't deserve it."

And I gave him a good scolding, to which he interposed no defense. He did not even try to excuse himself, and that made me angrier than ever. Finally I handed him the letter. He took it, looked at it and inhaled its fragrance. As I sat looking at him curiously he frowned, trying, as I could see, to repress some strong feeling. His face betrayed the fact that he was suffering profoundly.

"Well?" I said. "Aren't you going to read the letter?"

"No," he replied; "not here; when we are yonder."

We arrived at Trepot in the blackest night that I remember after six hours of an interminable trip and in wretched weather. The wind from the sea chilled us to the bone and swept over the deserted quay with weird sounds of lamentation. I walked behind Rouletabille, who made his way with difficulty in this damp obscurity. However, he appeared to know the place, for we finally arrived at the door of a queer little inn which remained open during the early spring for the fishermen. Rouletabille demanded supper and a fire, for we were half starved and half frozen.

"Ah, now, my friend," I said when we were settled after a fashion, "will you condescend to explain to me what we have to come to look for in this place aside from rheumatism and pneumonia?"

But Rouletabille at this moment coughed and turned toward the fire to warm his hands again.

"Oh, yes," he answered; "I am going to tell you. We have come to look for the perfume of the Lady in Black."

This phrase gave me so much to think about that I scarcely slept at all that night.

Early in the morning I was awakened by a changed Rouletabille. His face was distorted with grief as he handed me a telegram which had come to him at the Bourg, having been forwarded from Paris in accordance with the orders that he had left.

Here is the dispatch:

> Come immediately without losing a minute. We have given up our trip to the orient and will join M. Stangerson at Mentone at the home of the Rances at Rochers Rouges. Let this message remain a secret between us. It is not necessary to frighten any one. You may pretend that you are on your vacation or make any other excuse that you like, but come. Telegraph me general delivery, Mentone. Quickly, quickly; I am waiting for you. Yours in despair,
>
> DARZAC.

"Well," I cried, leaping out of bed, "it doesn't surprise me!"

"You never believed that he was dead?" demanded Rouletabille in a tone filled with emotion.

"I never felt quite sure of it," I answered. "It was too useful for him to pass for dead to permit him to hesitate at the sacrifice of a few papers, however important those were which were found upon the victim of the Dordogne disaster. But what is the matter with you, my boy? You look as though you were going to faint. Are you ill?"

Rouletabille had let himself into a chair. It was in a voice which trembled like that of an old man that he confided to me that even while the marriage ceremony of our friends was going on he had become possessed with a strong conviction that Larsan was not dead. But after the ceremony was at an end he had felt more secure. It seemed to him that Larsan would never have permitted Mathilde Stangerson to speak the vows that gave her to Robert Darzac if he were really alive. Larsan would only have had to show his face to stop the marriage.

Wiping the perspiration from his forehead, Rouletabille remarked:

"Sainclair, can you ever forget Larsan's eyes? Do you remember, 'The presbytery has not lost its charm or the garden its brightness?'"

I pressed the boy's hand. It was burning hot. I tried to calm him, but he paid no attention to anything I said.

"And it was after the wedding—just a few hours after the wedding—that he chose to appear!" he cried. "There isn't anything else to think, is there, Sainclair?"

"Oh, M. Darzac is not a child to be frightened at bogies. But we must hope—we must hope, mustn't we, Sainclair, that he is mistaken? Oh, it isn't possible that such a fearful thing can be true. Oh, Sainclair, it would be too terrible!"

I had never seen Rouletabille so deeply agitated, even at the time of the most terrible events at the Glandier. He arose from his chair and walked up and down the room, casting aside any object which came in his way and repeating over and over: "No, no! It's too terrible, too terrible!"

"But, my dear boy, you frighten me. What is there you know that you have not told me?"

"I am going to tell you. The situation is horrible. Why didn't that villain die?"

"And, after all, how do you know that he is not dead?"

"Look here, Sainclair—don't talk—be quiet, please. You see, if he is alive I wish to God that I were dead!"

"If he is alive you must live to defend that poor woman."

"Ah, that is true! You have said the only thing that makes me want to live. To defend her! I will not think of myself again."

And Rouletabille smiled, a smile which almost frightened me. I threw my arms around him and begged him to tell me why he was so terrified, why he spoke of his own death and why he smiled so strangely.

Rouletabille looked down and steadily into my eyes. Then he said:

"You shall know all, Sainclair. You shall know as much as I do, and when you do you will be as unhappy as I am, for you are kind and you are fond of me."

Then he straightened back his shoulders as though he had already cast off a burden and pointed in the direction of the railway.

"We shall leave here in an hour," he said. "There is no direct train from Eu to Paris in the winter. We shall not reach Paris until 7 o'clock. But that will give us plenty of time to pack our trunks and take the train that leaves the Lyons station at 9 o'clock for Marseilles and Mentone."

He did not ask my opinion on the course which he had laid out. He was taking me to Mentone, just as he had brought me to Trepot. He was well aware that in the present crisis I could refuse him nothing.

I thought of the perfume of the Lady in Black, but I kept silence. He had said he would tell me all. He led me out to the jetty. The wind was still blowing a gale. Rouletabille closed his eyes as if in a dream.

"It was here," he said, "that I last saw her."

He looked down at the stone bench beside which we were standing.

• • • • • • •

In another half hour we were at Eu. We alighted, and the horse and carriage stood motionless upon the street. The driver had gone into a saloon. We entered the cool shades of a high Gothic church which faced upon the square. The young reporter gazed sorrowfully at the square battlements of the city hall, which extended toward us the hostile lance of its soiled and weather beaten flag; at the Cafe de Paris, at the silent houses, at the shops and the library. Was it there that the boy had bought those first new books for which the Lady in Black had paid?

"Nothing has changed."

He drew me into a little street and stopped again in front of a tiny temple of the Jesuit style. After having pushed open a little low door Rouletabille bade me enter, and we found ourselves inside a beautiful mortuary chapel.

"The college chapel," whispered Rouletabille.

There was no person in the chapel. We crossed the room hastily. On the left wall Rouletabille tapped very gently a kind of drum, which gave out a queer, muffled sound.

"We are in luck," he said. "We are inside the college, and the concierge has not seen me. He would remember me."

"What harm would that have done?"

Just at that moment a man with bare head and a bunch of keys at his side passed through the room, and Rouletabille drew me into the shadow.

GREATEST CURE FOR RHEUMATISM IS "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

"I Honestly Believe It," says Mr. Mills

Knowlton, P.Q., Oct. 12th, 1909.

For many years I suffered from severe Rheumatism and the attacks were very distressing and prevented me from doing my ordinary work.

I tried many remedies and physicians' treatments but nothing seemed to do me much good, and I was becoming very anxious for fear I would become a permanent cripple from Rheumatism.

I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and this medicine has entirely cured me, and I honestly believe that "Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest Rheumatism Cure in the world.

E. E. MILLS,
Asst. P.M., Knowlton, Que.

"Fruit-a-tives" not only strengthens and heals the kidneys—but also regulates the bowels, improves the action of the skin—and thus keeps the blood pure and rich and free from uric acid which causes Rheumatism.

"Fruit-a-tives"—the great fruit medicine—is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50; trial size, 25c; or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

A. R. Johnston, who recently died in Nanaimo, had lived over 80 years in the province.

McCurdy Breaks Record.

Havana, June 31.—J. A. D. McCurdy, the Canadian aviator, set a new record yesterday in over-the-water flights, covering a distance of close to a hundred miles, from Key West to within ten miles of Havana, when, from a slight accident he was compelled to drop into the sea. There he remained, his bi-plane floating by pontoons, until the lifeboat of the torpedo boat destroyer Terry picked him up.

With Morro Castle scarcely a dozen miles away, his aeroplane rushing at the rate of fifty miles an hour at an altitude of 1,000 feet, a break in a small part of the engine, a ruptured crank case, permitting the escape of all the lubricating oil, necessitated McCurdy's immediate descent.

The intrepid aviator, when the sound of the engine told him something was wrong, instantly shut off the power. He descended rapidly, swinging steadily to the water and alighting as gracefully as a gull with outspread wings. The pontoons proved abundantly buoyant, McCurdy not even wetting his feet.

McCurdy was exactly two hours in the air, covering an estimated distance of about [illegible] miles. Besides breaking the over-sea record, this is the first instance of an aeroplane entirely out of sight of land.

STILL HAVE THEIR QUEUES

Local Chinamen Loath to Part With Pigtails

Many local Chinamen still retain their queus in spite of the imperial edict that permits of them cutting off their pigtails. It is only the more progressive sons of the Orient, who have relieved themselves of this adornment, which was years ago, when the Manchus conquered China, a sign of slavery and disgrace. After that it became a national custom.

"THE FOURTH ESTATE"

The Newspaper Play — A Great Success

THE NEWSPAPER PLAY—a great success.

The Grand Theatre announces for to-morrow evening, the vitally interesting and gripping newspaper play, "The Fourth Estate" which Liebler and Company are offering the present season.

"The Fourth Estate" tells the story of the efforts of a young and concientious managing editor of one of the big New York dailies, to reveal graft on the part of a Judge on the United States Bench, who sells his decisions to make big corporations. From the fact that the Judge, whom the young editor is fighting is the father of Brand's sweetheart, is developed a most absorbing love-story, and some of the most dramatic moments of the play. The third act, in which the managing editor puts aside his love for his duty to his paper and the public, and traps the judge and unearths his wrong doing is a scene of remarkable intensity, while the fourth and last act, which pictures the composing room, as is seen in any large daily, is one of the most massive scenes ever before attempted in detail. The cast is excellent, and evenly balanced, and the entertainment as a whole, is a most delightful one.

PETERBORO HIS HEADQUAATERS

Mr. J. E. Firth, representing the W. B. Hamilton Shoe Co., Toronto, has taken a lease of 364 Water street, Hopwood Block, which he will use as a permanent sample room for the convenience of his local trade, and may eventually carry a stock of staple lines as well. This should add to his already large trade in this district.

Citizens will notice that a gradual change has been made in the character of this building since it was acquired by Mr. Hopwood, the whole building being now occupied by wholesale firms, viz., The Novel-Ti, Ltd., wholesale neckwear; W. B. Hamilton Shoe Co. Toronto, wholesale shoes and rubbers; Hopwoods Limited, wholesale dry goods, etc. This shows that the wholesale trade has confidence in Peterborough as a distributing centre, and should prove a convenience to the retail trade in the district.

MISSIONARY TALK TO THE YOUNG PEOPLE

At Their Annual Rally at Knox Church Rev. H. R. Trumpour Elected President

The annual rally of the Young People's Societies of the various Churches of the city, in Knox Church last evening was well attended and encouraging to those in charge of the proceedings.

Every church was well represented by members from its society. Several of the ministers were present, and on the platform were Rev. J. G. Brown, chairman; Rev. J. B. Webb, and Rev. H. C. Priest, Secretary of the Young People's Forward Missionary Movement.

The main part of the program was the address of the Rev. Mr. Priest, but previous to this the annual election of officers was held with the following results.

President — Rev. H. R. Trumpour
Sec.-Treas. — W. G. Shiner, re-elected.

The Treasurer's report showed a balance on hand and Rev. J. G. Brown as chairman paid a tribute to the creditable work of the Treasurer.

Miss Robson contributed a solo entitled "The Ninety and Nine"

Rev. H. C. Priest, the speaker of the evening was next introduced.

Besides having a missionary theme on which to speak, he had the practical experience of several years of missionary labor in India. He stated that it gave him special pleasure to speak at the annual rally of the societies, having met so many of the members at the Conference at Whitby last summer.

In commencing his address the speaker said that there were many words used to characterise the age in which we live. Probably at no time has commercialism occupied such a place as it does to-day. Science also has achieved wonders and marvellous have been its discoveries. It might also be styled an age of etherealism, but one word that characterizes it more than any, was the word missionary. Never have the hosts of God realised the marvellous possibilities that lie before them. Men everywhere are going into the work. We should not get into the habit of thinking that missionary efforts are for the fathers and mothers alone, it should even more be the work of the young people. Scores of the Bible and other famous characters were imbued with missionary spirit early in life.

Judson at twenty, became devoted to its cause, Livingstone when only twenty, Joe. Chamberlain when nineteen, and Dr. Fobert when seventen.

Other example may be quoted at even very tender years, he said. These example all show that missions make a special appeal to youth.

Missions also appeal to us in view of the leadership under which the enterprise is undertaken. Strong leadership is required before we respond to any great movement. This missionary movement is under the strongest leadership, that of Jesus Christ, and the man who is indifferent to the call of missions, is indifferent to the call of Jesus Christ.

Missions also make a special appeal in view of the bigness of the undertaking. When we think that to-day one half of the people of the world are destitute of the opportunity, of saying whether they will accept Jesus Christ, the magnitude of the work yet to be done should come home to us strongly.

India for one example is rich in possibilities but the force to evangelize it is lamentably inadequate. The speaker, in conclusion, related to some very interesting experiences of his own in India.

MOTORMAN WAS UP AGAINST IT

Didn't Have the Heart to Run Over a Couple of Sheets

One street car motorman had more than the ice and snow to contend with yesterday, in his attempt to keep his car running on schedule time. After passing Antrim street on George, the passengers were treated to the comforts that come with a sudden stop and several ladies protested. But the motorman must have been a married man, for he refused to run over two bed sheets which had taken a hurried departure from the clothes-line and dropped as McCurdy did, in the wrong spot. And yet some women say a man hasn't got a heart.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF SPORT

GRILLERS CAME BACK AND WON OUT IN SECOND HALF

Captured District Honors in Defeating Cobourg 7-5—Were Two Behind in First Period—Fast Work Between the Nets.

McCurdy may in Cuba land, when next he tries a flight, the tariff bill may not go through, the Cannucks may not bite. Friend Dr. Cook may still hand out the dope on what I saw, and eastern pros. can run their league with hockey slow and raw. The sidewalk in the Court House Park, may not next year be laid, one hundred braves can ask the Chief that they a cop be made. The Trenton bunch may get a draw, the O.H.A. can say that both teams must replay that game with Parkie far away. Poor Renfrew may not win a game, at home or on the pike, and Ottawa can keep right on and beat who'er they like. The local sons from China's shores may cut their pigtails short, the curlers may work broom and stone, to-day's their day of sport. A thousand other things may pass, but here we mark the champs, the big noise on the list is this, THE KIDS ARE DISTRICT CHAMPS.

That's the title the local juniors won last night by coming back in the second half with a 4—2 score against them, and taking the contest with a final count of 7—5.

A HARD STRUGGLE

The honors were deserving after such an uphill fight. It was a great game of hockey. While team play was at a premium, there was that kind of work that goes to make up an interesting and exciting contest. Prospects weren't of the brightest for the Grillers at the finish of the first period when Cobourg lead with a 4—2 score, but strange things happen and the final result is only another example of the fact that a game is never lost or won before the gong sounds for the finish.

POOR PASSING

The Grillers were guilty of considerable slow work in that first half. The passing was at times very erratic, and the occasion didn't call for any such kind of play, for Cobourg were right on edge and out to win. They took every advantage of the dumb efforts of the locals and that accounts for the two goal lead when the time came for the rest.

COBOURG ROUTED

But it was a different story after the kids lined up again. Led by Jerry Coughlin, the team pulled together and chased the Cobourg crew to cover, tieing the score, and landing in front with two goals to the good.

NETMEN STARRED

The goaltenders had a great night. Both were in fine form, and only the difficult ones beat them. Peachy, to the visitors, had the greater number of shots to handle, and the manner in which he stopped and cleared was worth double admission. Several times he left his nets and spoiled a well meant play. Patterson, too, had his peepers open, and doing good service.

To the heady work of Heffernan and Reynolds is largely due the victory of the Grillers. When the line was working all to the bad in the first half, each was called upon to work overtime to block the aggressive plays of the opposing septette, and they more than made good. Their rushing was of the cyclonic order, and with a little more assistance from the line there would have been a larger number of tallies on this end of the fray.

CLEVER STICK WORK

It was in the second half that Coughlin shone. He had a hand a hand in the majority of them seven scores. His exhibition of stick handling left nothing to be desired and he left nothing to be desired, and he made every shot tell. Hall was not at his best at any stage of the game, but it was he who took the pass from Coughlin and sent his team ahead for the first time after Coughlin had tied the figures at 4—4, and again accepted the pass from Matthews to make the count 6—5 for the locals. McMartin had a busy session with his check, but managed to get away for shots which were, however, wide of the nets. Matthews played strong and consistent hockey at all times and never let slip an opportunity to combine with the rest of his mates.

With Gliddon and Freeman in centre—too—Cobourg has a fast pair. The former did the larger share of the work as Freeman fell back to point persistently. Gliddon had a long shot that was dangerous, and it was always a case of step lively when he cornered the puck.

The teams were:

GRILLERS.

Patterson.

Reynolds.

Heffernan.

Coughlin.

McMartin Hall Coughlin

—0—

Himman Gliddon Cunningham

Freeman.

Holmbeck.

Miles.

Peachy.

COBOURG

FIRST HALF.

Offsides were frequent after the teams were started and there wasn't much class to the play for the first few minutes. The play alternated and Holmbeck drew the first penalty for tripping Coughlin. Freeman was doing a lot of fast work for the visitors, and Peachy warmed up nicely between the flags. With a face-off at Cobourg goal, the puck couldn't be squeezed in, and after getting away to centre ice Gliddon sent a long shot which went high. After ten minutes of play Freeman took the first counter on a scoop from a face-off.

Everything was working smoothly for the Lakeshore seven, and they had it on the locals in more than one respect. Himman was sent to the fence for a rest. Peachy stopped too hard shots from McMartin and Matthews, and on the return Patterson sidetracked a hot one. Himman started the play that from which Gliddon scored the second goal.

Both Patterson and Peachy caught the house with their classy work, each preventing what appeared to be sure counters. Freeman was benched and was followed by Coughlin. The game was causing all kinds of excitement. Gliddon and Heffernan worked lonely rushes without avail. Heff and McMartin got away, but the former shot wide, Gliddon made it 3—0 for Cobourg on a board rush and side shot. Matthews came back with the first tally for his team, handling a pass from McMartin. In half a minute Gliddon beat Patterson with a long shot that slid under him. Miles took a penalty. Hall and Coughlin broke loose, the latter making the score stand

Cobourg 4, Peterborough 2.

SECOND HALF.

With Miles on the fence Gliddon opened for Cobourg with a long shot, which went wide. Matthews secured, carried the disc up through the crowd, passed to Coughlin, and the Grillers were only one behind. Hall missed a nice chance to tie up, but Coughlin was on the job and landed the rubber behind Peachy after a face-off. The visitors were on the run and couldn't stop. Reynolds and Heffernan were holding up their positions and getting away for rushes. Shot after shot was stopped by Peachy. Coughlin and Matthews combined for a wild shot. The Grillers jumped into the lead when Jerry landed one to Hall and the flag went up. Gliddon went off for getting Hall, who secured and rushed after Heffernan took a spill. After his return to the ice, he took the boards and tied up the game on a side shot.

Cobourg 5, Peterborough 5.

Heff got away nicely, but shot high. Coughlin took a rest for upsetting Freeman, and Holmbeck joined him for handing it to Matthews, who rushed and looked good for the nets. On the return Patterson was hurt. The next score went to Hall, who connected after a pass from Matthews. With a one goal lead the locals played safe for the rest of the game and took another score on Coughlin's shot.

SPORT TALK

It is only a question of time when the dangerous toe-hold will be barred from wrestling. Or else if it is allowed an asterisk will be placed before the name of every wrestling champion winning on the toe-hold, just the same way as they put an asterisk in front of boxers' records when they are made behind a wind shield. The toe-hold is the invention of Frank Gotch, and while not protected by patent, has earned him something over $200,000. But even Gotch himself admits it is a wicked affair — worse than the strangle hold. Wrestling at best is one of the most strenuous games in the category and doesn't require the use of the toe-hold to lift it from the mollycoddle class. Dr. Roller is but one of the brainy, thinking exponents of the game who believes the hold is doomed and that sooner or later it will pass into the discard to keep the strangle hold company. And not so many years ago the strangle hold was as permissible as is the toe-hold to-day. — Boston Post.

C.G.E. Tool Room Team Put Seven Counters Past Macafee

The Pillpounders were handed their first defeat of the season last night, when without the services of Ross at cover, they were goose egged by the C. G. E. Tool room, by a score of 7-0. The count at halftime was 3-0.

The Toolmakers, who are a fast aggregation were right in all the time. Fred. Heaslip refereed.

PUCKLAND

Saturday nights' game was the nineteenth occasion on which the Wanderers and Ottawa have come together. There have been many memorable contests in the eighteen games already played. The 5-5 tie in the Montreal Arena, on March 2, 1904 when the two teams had to a op playing at midnight was a warm affair. It was a Stanley Cup match, and when Wanderers were ordered to go to Ottawa to play it off they refused to do so. The trustees, therefore, awarded the cup to Ottawa.

The O. H. A. sub-committee will decide the protest of the Trenton Club at a meeting this afternoon.

At the meeting of the directors, held in the City Hall yesterday afternoon, he persisted in his refusal and despite the statement of those connected with the mine, who declare that he has turned over a written resignation, it has not yet been dealt with, and the reason of his refusal is that he wants to have it agreed that no move will be made to sell the mine, which he believes will retrieve his losses if worked without first consulting either himself or his counsel, H. HAVELOCK HAPPENINGS

Havelock, Jan. 29.—Swift & Co., here, are busy at the present time installing the season's supply of ice at the local icing station. The work which occupies generally about three weeks, was started about two weeks ago, but has been affected by the conditions of the weather.

The supply of ice this year is being brought from Norwood as has been usual, the harvest being secured from the pond at that village. About 30 men are employed at this point in the work of cutting and loading the ice on cars. The first necessary in the work, is to remove all snow from the top of the ice that is to be cut. The ice is cut into sections by means of an ice plow which cuts downward into the ice about six inches. By this method the ice is mapped out into squares of about twenty inches. When this has been done, the ice is easily broken off into cakes by means of a sharp iron bar. A thickness of about 12 inches is preferred and work is started at cutting as soon as this thickness has been reached.

The next part is the loading of the ice on to sleighs for transference to the cars. For this purpose, one end of a skid is placed in the water and the other end on a platform on the level with the sleigh. Hooks are fastened on the cakes and they are drawn by a horse up the skid on to the sleigh. Each sleigh load carries about 24 cakes of ice. When the cars are reached, the sleighs are drawn up on a raised platform, so that the sleigh will be on a level with the car floor. The cakes are placed in the car, two layers deep. The men employed at loading ice at Norwood must be strong and rugged and able to bear the wintry blasts. The wind cuts down across the ice and the temperature on cold days, is far below the duck egg mark and the men who stand with an ice tongs or bar in their hands do not want to be any thin blooded individuals.

When the cars arrive at Havelock they are placed one at a time along side of a platform from which ice slides run around the back of the building. Five or six cakes are drawn at a time up the slides and around the back of the building and placed in the icehouse. As the surface of ice gradually raises, the ice is run on a higher slide as there are five of them going up as high as the top of the building. The cakes are placed in the store room side by side, without packing of any kind and are allowed to freeze together, in which condition they remain until distributed by the ice men when summer arrives.

There are between 30 and 40 men employed at the ice house in winter during the storing of ice. Six men are required to place the ice on the slide to be drawn up. Then there are men who drive the horses which supply the power for taking the ice up. Other men are required on the gallery to push the ice into the rooms and several men inside the room to place the cakes. When the weather is mild, the ice sticks on the slides and a smaller number of cakes have to be taken at a time and it also takes a large number of men to handle the ice on the galleries.

The ice house is divided into six rooms. The walls are about two feet thick and filled with fine sawdust. Ventilators are placed in the roof, so as to allow the warm air to pass off in the summer. When each room has been filled to the top, the ice is covered with a coating of marsh hay, the doors are sealed up, and the ice will keep all summer if required.

Between 250 and 300 cars are stored at the local ice house each season, which amounts to about 54,000 cakes so a slight idea of the amount of the congealed moisture used each year can be formed.

KEENE NEWS

Special to the Review.

Keene, Jan. 30.—Two rinks from Keene intend to attend the curling bonspiel in Peterborough on Tuesday, the 31st inst.

Our village blacksmiths are extra busy horseshoeing at present on account of the hard icy roads.

La grippe is very prevalent in this vicinity. It certainly is a harvest for the doctors.

The Foresters' ball and oyster supper will be held here on Friday night, February 10th.

We tender our congratulations to Mr. Walter Hope. It's a boy.

Mr. Malcolm McIntyre was in the village on Wednesday last on business.

Mr. Rolly Ogg had a very exciting experience on Saturday last while on his way home with a load of chop. His horses became unmanageable, and travelling at a furious rate, Rolly fell off the load head first into a snow bank about five feet deep. After extricating himself from the snow bank he discovered the horses lying in the ditch a short distance from him. Timely help arrived on the scene and helped him out of his trouble. Luckily neither man or horses received any serious injuries. We advise Rolly to invest in a pair of curb bits.

Our enterprising lumber merchant, Mr. William Wedlock, has at present several gangs of men engaged cutting logs. He has several teams engaged hauling the logs to his saw mill.

that demanded the investigation and asked them if they were satisfied, or if they could suggest anything further that required looking into. D. R. Stauffer, William Thompson, William Appell and John Kneal successively said the enquiry had worked out beneficially and satisfactorily to the county.

Sidney C. Bartlo of Ingersoll swore that he got $65 from Fleet for letting the water out of his pond so that a bridge could be built. The feat was performed in July, and he did not get the money until late in November, and the check was dated ahead. He had asked for the money several times.

What gave rise to the continuance of the investigation was an allegation that a cheque for $600 was handed them while the board of arbitrators were sitting on the Ingersoll-Port Burwell road deal. It was learned that a check for $600 had been issued by W. A. Dowler and V. A. Sinclair, lawyers of Tillsonburg, who were acting for the road company. The check was payable in cash. Neither Dowler nor Sinclair could recall who got that money. George M. Neilly, one of the arbitrators, swore that he had got nothing but his bona-fide fee.

Buchanan knew nothing of the creek.

Dr. Canfield, one of the directors of the road company, said he remembered something being said at a meeting about a $600 check, and he thought it was Dowler who had said nothing should be said of it, as it might upset the deal.

Ferry Half Buried.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Jan. 31.—A 50-mile gale with snow caused serious damage by ice to the docks on both sides of the St. Mary's River Sunday night.

The ferry Algoma was half buried in a flow that swept down without warning from the rapids. The crew and 24 passengers spent the night on the boat and walked ashore over the ice yesterday.

Several small buildings were unroofed and many chimneys blown down.

A Peace Society.

Tokio, Jan. 31.—Americans resident in Japan have organized a peace society. A big meeting was held last night at Yokohama, 200 names being enrolled.

The American ambassador, Thomas J. O'Brien, said that there was no evidence of unfriendliness to the United States on the part of any section of the Japanese people. This was the sincere and unanimous sentiment of Americans in this country.

But They Will.

Carson, Nev., Jan. 31.—The State Senate has passed a bill making it unlawful to sell or give cigarettes or cigarette papers to any man, woman or child in the State of Nevada.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS
PAZO OINTMENT is guaranteed to cure any Case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 Days or money refunded. 50c.

PETERBOROUGH YOUTHS ARE APPLICANTS FOR NAVY JOBS

Twenty Young Men Ready to Become Salt Tars—Rates of Pay and Length of Service.

Twenty young men from Toronto have applied to Postmaster W. B. Rogers, of Toronto, to join the Canadian navy, and they will be given first choice, all things being equal. Applications, however, have also been received at Algoma, Belleville, Chatham, Goderich, Hamilton, Kingston, London, Peterborough, Owen Sound, Parry Sound, Pembroke, Port Arthur, Sarnia, Sault Ste. Marie, Windsor.

Every class of man is required for a man-of-war, each ship forming a self contained little town. There are seamen, engine-room ratings, artisans, cooks, stewards and the navy provides a career, without the depressions of trade ashore, where reductions of staffs are frequently necessitated. "In the navy you are always provided with three square meals waiting for you every day, and when pay day comes round your pay will be ready for you. When your service is finished you will receive a pension for the rest of your life.

SEAMAN CLASS RATINGS.

The navy wants boys of 15 to 17 years of age. On entering, the boys will undergo a two years' course in training at Halifax or Esquimalt, where they will be equipped practically and trained mentally for life at sea. They will occasionally go on short cruises for practical knowledge during the course, and when the two years are completed they will become seamen and defenders of their country. While training every boy will receive $9 per month as pocket money and be provided with an outfit of clothing free. They will be given holidays, and if the homes of the boys are far removed from the training depots, the Government will assist in paying their expenses.

A boy merges into a man at 18 years of age, and becoming an ordinary seaman, receives $15 per month. Advancement is to be by merit, and the "bright lights" will be selected for special courses in gunnery and torpedo work in England.

THE RATES OF PAY.

Boys get $9 per month, ordinary seaman $15, able seaman $21, leading seaman $25.50, petty officer $30—after three years $33, and after six years $37.50. The chief petty officer receives $42, after three years he gets $46.50, after six years $51, and after nine years $55.50. To those figures are added from $1.50 to $12 per month for extra pay for gunnery, torpedo and other work.

LENGTH OF SERVICE.

Boys will be required to serve in the navy for seven years from the age of 18, and the consent of parents must be received in writing. At the expiration of the seven years they may re-engage at an advance of $1.50 per month wages. On completing 21 years of service he stands eligible for a pension. Should a seaman rise to a warrant officer his pay varies from $75 to $135 a month, and he is able to retire at the age of 50 to 55 on a substantial life pension. If he dies the pension will go to the widow and children.

HEAVILY FINED FOR SELLING MORE LIQUOR THAN ALLOWED

East City Hotelman Appeared in Court To-day—Several Witnesses—Evidence Identical—Second Charge Against One Witness.

Patrick Hogan, proprietor of the Albion House, East City, was fined $24.10 this morning for selling more liquor over the bar than is permissible by law.

Considerable evidence was submitted mainly for the prosecution. License Inspector Stewart laid the charge.

FIRST WITNESS.

Leonard Dobbin was the first witness. He stated that on Jan. 26th he bought two bottles of ale from the bartender at the Albion House. Geo. Lipsett, of Lipsett's hotel, gave him a quarter with instructions to go out and get some ale. He did not go Sullivan's to get the liquor having been refused it there before. He gave the liquor on his return to Geo. Lipsett, but never was offered a drink of it himself. Frank Arkles, however, who was present, partook of it, and also George Lipsett. Quinlan's barber shop, adjoining the bar, was the place where the drinking occurred.

DID NOT DRINK.

Frank Arkles next stepped into the witness box. He said he was in the barbershop when Dobbin came in with the ale. Lipsett opened the bottle, gave Arkles a glassful and took one himself. Dobbin did not get a drink. The day previous to the 26th, he had purchased two bottles from Hogan's one of whiskey and the other of ale. He drank the whiskey at that time right on the premises, but took the bottle of ale away with him.

The next witness was George Lipsett, proprietor of the Lipsett eating-house. He has no liquor license.

EVIDENCE WAS SIMILAR.

His evidence was almost identical with the previous witnesses. He gave Dobbin a quarter with the words, "Go and get us some ale," expecting that he would buy it at Sullivan's. Arkles and he (witness) each had a drink, the other bottle he gave to his wife. This all occurred in Quinlan's barber shop.

LITTLE EVIDENCE FOR DEFENCE

Very little evidence was forthcoming for the defence, Fred Holland, the bartender who sold the liquor to Dobbin, said he sold it under the impression it was for a couple of men who were engaged in erecting a stable near by.

His Worship, after reviewing the case, imposed the above-mentioned fine, the same to be paid in ten days.

A SECOND CHARGE.

A second charge against George Lipsett, that of allowing customers to consume liquor on his premises, which has no license. He will appear on Thursday to face it, the interval being allowed for him to obtain counsel.

REAR ADMIRAL McCOMB PASSED AWAY IN NEW YORK

Had Been An Annual Visitor at Chemong Park for Ten Years.

The news has been received here of the death at New York of Rear Admiral McComb who for the past ten years paid an annual visit to Chemong Park, and spent the summer with his son-in-law and daughter Prof. and Mrs. Bull. Death was due to an attack of pleuro pneumonia.

The deceased was over eighty years of age, and while in the service of the United States navy had travelled practically all over the world. He was with Admiral Perry when Japan was opened up in 1853, and also took an active part during the civil war of 1861-65.

At Chemong Park he built an exceedingly pretty residence for himself and family, and later erected one for another daughter Mrs. Halpine.

With the many cottagers and visitors who became acquainted with him he was held in the highest esteem, being a lovable old gentleman, and one who was always looking for an opportunity to make happiness for some one. He will be greatly missed.

Before leaving the park last September he bade good-bye to all his friends and acquaintances as though he somewhat anticipated his death before another summer had come.

BOTH HAD COLD BATHS

Martin J. Kirn, had a chilling experience in the water near Wolfe street wharf yesterday afternoon. The Government dredge, Little Lake, is tied up at this point, having completed dredging operations in the vicinity of the Quaker Oats plant and the crew were making some repairs.

Mr. Kirn had occasion to visit the dredge and he slipped off the ice into the cold water, which was about four feet deep.

He managed to pull himself out and was driven to his home.

This afternoon one of the men engaged in cutting ice near the dredge, fell into the water, but by the prompt action of the others was rescued.

FLEETWOOD

Fleetwood, Jan. 30. — Mrs. John Crawford, who has been under the care of Dr. T. G. Burton, for sometime, is getting around again, and we hope to see her about in a short time.

Mr. Richard Wright was laid up with a bad attack of pneumonia of the lungs, but under the treatment of Dr. J. J. Hamilton, of Bethany, he is fast coming to himself again.

Mr. Leander Werry is very sick with the mumps and pneumonia and we wish him a speedy recovery. Dr. Brueton who is an expert at this disease, will soon bring him back to perfect health.

Mrs. David Harte has been unwell most of the winter, but is holding her own under trying circumstances. We hope to see her among us again.

Mr. Talbot Davidson is also under the weather with the mumps. Hope he will recover soon, as he will be greatly missed among the young people about Lifford.

Mr. Joseph Hickson our present reeve, and Mr. T. A. Kelly, reeve of Cavan Township, had a very close run for Warden of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham each man getting nineteen votes. They are two men very hard to beat and highly respected in their communities. When Greek meets Greek look out for something close and interesting. Mr. Kelly received the casting vote by the Reeve of Darlington, who in politics was same as Mr. Kelly.

Mr. Guy Tripp has purchased a large block of timber from Mr. Henry Hart, and is busy hauling same to his extensive yards, when he expects to have a large cut for this season. And owing to the C. P. R. building a new double track railway, he will be able to get most of his stock to the market early.

Messrs. Windrim and Kerr will soon have all their clover threshing completed. Both men have had a very successful year at their threshing and should be well satisfied.

Graham Bros. near Bethany, having leased their beautiful farm, are about to put in steel stalls and stanchions and a little carrier which will make a great and lasting improvement. When they go to make improvements, they always make them to last. They are about to live on one of their other farms near by, where they erected a large dwelling house last summer.

ATTACK ON FIELDING OVER TESTIMONIAL OF $120,000

Finance Minister Has to Defend Gift—Hot Words in the House.

Gifts to Ministers Create a Lot of Suspicion—Fielding Leaves House.

Ottawa, Feb. 1.—For the second time within a year an attack on Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, in respect to his acceptance of the testimonial of $100,000 last spring, was voted down by the House of Commons yesterday, after a protracted debate, on a straight party division of 118 to 63. It was a delicate situation, and A. C. Boyce (West Algoma), who moved the amendment to the motion to go into supply to consider the question of Ministers of the crown receiving gifts of money from those having pecuniary relations with the Government, did his best to make what appears that he had no desire to embarrass the Minister of Finance.

As soon as Mr. Boyce had finished, Mr. Fielding made a brief, manly statement of his knowledge of the facts and withdrew from the House, taking no part in the division.

Mr. Boyce urged the Government to have the list of subscribers to the Fielding testimonial made public, claiming, in the words of Sir Richard Cartwright, 20 years ago, that the pledge of secrecy was a "direct aggravation of the offence."

Hon. George E. Foster, who was the last speaker, claimed that the circumstances were not parallel with that of 1891, and said that if the news went abroad that Hon. William Pugsley, Minister of Public Works, had received a memorial of $100,000, it would almost provoke a revolution in the country.

A. C. Boyce (W. Algoma) in moving an amendment to the motion to go into supply, offered a resolution declaring that acceptance of gifts or testimonials by Ministers of the crown or of any members of their families, from contractors, Government officials, etc., was calculated to bring Parliamentary Government into contempt, that the source of any such gift ought not to be surrounded with secrecy, and an authentic statement of the names of the donors should forthwith be made public.

At the outset Mr. Boyce made it clear that his resolution was not a want of confidence motion, but he desired the principles involved on the resolution. He had no desire to injure any public man.

The member for West Algoma then urged with considerable force that the withholding of the list of subscriptions to the Fielding testimonial placed the Minister of Finance under grave suspicion, and that the whole transaction was in bad odor. He charged Sir Wilfrid Laurier with being the chief obstacle to the granting of the information to the House and country.

Mr. Fielding said it was not his intention to reply to the statements of the member for North Algoma, but as the matter was so personal to himself, to make a statement and then withdraw from the House. Some years ago, a personal friend had approached him, on behalf of a group of other personal friends, and asked him to accept a testimonial. He requested that the proposal be dropped, and, although his friends pressed the matter upon him a second time, the proposal was dropped. Subsequently that friend passed away.

Some years later, said Mr. Fielding, the proposal was again renewed by another friend, and his first decision was to decline to take the proffered gift, for several reasons. One was that in the case of gifts made to

DUKE AND CORNER STONE

London, Jan. 31.—The Universe, the Roman Catholic newspaper of South Africa, reported that the Duke of Connaught laid the foundation stone of a Jesuit College at Buluwayo. Replying to the Protestant Alliance, the Duke's secretary wrote: "You have been quite misinformed as to His Royal Highness opening or laying the foundation stone of a Jesuit College. The Duke of Connaught laid, with Masonic honors, the foundation stone of a Protestant church in South Africa.

LIBELLER OF KING GEORGE GETS ONE YEAR IN PRISON

CHIEF HOWARD,
Who Wants More Pay for the Firemen.

"IS DESPERATELY SERIOUS THING"

Sir Gilbert Parker's Views on Reciprocity Question.

Special to the Review.

London, Feb. 1.—Sir Gilbert Parker in an interview here to-day stated that he regarded reciprocity as contained in the Fielding agreement, as a desperately serious thing for Canada. He believes that the United States seeks to extend the eagle over the whole of North America, and is utterly opposed on the ground of British connection, to anything that savors of reciprocity with the United States.

A Great Dam.

Winnipeg, Feb. 1.—An important contract, which will involve the employment of many hundreds of men, has been let by the Canadian Pacific Railway. This is for the construction of a great dam on the Bow River at Bassano, Alberta. The water of the dam will be used in connection with the great irrigation plans of the company, and an additional 100,000 acres will be brought under the working of the system.

McCurdy Gives Exhibition.

Havana, Feb. 1.—J. A. D. McCurdy, the Canadian aviator, gave another fine exhibition of his skill as an aviator in the presence of a great crowd at the drill grounds at Camp Columbia yesterday afternoon. President Gomez and many public officials were interested spectators. McCurdy rose to an altitude of a thousand feet and executed a large number of different evolutions.

Edward Mylius Found Guilty of Libel on King.

Morganatic Marriage Story Proven to be Baseless and Slanderous.

Special to the Review.

London, Feb. 1.—Edward F. Mylius, who published in the Liberator of Paris, the old story of the morganatic marriage of King George in Malta, was sentenced this morning to one year in prison, being found guilty of the libel. It was proven that the charge was entirely baseless, and the story defamatory to the King in every way. The evidence submitted to the jury was very complete, showing all registry records from Malta at the time of the rumored nuptial contract, and the evidence of officers who were associated with King George at the time, gave evidence.

A very special effort was made at this time to prove that the story was entirely baseless, as it had been going around as gossip for some time, without the authorities being able to nail it as a lie.

The King was quite concerned over getting proof of the falseness of the story before the public, and wanted to go into the box himself, although no king was ever a witness in his own court before.

They Expected It.

Montreal, Feb. 1.—Representatives of Montreal interests opposing the Long Sault dam scheme expressed little or no surprise yesterday at the news from Washington to the effect that the committee on rivers and harbors have reported favorably on the subject.

Navigation men interested in the St Lawrence shipping and passenger trade say that they had expected nothing else from the committee of the United States House of Representatives which had recommended the scheme.

Trade With Canada.

Ottawa, Feb 1.—An interesting return tabled in the Commons yesterday tells of the unsuccessful negotiations which have been conducted between Canada and Australia for 11 years with the hope of bringing about a reciprocal trade agreement between the two premier colonies of Great Britain.

The latest information on the subject is to be found in a letter in which the Canadian trade commissioner in Australia says that representatives of the Australian Government will be prepared to discuss the matter at the time of the approaching Imperial Conference in London.

Froze into Death.

Regina, Feb. 1.—As a result of careful search of the country six miles east of this city the mounted police yesterday afternoon discovered the frozen body of William Knaggs, a farmer of the Regina district. Accompanied by two dogs Knaggs left the city last Thursday night to return home. The dogs in due course turned up at the home of a neighboring farmer, but Knaggs himself failed to appear.

There Are Others.

London, Feb. 1.—The Express remarks editorially: "There is neither reason nor excuse for a jeremiad of despair. Canada is not the whole of the overseas dominions. The resources of Australia in wheat are probably immeasurable. It can be made as effectively the Empire's granary as Canada may become the granary of North America."

PRESIDENT TAFT CLINGS TO HOPE FOR RECIPROCITY BILL

Thinks it May Pass Congress—He Refuses to Discuss Extra Session.

Washington, Feb. 1.—President Taft refuses to discuss "extra session" in connection with the reciprocity agreement. He hopes that the present session will act favorably.

In conversation yesterday, he emphasized his belief that reciprocity would establish currents of commerce which would benefit both the United States and Canada. The fears which were being expressed in some quarters, he said, were ghosts which would melt away as soon as the agreement went into effect. Many letters have been received at the White House congratulating him on the decided stand he has taken in the matter. He has been told also that he would have the backing of many influential associations throughout the country. While a few missives have reached the President criticizing the proposed reciprocity, these have been by far in the minority.

The President called attention to the fact that on the day his message went to Congress, when its influence on the market might have been supposed to be felt, there was a difference of only one cent in the price of wheat at Winnipeg and in Minnesota. This was in spite of the argument that reciprocity would effect unfavorably the prices of articles included in the agreement in either country.

THE PREFERENCE

London, Jan. 31.—It is anticipated that Imperial Preference will form the subject of a Conservative amendment to the address at the opening of Parliament.

ASK $10,000,000

Trenton, N.J., Feb. 1.—Suit was commenced in Court of Chancery yesterday against James H. Post and the executors and trustees of Henry O. Hevemeyer to compel the surrender of $10,000,000 of common stock of the National Sugar Refining Co. of New Jersey, or the payment for the same at its face value with interests from 1900. In case the stock is not paid for the suit seeks the return of $2,500,000 which has been paid out on the stock in dividends.

$40,000 Fire at Strathcona.

Strathcona, Alta., Feb. 1.—A disastrous fire swept out three places of business early yesterday morning, with a total loss of about $40,000. The stores destroyed were: Bright & Ashbaugh, men's outfitters; Cook & Orr, general merchants. An overheated stove in the up-town office of the O'Brien Lumber Co., was the cause.

JUDGE GETS CLEAN BILL

No Connection With Oxford Graft is Proven.

Did Not Receive a Dollar From Oxford County.

Graft Investigation is Ended—Report in a Week.

Woodstock, Feb. 1.—Judge Finkle cleared himself yesterday morning before Judge Snider, of any suspicions that may have existed as to whether he shared in any rake-off while he was acting as an arbitrator in setting a price on the Ingersoll-Port Burwell road. His evidence was taken at his home, where he is ill. He further said that he knew of no person who had accepted a bribe in that connection.

A special audit was made Monday night of the bills, receipts, drafts and time-books of Reeve S. W. Fleet of Ingersoll, and though he had made no accounting to the county, nor kept a detailed account of upwards of $10,000 of the county's money, which had been paid to him in the last three years to apply towards good roads in his town, yet the auditors, by working from 6 o'clock to midnight, were able to check every item and found that he had not misappropriated a dollar. Evidence to this effect was also taken yesterday and the famous Oxford County graft enquiry was brought to a close.

Judge Snider will put his report into the Attorney-General's Department before the week is over. He was all ready to hand it in last week; but the county investigating committee appealed to Premier Whitney to have the commission return to Woodstock and probe further into a rumor that $500 was given to somebody in facilitating the sale of the Ingersoll-Port Burwell toll road to the county.

Three hundred thousand words have been taken in evidence.

COL. MUNRO IS SENT UP

President of Farmers Bank Committed For Trial.

Special to the Review.

NINE PEOPLE ARE FATALLY INJURED IN WRECK ON C.P.R.

Train Leaves Track Near Gleichen, Alberta, With Disastrous Results—Many Seriously Hurt.

Special to the Review.

Calgary, Alberta, Feb. 1.—The derailment of a C.P.R. westbound train near Gleichen to-day caused what will be probably fatal injuries to nine people. Several others are seriously injured. The train was running about forty miles an hour, when the baggage car left the rails, pulling the passenger coaches off with it. The cars plunged on to the bank, or other side, and the passengers were given a bad shaking up.

The injured were cared for by the people of the neighborhood until a special could be rushed to the spot and most of them were taken to Gleichen hospital. No one was killed outright, but the nine, whose injuries are very serious, are not likely to recover.

ROBIN FOUND SANE

New York, Feb. 1.—Joseph G. Robin, alleged wrecker of banks, must stand trial on eight indictments charging larceny in the first degree. Although five alienists testified that in their opinion he is crazy, a jury before Judge Swann in the Court of General Sessions thought otherwise, and returned a verdict of "sane" late yesterday afternoon. William Travers Jerome, unwillingly acting as counsel for Robin under court appointment, declared that there had been a great miscarriage of justice. Judge Swann on the other hand congratulated the jury for their verdict contrary to expert opinion.

Coming to Canada.

Paris, Feb. 1.—Count Albert Apponyi, the leading statesman of Hungary, and former Minister of Public Instruction and Worship, will sail for New York to-night. The count, who is going to the United States on the joint invitation of the Civic Forum and the American Peace Society, will give a series of lectures on international arbitration with special reference to European armaments. He will also visit Canada.

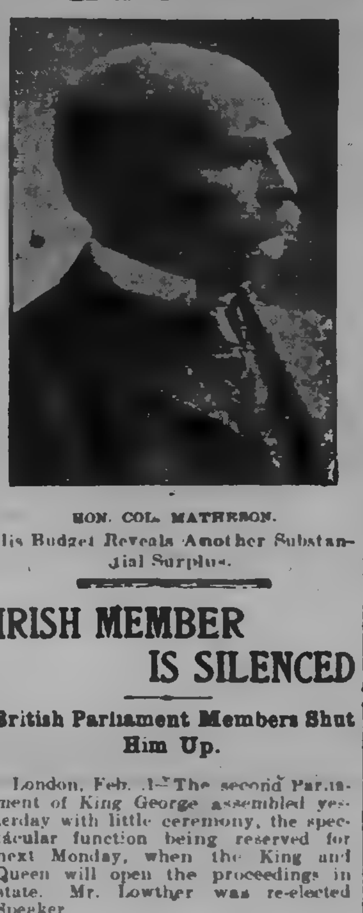
THE CHINESE SAY THAT THE JAPS ARE DETERMINED ON THE DESTRUCTION OF CHINAA AS A SOLID POWER, AND ARE DOING THEIR BEST TO SPLIT IT UP.

ONTARIO MEMBERS INDEMNITY IS INCREASED TO $1,400 NOW



HON. COL. MATHESON.
His Budget Reveals Another Substantial Surplus.

Increase is Provided For in the Supplementary Estimates—Government Takes Full Responsibility.

Toronto, Feb. 1.—Members of the Ontario Legislature had the fact impressed upon them yesterday afternoon that the Imperial Government is an august body and that the procedure of intercourse through viceregal channels was one of form and ceremony. This was brought home by the explanations by Sir James Whitney that in sending the resolution of thanks to the Imperial Government, adopted on Monday, for volumes donated to the library of the Legislature, it was necessary to adopt an address to the Lieutenant-Governor, requesting him to transmit the resolution through the official sources. Such an address was then read by the leader of the Government and agreed to.

Hon. W. J. Hanna introduced a consolidation bill with respect to the Municipal Act. The Provincial Secretary said that the measure was more than a mere consolidation, as it took the portions relating to local improvements and grouped them together. When the bill was before the members of the House he desired the changes to be carefully considered; even this caused a little delay.

Expectation was on the tip-toe when the leader of the House announced that he had received a communication from Government House, in which the Lieutenant-Governor transmitted the supplemental estimates.

In presenting these estimates, which are supplementary to the main estimates adopted for this current year at the last session of the Legislature, Sir James announced an increase of the sessional indemnity. He said that the question was discussed in an informal way last year, but now the Government had taken the full responsibility and was treating the subject on its own responsibility. There had been no bargaining and no round robin. The question was not discussed at the general elections, neither was that of the increase of the salaries of Cabinet Ministers, but the latter had been afterwards confirmed by the public. The increase of the indemnity and the increases of salaries of members of the civil service were in accordance with changed conditions and the increased cost of living.

The Prime Minister expressed the opinion that rules regulating the number of days which a member might be absent, and of deductions to be made for absence over that number, should be adopted. The amount of indemnity proposed was $1,400.

The increase of $400 additional for each of the 106 members is included in the supplementary estimates. The item reads: "To provide indemnity to members, $42,400."

The total supplementary estimates aggregate $2,659,043.

Among the estimates of public interest are:

Hydro-Electric Power Commission (capital account): To complete Niagara power transmission lines, including additional extensions to Tillsonburg, Weston, Port Credit, Brampton, Mitchell, Seaforth, Agricultural College, London and Hamilton Asylums, $1,000,000.

To complete Port Arthur station and transmission line (in addition to $29,909.08 expended in 1909-1910, which is approved), $30,000.

Enforcing Liquor License Act in local option districts, $5,000.

Fish and game, $5,000.

The supplementary estimates contained a total of $39,900 for technical education, and granted the recent requests of the Hamilton deputation for a revote of the $2,400 and of $5,000.

Agricultural training in high schools will receive $6,000.

Colonization and immigration, $26,280.79.

New Government House, $50,000.

Parliament and Departmental printing, $488,440.

Alterations, additions, etc., to Hospital for Insane, Hamilton, $24,500.

To Brockville ditto, $48,140.

To Mimico ditto, $16,300.

IRISH MEMBER IS SILENCED

British Parliament Members Shut Him Up.

London, Feb. 1.—The second Parliament of King George assembled yesterday with little ceremony, the spectacular function being reserved for next Monday, when the King and Queen will open the proceedings in state. Mr. Lowther was re-elected Speaker.

An unprecedented scene occurred in the House, shortly after the opening of the session, in the protest raised to the re-election of Speaker Lowther. Lawrence Gintell, Irish Nationalist, objected to his re-election, asserting that he had proved self-subservient to the party machine and had used his office to muzzle other members.

Gintell's objection was drowned in a roar of anger from the other members, and he quickly subsided for fear that he might be forcibly ejected.

NATION OF 100,000,000

London, Jan. 31.—The Bishop of London, speaking on behalf of Trinity College, Toronto, said Canada was going to be a nation of a hundred million people—the greatest the world has ever seen. They wanted to set the glorious standard of a Christian life.

WILL OPPOSE IT

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Feb. 1.—Three members of the Ontario Legislature, Nickle, of Kingston, McEwing, of West Wellington, and Allan Studholme, of Hamilton, are opposed to the indemnity increase, and it is probable that they will divide the House on it.

Shot Down by ex-Soldier.

Vancouver, Feb. 1.—About 11 o'clock Monday night, in front of the Wonder Cafe, Carroll street, John Flax of Montreal, a young man of 23 years of age, was shot down by Alfred Rowach, a veteran of the British army. No enmity had existed between the two; it was purely and simply the sudden and unaccountable act of a brain crazed with bad whisky.

Flax had been in the city less than a year, and the affray took place on the eve of his departure for home. Doctors last night had little hope for his recovery.

The Daily Review

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 1, 1911.

A SECONDARY EFFECT

It is certainly most desirable that Canada shall maintain the preferential tariff in favor of Britain. That is a principle which will find an echo and response in every Canadian bosom —except, perhaps, some of the Nationalists. Many of the newspapers have, in discussing the new tariff arrangements with the United States, betrayed a fear that reciprocity in so many natural products, together with lower tariff on manufactures, will militate against the preference. The fear is well grounded. It is certain that the new arrangement, if carried out, will mean a blow to our British trade, even if the preference is maintained on paper. To remove the trade restrictions between Canada and the United States on so many articles will mean a revolution in our trade relations. Canada would not be justified, perhaps, in refusing the chance to gain such a sweepingly wide market next door, but the dangers of such a course are not hidden in obscurity.

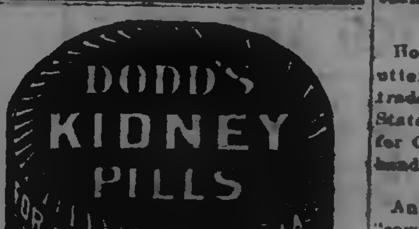
As far as the actual proposals of the Fielding agreement go, it cannot, on the actual facts, be said that the British exporter will suffer severely. In the classes of goods put on the free list we bought $890,000 worth in 1910 from Great Britain, while we bought $26,860,000 from the United States. In cattle, for instance, we bought in 1910 $88,000 worth from Great Britain—mainly short-born or breeding cattle—and $687,000 from the United States. In grains, we bought from Britain $91,880; from the United States $12,900,000. In dried fruits we bought from Britain $97,800, as against importations from the United States of $1,420,000.

The danger to the British preference is not so much actually in the loss of trade to Britain in the classes of articles affected—though that will be considerable—as in the gradual merging of our commerce, more and more, into continentalism.

To give Canada a market at hand of ninety million people, for nearly all her natural products, will certainly tend to lessen our over-sea exports of these products. We are exporting only our surplus, in any event, and that surplus will naturally seek the closest and most easily attainable market, price considerations being equal.

The danger to the British preference comes through the transference of our buying to the United States, as the result of increased sales to the Republic and the lessening of our exports to Britain. To give a preference on paper will not do our imperial relations much good, if we do most of our buying and selling with the United States.

It is not in the primary effect of the tariff agreement on the British preference that the danger lies, but in the secondary effect of diversion of general trade.



A BAD EXAMPLE

The Mail and Empire, in discussing the British preference and the new United States agreement, says—

> Take the case of type-setting and type-casting machines. The general tariff rate on these articles is 20 per cent. ad valorem, and it was at this rate they were admitted from the United States. The preferential tariff rate is 12 1-2 per cent., at which duty type-casting and type-setting machines are imported from Great Britain. In his arrangement with the United States Mr. Fielding agrees to wipe out the 20 per cent. duty on such machines coming from that country. Hence, if this agreement goes through, type-setting and type-casting machines coming from the United States, France, Belgium, or any other of the numerous countries entitled to most-favored-nation treatment at Canada's hands will be free of duty; whereas, coming from Great Britain, they will be dutiable at the rate of 12 1-2 per cent.

While there are undoubtedly some classes of imports from Great Britain that will be adversely effected by the "free list," the Mail and Empire's selection of type-setting machinery as an example of how the British preference is hurt is unfortunate. In 1910 there was no importation of type-setting machinery from Britain. Therefore, the preference cannot be affected. On the other hand Canada bought $300,000 of type-setting machinery from the United. The abolition of the duty of 20 per cent. duty means a relief to the publishing trade of that amount, and hurts no Canadian industry, because the type-setting and type-casting machinery is manufactured almost wholly in the United States. The newspaper publishers are certainly entitled to such a reduction, especially when British industry and Canadian industry is not in the least affected.

THE INDEMNITY

According to the Toronto News the Ontario Government is increasing the sessional indemnity of the members to $1,500, the amount being provided for in the supplementary estimates. If this is true, it is wrong. Last year there was an attempt made to get an increase in the sessional indemnity, but it was foiled by Mr. Nickle, of Kingston. There are some members of the Ontario House who would lose money even with $1,500 indemnity, by reason of their absence from business. But the great majority of the members are not worth $1,500 to the Province. Premier Whitney, of course, does not like to oppose the unanimous wish of the members, making himself unpopular, but if we mistake not it will not be a popular move with the Province.

A MEANING BEHIND THIS

> It is evident that President Taft and the Canadian representatives have won a decisive victory in framing the reciprocal agreement as otherwise British general opinion would not be so bitterly against it.—New York Herald.

This is a curious sentiment. What is the meaning behind it? Does it not convey the idea that the Canadians are seeking to break away from British connection, are allying themselves with the Americans with the purpose of eventually securing commercial and political union? That is a typical American expression. Few Americans realize what the strength of the imperial sentiment is in Canada, and most of them take it that Canada is ready to slip out of Britain's leash just as soon as the opportunity offers. And the actions of some of the Canadian "statesmen" and people would lead one to think that they were not bad guessers.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Dr. Beattie Nesbitt and the Farmers' Bank are forgotten in the tariff agitation. Of the two evils, it's hard to make a choice.

President Taft's move on the reciprocity deal was clever domestic politics. But why should Canada's paws be burned pulling President Taft's political chestnuts out of the fire?

The price of automobile tires has been greatly reduced. Of course most of us will immediately take advantage of the bargain and buy an auto in order to get a cheap tire!

The Dominion Steel Corporation will have to face the loss of the steel-rod trade in Canada, because of the tariff change, and alter a $800,000 building.

Hon. Clifford Sifton a few weeks ago uttered a warning against entangling trade alliances with the United States. Here is another opportunity for Cliff Sif. to show his fine Italian hand.

An Ottawa minister refers to the "cowardly" attack by a member of the House of Commons on the editor of the Globe. But Col. Hughes made it on a public platform, where he is not privileged. If the statement is slanderous, why doesn't a slander suit follow? Col. Hughes didn't seek the cover of privilege at all.

HOW RAILROADS WASTE COAL

When the panic of 1907 struck the country the railroads suffered severely. Among others was the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha road, with more than 1,700 miles of track. When in November, 1907, the net earnings of the road showed a loss of $210,000 over the same month in the previous year, A. W. Trenholm, the general manager, decided on a radical step. He sent for representatives of the various unions of railroad employes and asked their aid in saving the dividends for the stockholders and jobs and high wages for the workmen. The union officials promised their fullest co-operation. At their suggestion joint meetings of employes were held at all division points. These meetings were attended by from two to six hundred men, each, including in every case, at least one of the general officers. Every man present was asked to make suggestions as to how savings could be effected in any department of the road. Perfect frankness in making criticisms was invited. As a result the men left these meetings full of determination to do everything in their power.

The first month after the meetings began—with practically no difference in the tonnage hauled—the saving in the coal bill alone was more than $38,000. If a proportionate saving were carried out for one year, on all the railroads in the United States it would amount to the great sum of $55,000,000.—From "The Case of the Railroads," in February Technical World Magazine.

The Perfume of The Lady In Black

By GASTON LEROUX Author of "The Mystery of the Yellow Room"

Copyright, 1909, by Brentano's.

"It is Pere Simon. Ah, how old he has grown! Listen! This is the hour when he goes to superintend the study hour of the younger boys. Every one is in the classroom now. Oh, we are very lucky!"

Why was Rouletabille so anxious to hide himself?

"I believe that I am going crazy!" he said with a short laugh. "But I can't help my feelings. They are stronger than I. To think that I am going to see the parlor—where she waited for me! I had been living only in the hope of seeing her, and after she had gone I fell into such a despondent state that after each of her visits they feared for my health. So from one visit to another I had her memory and her perfume to comfort me. Never having seen her dear face distinctly, I lived less with her image than with the heavenly odor. The perfume which she always used and which was indissolubly associated in my mind with her was the most subtle and the sweetest odor I have ever known, and I never breathed it again in all the years which followed until the day we first went to the Glandier."

"You mean the day that you met Mathilde Stangerson?"

"That is what I mean," responded the lad in a trembling voice.

(Ah, if I had known at that moment that Professor Stangerson's daughter as the result of her first marriage in America had had a child, a son, who would have been if he had lived the same age as Rouletabille, perhaps I would have at last comprehended his emotion and grief and the strange reluctance which he showed to pronounce the name of Mathilde Stangerson there at the school to which in the past had come so often the Lady in Black!)

"And you have never known why the Lady in Black did not return?" I asked.

"She did return!" he cried. "But I ran away."

"Why—to look for her?"

"No, no—to flee from her."

"She may have been broken hearted at not finding you."

Rouletabille raised his arms toward the sky and shook his head.

"How can I know? What an unhappy wretch I am! Hush, Sainclair! Here comes Pere Simon! Now he's gone again. Quick—to the parlor!"

As we entered the room his face became flushed, he advanced with short steps, turned to me and said in low tones:

"Oh, Sainclair, this is it—the parlor! Feel how my hands burn. My face is flushed, is it not? I was always flushed when I came here, knowing that I should find her. I used to run. I felt smothered. I do now. I was not able to wait. Oh, my heart beats just as it did when I was a little lad! I would come to the door—right here—and then I would pause, bashful and shamefaced. But I would see her dark shadow in the corner. She would take me in her arms and hold me there in silence, and before we knew it we were both weeping as we clung together. How dear those meetings were! She was my mother, Sainclair. Oh, she never told me so! On the contrary, she used to say that my mother was dead and that she had been her friend. But she told me to call her mamma, and when she wept as I kissed her I knew that she really was my mother."

The poor lad could no longer contain himself. He rested his arms on the mantel and wept like a little child.

I saw him draw forth the letter which he had placed there in the train and tear it open. His hand fell, and he uttered a groan. His flushed face grew pallid. It seemed as though every drop of blood had left his heart. Finally his features took on the serenity which comes from assurance of victory.

"We must go now, Sainclair."

And he left the parlor without even looking back. I followed. In the deserted street I stopped him by asking anxiously:

"Well, did you find the perfume of the Lady in Black?"

"Yes," he said, very gravely—"yes, Sainclair, I found it." And he handed me the letter from Professor Stangerson's daughter.

I looked at him, doubting the evidence of my own senses, not understanding, because I knew nothing. Then he took my two hands and looked into my eyes.

"I am going to confide a secret to you, Sainclair—the secret of my life and perhaps some day the secret of my death. Let what will come, it must die with you and me. Mathilde Stangerson had a child—a son. He is dead—is dead to every one except to the two of us who stand here."

I recoiled, struck with horror under such a revelation. Rouletabille the son of Mathilde Stangerson! In that case Rouletabille must be the son of Larsan.

Oh, I understood now all the wretchedness of the boy!

Rouletabille simply made a gesture which seemed to say, "And now you understand, Sainclair."

When we reached Paris, Rouletabille handed me a new dispatch which had come from Valence and which was signed by Professor Stangerson. It said: "M. Darzac tells me that you have a few days' leave. We should all be very glad if you could come and spend them with us. We will wait for you at Arthur Rance's place, Rochers Rouges. He will be delighted to present you to his wife. My daughter will be pleased to see you. She joins me in kindest greetings."

A concierge from Rouletabille's hotel came rushing up and handed us a third dispatch. This one was sent from Mentone and signed by Mathilde. It contained two words, "Rescue us."

CHAPTER III.

Now I knew all. As we continued on our journey Rouletabille related to me the remarkable and adventurous story of his childhood, and I knew also why he dreaded nothing so much as that Mme. Darzac should penetrate the mystery which separated them.

Rouletabille had fled from school at Eu like a thief. He had been accused of stealing.

At the age of nine he had an extraordinary intelligence and could arrive easily at the solution of perplexing problems. By logical deductions of an almost amazing kind he astonished his professor of mathematics. He had never been able to learn his multiplication tables and always counted upon his fingers. He would usually get the answers to the problems himself, leaving the working out to be done by his fellow pupils. But first he would show them exactly how the example ought to be done. He applied his admirable faculties of reasoning to his daily life as well as to his studies, using the rules—both materially and morally. For example, an act had been committed in the school—I have forgotten whether it was of cheating or talebearing—by one of ten persons whom he knew, and he picked out the right one with a divination which seemed almost supernatural, simply by deduction. He later found in this abnormal fashion a small sum of money which had been stolen from the superintendent, who refused to believe that the discovery was due only to the lad's intelligence and clearness of insight. They tried to make him acknowledge his fault. He defended himself with such indignation and anger that it drew upon him a severe punishment. The principal held an investigation and a trial, at which Joseph Josephin, as he was called, was accused by some of his youthful comrades in that spirit of falsehood which children sometimes possess. The fact that the boy seemed to have no relatives and that no one knew where he came from made him particularly likely in that little world to be suspected of crime. Finally the superintendent told the lad that if he did not confess his guilt it was decided not to keep him in the school and that a letter would be written to the lady who interested herself in him to tell her to come after him.

The child allowed himself to be taken to his little room a prisoner. Upon the morrow he had disappeared. He had run away. He had felt that the principal was no longer his friend since he believed him guilty of theft. And he could see no reason why the Lady in Black would not believe it too. To appear as a thief in the sight of the Lady in Black! He would rather die. So he climbed over the wall of the garden at night. He rushed to the canal, with a prayer, uttered as much to the Lady in Black as to God himself, and threw himself in the water. Being a good swimmer, he soon landed and led a gypsy life as one of the "orange fishers" of the port of Marseilles, subsisting on fruits that fell overboard and sleeping where his fancy pleased.

One day Joseph Josephin met a man who gave him a bright new hundred sou piece. With his hundred sous he bought himself a fine new bootblack's box and installed himself in business opposite the Bregaillon. With the feeling of ownership which his box and his business had brought him, ambition had entered his mind. He had received too good an education not to understand that if he did not himself finish what others had begun for him he would be deprived of the best chance which he had of making for himself a place in the world.

His customers grew interested in the little bootblack, who always had on his box some work of history or mathematics, and a harness maker became attached to him and took him into his shop.

Soon Rouletabille was promoted to the dignity of working in leather and was able to save. At the age of sixteen, having a little money, he took the train for Paris—to look for the Lady in Black.

As soon as he reached the capital he looked up his benefactor, who was a newspaper man, and recalled himself to the latter's memory, telling him that he had decided to become a journalist.

The editor tried to turn the youth from his project. At last, tired of his persistent requests, the editor said:

"Well, my lad, since you have nothing special to do just now, go and find the left foot of the body in the Rue Oberkampf."

And with these strange words he turned away, leaving poor Rouletabille with half a dozen young reporters tittering around him. But the boy was not daunted. He searched through the files and found that the Epoch was offering a large reward to the person finding the foot missing from the mutilated body of a woman found in the Rue Oberkampf.

In "The Mystery of the Yellow Room" I told how Rouletabille succeeded and in what manner there revealed itself to him his own singular calling—that of always beginning to reason a matter out from the point where others had finished.

I have told by what chance he was led to the Elysee, where he inhaled as he passed the perfume of the Lady in Black. He realized then that it was Mlle. Stangerson who had been his visitor at the school. What more need I add? Why speak of the sensations which his knowledge as to the wearer of the perfume aroused in the heart of Rouletabille during the events at the Glandier and, above all, after his trip to America? However, his instinct drew him so strongly to the professor's daughter that he could scarcely resist his longing to throw himself into her arms and press her to his heart and cry out to her: "You are my mother! You are my mother!"

And he fled from her presence just as he had fled from the vestry on the day of her wedding in order that there should not escape from him any sign of the secret tenderness that burned in his breast, for horrible thoughts dwelt in his mind. Suppose he were to make himself known to her and she were to cast him off—the little thief of the boarding school, the son of Roussel, Ballmeyer, the heir of the crimes of Larsan!

However, this torture could not last always, he told himself. If it were she he would know how to say things to her that must open her heart. However, it is by no means certain that decisive results would have been gained from this expedition—at least in the eyes of a third person, like myself—had it not been for the influence of the odor—if the letter from Mathilde, which I had handed to Rouletabille in the train, had not suddenly, with its faint, sweet perfume, brought to us directly the evidence which we were seeking. I have never read this letter. It is a document so sacred in the eyes of my friend that other eyes will never behold it, but I know that the gentle reproaches which it contained for the boy's rudeness and lack of confidence in the writer concluded with a final sentence which said that the interest which she felt in him arose less from the services he had rendered her than because of the memories which she had of a little boy the son of a friend whom she had loved very dearly and who had killed himself "like a little man with a broken heart" at the age of nine years and whom Rouletabille greatly resembled.

Mrs. Crippen's Estate.

London, Jan. 31.—A contest for the property of Belle Elmore Crippen, the murdered wife of Dr. H. H. Crippen, was begun yesterday by Theresa Hunn, a half sister, who asked the probate court for possession of the property, worth $1,000. Dr. Crippen, who was hanged for murder, willed all his property to Miss Ethel Claire Leneve, the girl for love of whom he killed his wife.

Attorney Grazebrooke, representing Miss Leneve, fought yesterday's action on the grounds that Mrs. Crippen's property passed to Dr Crippen at her death, and is included in Dr. Crippen's will.

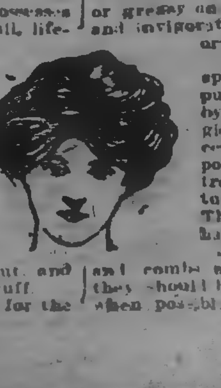
Every Woman Can Have Beautiful Abundant Lustrous Hair



The clever women of Canada have learned that Parisian Sage possesses the peculiar power to turn dull, lifeless looking hair into lustrous fascinating hair.

And that is why a head of dull appearing hair is a rarity nowadays, for why should any woman neglect the opportunity to make her hair beautiful when it adds so greatly to her charms.

Parisian Sage not only beautifies the hair, but it makes hair grow abundantly, stops it from falling out and removes every trace of dandruff.

It is the ideal hair dressing for the whole family because it is not sticky or greasy and possesses a refreshing and invigorating quality not found in ordinary hair preparations.

It makes the scalp feel splendid the minute you put it on the head. Sold by Wm. Madill and druggists everywhere for 50 cents a large bottle, or postpaid on receipt of price from the Giroux Manufacturing Co., Fort Erie, Ont. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package.

As unclean hair brushes and combs attract dandruff germs, they should be washed frequently and when possible dried in the sun.

PLEURO-PNEUMONIA AND BRONCHITIS

Brought Mrs. Baker to Death's Door. Father Morriscy's No. 10 Saved Her.

Of the many hundreds of cures wrought by Father Morriscy's No. 10 (Lung Tonic) few are more remarkable than the saving of the life of Mrs. John S. Baker, of 164 Rockland Road (North End), St. John, N.B. She wrote on Oct. 16, 1909:

"I wish to express my gratitude that I am living to-day, saved from the grave by Father Morriscy's No. 10 (Lung Tonic). This time last year I had pleuro-pneumonia and bronchitis, and had been given up to die, and had my lungs tapped in the City Hospital, and never expected to walk again; I was continually getting worse every day. I came home from the hospital, and everyone was watching for me to die. I tried everything but there seemed to be no cure for me.

"I began taking Father Morriscy's No. 10, and the second day I could eat without pain. I used 22 bottles of No. 10, as I was run-down right into consumption, and for six months was just a shadow until I began to use it, and now I am in good health, and surprised most of my neighbors by gaining so quickly. I feel it my duty to publish it everywhere I can, as with all I can say I cannot recommend it too highly—it was a life saver to me, and I am very thankful to recommend it, as it is worth all it is said."

Father Morriscy's No. 10 is very different from the many preparations that simply relieve a cough. No. 10 relieves the cause of the cough, restores the membranes of throat and lungs to a healthy condition, and tones up the whole system, giving strength to resist future attacks.

FEBRUARY the QUIET MONTH?

NO! NO! Decidedly No!

February used to be the quietest month of the whole year, but no more with us. We have conquered that feeling of "'tween season carelessness" to such a degree that February shows as big an advance over previous years as any other month on the calendar. We take one department at a time and boost it with rare values, and the result---well, we are more than satisfied with previous years and will try to bring this February up to, or past, our record February advancement over other years. This week Women's Notions, Smallwares and Embroideries have the stand, so look out for big business. Go window shopping to-morrow and get in touch with

TUBERCULOSIS CAR IS EQUIPPED WITH FOES OF CONSUMPTION

Interesting Car on Exhibition at C.P.R. — Contains Every Sanitary Precaution Against the Dread Disease—Is Here In Connection With Tuberculosis Lecture To-night

The tuberculosis car, which is here in connection with the tuberculosis exhibit and lecture to-night and tomorrow evening, in the Collegiate Hall, arrived in the city about four o'clock this morning, and is open for inspection on the C.P.R. siding.

IS SPLENDIDLY EQUIPPED.

An examination of it would well repay any individuals who are interested in combating the deadly "white plague." The car, which is of regular baggage car dimensions, is thoroughly fitted out inside with every conceivable object and idea which is used to-day in overcoming the disease. The walls are plentifully adorned with handsome charts of noted sanitariums and diagrams of their construction.

Pictures of celebrities who have succumbed to tuberculosis are framed. One of these is the photo of Chopin, the famous musician.

At one place is a chart with the following dread statistics—"There are 12,000 cases of tuberculosis in Ontario to-day," and beside it another with these words—"In 1906 2,300 persons died of tuberculosis in Ontario."

A GOOD DISPLAY.

Arranged in manner well calculated to display their relative value, are miniature wooden houses, model consumptive tents and various sanitary helps for patients.

Another striking feature of the car is a series of pictures showing some of consumption's allies, and in contrast to them, several of its enemies. Numerous pamphlets and instructive literature regarding the disease and its treatment is arranged on tables. Sputum cups and sanitary home pasteurization pails for milk are also shown.

No doubt a large audience will be present to hear the lecture this evening on the important subject.

The car will be in the city till Thursday.

The car will be moved to the Hunter street C.P.R. crossing on the tracks nearest the river, and south from Hunter street, and the public are invited to visit the exhibit.

Harold Chavaux, aged 7, was struck on the head by a fall of ice while entering a school at Quebec, and was killed.

TAKEN TO KINGSTON

James Gorham Was in Good Spirits When He Left This Morning

Smiling and cheerful James Gorham, in charge of deputy sheriff Hall and Turnkey Ray, left this morning on the Belleville train for Kingston to enter on his term of life imprisonment in the penitentiary. He was handcuffed and shackled, and nodded pleasantly to several of his acquaintances as he boarded the train.

DEPUTATION VISIT LINDSAY

To Inspect Heating Plant of Court House

Lindsay Post.

A deputation consisting of the court house engineer and the county property chairman, of Peterborough, visited the local court house yesterday to view the heating plant of that institution. It is estimated that in the Peterborough court house they burn coal at the rate of 80 tons in about 74 days. Here the estimate is that 80 tons are consumed in the season of from 7 to 8 months.

The Peterborough county council have been of the opinion that too much coal is being used in their plant and are trying to remedy the matter if possible.

LECTURE WAS MUCH ENJOYED

Many Interesting Pictures of Life in a London Slum

The lecture given last night at Park St. Baptist church by Rev. John Galt of Picton, on "Life in a London Slum," was very interesting, indeed. The pictures according to some old Londoners who were present, were true to life, and the costomongers' calls given by the lecturer recognized as genuine.

All enjoyed the lecture very much. The proceeds went towards helping the Picton Baptist church.

ANNUAL REPORT OF FIRE CHIEF ON HIS DEPARTMENT

The Statistics for the Year—Fire, Water and Light Committee Took No Action in Regard to Fireman McBride's Case—Aldermen Discuss the Speed of Fire Horses

The Chairman, of the Fire Water and Light Committee at a meeting last night, read the report of the Fire Chief for the past year, and it was as follows:

Chairman and Committee on Fire, Water and Light.

I have the honor to submit herewith the third annual report of the paid fire department for the year ending Dec. 31, 1910.

During the year the department responded to 131 alarms of fire, six less than in the year 1909, and you will please find attached a table of the various fires and the cause of each as near as could be ascertained.

The total damage by fire for the year 1910 was $18,568. Of this amount $9,958 was the damage to buildings and the damage to contents amounted to $8,610.

The city was exceptionally fortunate during the year 1910 in not having bad accidents and not having sustained any very heavy losses by fire. The damage sustained was $41,287 less than that of the preceding year. I attribute this partly to the extension of the water-works system and partly to the improved police patrol on the business districts of the city.

The most disastrous fire in the year amounted to $7,000, of this amount only $688 was the actual damage to the building by fire, the balance of the $7,000 damage was caused by smoke and not one dollar damage was caused by water. This is an instance where the economical use of water saved very many thousands of dollars to the stock of perishable goods.

In taking stock of the equipment I find there is 1,000 feet of fire hose unfit for service. Some of this hose has been in commission since the year 1892. We are often delayed at a fire by hose bursting. The old hose should be discarded from the fire service and sold to the Board of Works for flushing services, etc., and new hose purchased.

I wish to bring to the attention of your committee the necessity of the extension of your fire department. Provision should be made for another small fire station with a hose waggon and sufficient men to man the apparatus and also the purchase of a chemical engine and five more fire alarm boxes.

Another matter than should receive attention from your Board is the wages paid firemen. The present scale of $1.37 is not enough money to secure and retain the services of good men at the present price of living expenses, and I would respectfully ask your honorable body for an advance of 10 cents per day, all round with the exception of the chief.

The total number of street lights out for the year were 328. During the past year several of the street lights were moved from the side of the street to the middle of the road and the experiment has had the effect of giving much more better light in the locality where this trial was made and to such a marked degree that I would recommend that your committee make arrangements at once to have all the arc lights in the city moved to the centre of the intersection of streets.

The following is taken from the table of fires, given with the report. The greatest number of fires occurred on Saturdays, and there were 54 alarms for chimney blazes. Cigar stubs caused 1, and incendiarism 5.

A list of articles wanted by the chief for the department was also submitted, the largest items being 1,000 feet of hose to cost $1,100, and a storage battery at $900. The list included billiard cloth at $65.

Regarding an increase of the first year rate of wages for the firemen, the committee decided to take no action.

Ald. Kerneghan brought up the matter of water supply for Auburn. He opined that the residents, being taxpayers, were entitled to consideration.

There are two points from which the connection could be made, one by way of the Smith Street bridge, and the other by way of the new dam at Auburn, to be constructed by the Auburn Power Company.

On motion of Ald. Metheral and Kerneghan, the Mayor will interview The Ludger Company, in regard to making connections by way of their dam.

The account of Geo. Ball, of $36.75 for garments made for the Fire Chief and Deputy Chief was ordered to be paid.

J. J. Turner & Sons, asked for an archlight at the corner of Water and King. No action taken.

FIREMAN McBRIDE'S CASE

The Fire Chief wrote asking that Fireman McBride be given the second grade of wages. He explained that McBride had worked continuously from July 22, 1908, to July 15, 1910 and then quit. Later, on August 19, a misunderstanding having been cleared up, he returned and was rated at $1.37 per day, the first year pay.

Ald. Metheral claimed the letter to be misleading and that McBride had been discharged by the Chief.

Ald. Kerneghan—His absence should not make any difference if he was a good man.

Ald. Morgan—But it creates a precedent.

Ald. Edgar thought he should be left as a new man.

Ald. Kerneghan—If a man leaves of his own accord and returns, give him pay as a new man. If he is discharged by the Chief, the case is different.

Ald. Metheral explained that the return of McBride, which occurred after a box call, had shown the number of men at the fire hall to be smaller than the Chief stated.

No action was taken in the matter.

AN OLD ACCOUNT

An account of $23 owing to the Committee by Geo. Stevens, for junk from the fire hall was referred to the city solicitor, who will ask that it be paid.

The question of more lights in the dark parts of the city was discussed and the chairman promised that something would be done.

SLOW TIME OF HORSES

Ald. Kerneghan wanted to know what was the trouble with the horses of the Fire Department. They were very slow he said. On different occasions he had watched them and was not favorably impressed with their headway over the road. On the day of the Murphy fire on Smith Street, they made very poor time. They were also very slow in getting away from the hall, when they should be "on the jump."

Ald. Metheral expressed his dissatisfaction at the slowness of the horses, and held that with the old brigade, the horses went faster and carried 1200 feet of hose, that quantity being in excess of the amount carried at the present time.

The matter will likely be investigated.

The $8 account of the Fire Chief for refreshments for the Midland Odd Fellows, last summer, was again passed over. The Fire, Water and Light Committee didn't give him any authority to spend the money.

The Committee will ask for an appropriation of $12,900, an increase of $400 over the amount for last year. The extra $400 is mainly for lights.

BASKETBALL LEAGUE TO BE FORMED

FRONTENACS HERE FIRST

Kingston's Famous Juniors Meet Grillers, Tuesday — Return Game Friday

Kingston Frontenacs, winners of group 1, and the local Grillers, winners of group 3, play here on Tuesday night of next week, and at the penitentiary town the following Friday. These dates were arranged at the O.H.A. meeting yesterday afternoon.

Harvey Sproule will referee at this end, and Wettlaufer, of Berlin, at Kingston.

PUCKLAND

The fact of Kingston Frontenacs having cleaned up everything in their district in easy fashion, doesn't mean one James Sutherland and his stalwart seven are going to put it all over the Grillers in the home and home series.

On their showing the Prison septette are undoubtedly a clever bunch of players, but it should be borne in mind that Belleville and Picton juniors were composed of first year players, while the district champs were junior O.H.A. finalists and winners last year.

Peterborough intermediates were beaten 18—4 at Trenton and won out here 13—8, high scores don't go for much and there won't be any great surprise on Tuesday night of next week, if the Kingston lads turn out to be an overrated aggregation.

At this distance the probabilities are that both Glover and Denison will be on the line-up for the game with Trenton, Friday night. Bill Shortt, Cyril Giroux and McMillan are candidates for the line-up.

Arthur Armstrong, the star left wing man of the Trenton intermediates, who was thought to have had his shoulder dislocated at at Cobourg on Friday night, was not so badly injured as was at first thought. He fell heavily on the shoulder, but it was only bruised, and he will be in harness again in the next game. Armstrong, who is a clean player himself, appears to be unlucky, having had a shoulder broken last winter.—Toronto Star.

CLYSDALE NEWS

Special to the Review.

Clydesdale, Jan. 30.—Our regular January thaw has visited us again.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Huffman are the guests of Mrs. R. Gerrard.

The la grippe epidemic is playing havoc in our vicinity this last week.

A number of young people spent a very social evening at Mrs. Tom Maloney's on Tuesday evening. One young man brought a quantity of sugar and taffy was made. Mr. Charlie Hillcox was present with his violin and rendered some delightful music while the taffy was being prepared. Pulling the sticky mass certainly created great excitement.

Mrs. Duncan McPherson is visiting friends in Peterborough.

Dick Bullied was at Mr. Fred Bullied's this week.

Mr. Tom Trotter is erecting a fine new ice house.

Several of the citizens are engaged in hauling bark and poles to Coe Hill.

Mr. John Dafoe has a new position. He is engaged at Mr. Tom Mahoney's at present.

Mr. A. Blackburn is running the stage route from Coe Hill to Apsley now. The roads are in excellent condition for his fifty mile drive.

ATTACK ON FIELDING

public men in former years it had been alleged that contributions had been made by contractors or men receiving favors from the Government.

Mr. Fielding said that this friend continued to press the matter, on the ground that the Finance Minister was getting old, but he remained obdurate. Finally his friend said that he had been advised by his associates to say that they would guarantee that not one penny would be taken from any Government contractor or official, or from any one who would at any time be likely to have any favor to ask of the Government. In order that he might not have any sense of obligation to anyone whatever, it was proposed that the list of subscribers should not be made known. The object of secrecy thus was good, and not harmful in its purpose.

Mr. Fielding said that he had suggested that, should the time come when he might be out of office, he might care to know who had been his friends, but he was informed that even under such circumstances it was not proposed to reveal to him the names of the subscribers.

In view of these assurances and the plan having had the approval of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, he finally agreed to accept the testimonial.

"Those who know me best will believe," said Mr. Fielding in conclusion, "that there was nothing in this matter which any way reflected on my honor or the honor of my colleagues, or that will in any way affect my independent action as a member of this Parliament."

Mr. Fielding then bowed to the Speaker and walked out of the chamber amidst Liberal cheers.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier took straight issue with the good intentions of the mover of the resolution. He said it was a direct attack on the Minister of Finance. He claimed that no analogy could be drawn from the previous debate in 1891, when the gift of Sir Hector Langevin was under consideration and no imputation had been raised in the House at the propriety of the testimonial to Sir John Macdonald about 1887.

Admitting that publicity was the best thing to provide a safeguard in such matters, Sir Wilfrid thought, after the assurances had been given, Mr. Fielding was justified in his own conscience if he did not seek to obtain a list of the donors.

R. L. Borden then rose to reply. He said he had seen Sir Wilfrid Laurier in many tight places, but he had never seen him struggle so hard as in the present instance. Mr. Boyce had pointed out that there should be publicity in all matters of this kind, in order that no paper, Grit or Tory, would dare to utter a word of suspicion.

He accepted absolutely every word Mr. Fielding himself had said in his own defence, but believed that in stipulating for secrecy he had made a serious mistake. He ought to have taken the ground of full publicity, and he could not understand why the Minister of Finance should want to keep the names secret.

Windsor City Council has passed a resolution favoring municipal elections on New Year's Day.

BRIDGE INSPECTION.

To the Warden and members of the County Council;

Gentlemen,—Having examined the bridges authorized by this Council at the Fall Session I beg leave to report as follows,

On Dec. 7th, accompanied by the Warden, and Mr. Porter we visited O'Leary's bridge, situated over the Indian River in the township of Otonabee. This bridge is a wooden structure about 100 feet in length, built upon wooden piers. Some of the logs in piers are more or less decayed, but from the fact that no extra heavy traffic need pass over this bridge we concluded that with some slight incidental repairs that this bridge might last for a long time.

On the same date we also visited Allandale bridge. This is a steel structure built on stone abutments, as there is nothing about this bridge which would need any repairs except flooring, we think that this matter might be safely left in the hands of the local commissioners. At time of visit from the fact that several inches of snow covered the bridge we had no opportunity of giving the flooring a thorough examination.

On same date we also examined the Keene Station bridge. This is a wooden structure built on wooden piers. Centre piers are sagged and unlevel which leaves the flooring uneven. While we do not think that there is any immediate danger, we would recommend that this bridge be rebuilt as soon as possible from the fact that this is one of the main roads of the township and has a large amount of traffic.

On December 11th, accompanied by the Warden and Mr. Shaw, we visited Gannon's Narrows bridge, in reference to a pier which was referred to in report of Roads and Bridges at June session. From the fact that some steps had been taken along the line of interesting the Dominion Government in building a permanent structure we decided to await further development.

On Dec. 17th, the Warden, Mr. Howden and myself visited Payne's bridge in the township of Monaghan. This is a wooden structure which appears to be strongly built in every particular and barring accidents in our own opinion the bridge should be safe for some time yet.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Signed

CHRIS. J. DARLING,
Chairman Roads and Bridges.

ANNUAL MEETING OF ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

Flourishing Departments

The annual meeting of St. Paul's church was held in the school room last Wednesday evening. After devotional exercises, led by the pastor, Mr. R. E. Wood was elected chairman of the meeting. The reports of the different organizations were of an encouraging character, and showed a substantial growth throughout the year.

The first report was that of the Session which showed that the membership of the church now stands at 944. During the year 83 united by profession of faith, 23 by certificate. Mention was made by the Session of a gift of the late Miss Gow of $100, and of the late Mrs. John Livick of $1,000 to the Missions of St. Paul's church, and also the special gift of Mrs. T. G. Hazlett of $3,200 in connection with the seventy-fifth anniversary which was celebrated last May. The receipts for Missions for the year were—

Special for Mission in North-West	1,000.00
Special for Jewish Mission	12.35
Special for Persian Mission	32.61
Legacy from late Miss Gow for Home Missions	100.00
Legacy from late Mrs John Livick, divided equally between Home and Foreign	1,000.00
Envelope contributions with accrued bank interest	2,260.70
	$4405.66

The report of the Board of Managers was next presented, which showed an increase of $245.00 in the envelope collections for the year, and total receipts for all congregational purposes of $7,114.38. The congregation also undertook the erection of a manse during the year, which will cost in the neighborhood of $11,500, including the lot. The managers brought to the attention of the congregation the fact that an entire new heating system would have to be installed, and the electric wiring replaced during the present year, which will involve a big outlay.

The report of the Sabbath school has already been noted. The school contributed the sum of $530.21 for Missions, and it received for its current account, including the managers' grant of $200, the sum of $458.17.

The report of the Young People's Guild showed that organization to be in a flourishing condition, and the members are looking forward to another successful year.

The most encouraging report, however, was that which came from the Women's Foreign Missionary Society. This society is the banner society of the Presbyterian Church in Canada in giving, for the past year. It contributed the sum of $1 177.84.

Two new organizations that were formed during the past year submitted reports of the work they are doing—the Brotherhood of St. Paul and the Boy's Brotherhood of St. Andrew and Philip. The Brotherhood of St. Paul meets once a month, and has had a number of successful meetings throughout the year, at one of which the men of the congregation were treated to a banquet by the Ladies' Aid, when Mr. C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, gave an address. The Boys' Brotherhood is in charge of Mr. Sandford Hall, and has had an average attendance since its organization of 37. The boys are taking a deep interest in the work of the Brotherhood. Each boy uniting promises to observe two rules—the rule of prayer and the rule of service. The rule of prayer is to pray daily for the spread of Christ's kingdom among boys. The rule of service is to make an earnest effort each week to bring at least one boy within hearing of the Gospel of Christ, as set forth in the services of the church.

The report of the Ladies' Aid Society showed that they had had a very successful year contributing $449.43.

Alex Calder of G.T.R. Receives Bad News

Windsor Farmer's Awful Death In Hog Pen

In connection with the horrible end of James Calder, the brief account of which appeared in last night's issue of the Review, it is not generally known that the victim had a relative in the city.

Mr. Alex. Calder, of the G.T.R. freight shed, is a nephew of the dead man, and received a letter last evening containing details of the gruesome and almost unheard of affair.

It appears that the victim, who was a man of sixty-eight years of age, and had been subject to heart failure, went out to the pen of hogs where he was stricken with his old trouble and fell in the midst of the hogs. The letter stated that they literally ate the face and hands right off, and his clothing was in tatters. He was discovered by Mrs. Calder.

He has three brothers, living, two in Essex county, and one at Boissevan, Man.

OBITUARY

There are left, to mourn her loss, besides her sorrowing parents, a family of four sisters and two brothers, who are Annie, Bertha and Addie, of this city; Carrie, at home, and John and Edward, both residing at home.

At the time of writing no arrangements for the funeral were decided upon.

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 31.—A petition which already bears several hundred signatures is in circulation in the city appealing to the Pope to grant a decree which will make it obligatory for both the French and English languages to be taught in the parochial schools of Windsor.

Rev. Father J. E. Downey, of Immaculate Conception Church, in whose parish the movement is said to have originated, has declared the petition cannot be sent to Rome without express permission from his Lordship Bishop Fallon. As a result of the break between certain prominent French-Canadians in this county and the Bishop an attempt to carry the appeal over the head of the latter may be made.

PRESENTED WITH GOLD STICK PIN

Friends of Departing Young Man Honored Him — A Pleasant Social Time Spent

A pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mrs. S. L. Thompson, 505 Chamberlain Street last evening, on the occasion of wishing Mr. Thomas Campbell good-bye, who is leaving Peterboro to accept a position in Stratford. During the evening, a presentation of a gold stick pin set with pearls was made to Mr. Campbell, accompanied with an address which was read by Mr. Percy Castle.

THE ADDRESS

We deeply regret to hear that we are about to lose you from our happy circle. Your absence from our company will be greatly missed, your kindly actions and gentle manly manner, which you have shown so many times at our happy and social functions, have been greatly appreciated and will be difficult to replace.

We feel in our hearts that we cannot allow you to go away from us without showing the love and respect that we have toward you. We ask you to accept this small token not for its value but for the remembrance of your friends in Peterboro.

We all join hands and wish you good luck, success and prosperity in all your undertakings, the rest of your life.

FRIENDS.

A very suitable reply was made by Mr. Campbell.

The continuation of the evening was spent in singing, playing games and dancing. Altogether a most enjoyable evening was spent. Mr. Campbell leaves for Stratford to-day.

NORWOOD NEWS

Norwood, Jan. 31.—Arrangements have been completed for a grand masquerade carnival to be held here on Friday evening of this week. Valuable prizes are being offered for the various classes of costumes. The citizens of Norwood should show their appreciation of the manager's efforts to make the rink attractive by turning out and filling the rink at this, the first and probably the last, carnival of the season.

A HOCKEY MATCH.

The Norwood school boys went over to Hastings on Saturday afternoon last and played the return hockey match. Our boys had the tables turned on them, having been defeated to the tune of 10—2.

CHANGES AT POST OFFICE

The interior of the post office has been rearranged, so that the large amount of mail matter handled in Norwood may be more conveniently attended to by those in charge. The new arrangement will enable the postmaster and his assistants to maintain the satisfactory handling of the mails, notwithstanding the increased amount of work caused by the recent in the number of mails handled per day, and the increasing amount of matter passing through their hands.

FOUR WEEKS' COURSE.

Mr. H. C. Duff, district representative of the Agricultural Department, is organizing a class for the four weeks' course in agriculture. The class will commence work on the 14th of February. This course is free. Application for entrance should be addressed to Mr. H. C. Duff, Norwood.

Mr. Duff conducted a class last winter with very satisfactory results.

RURAL TELEPHONE.

The village auditors have completed their work and have handed their report to the council.

An effort is being made here to establish a rural telephone system. A meeting was held on Thursday evening last, at the agricultural rooms, to consider the matter. Quite a number of the residents of the village and surrounding country most interested in a project of this kind, were present, and while nothing definite was arrived at still the meeting was quite enthusiastic, and there will be further efforts made to bring the matter before the attention of the public.

LAID TO REST.

The funeral of the late John Knox, whose death was announced in the Review last week, took place from his late residence, Alma street, on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The cortege proceeded to the Methodist church, where Rev. Mr. Hannon, a lifelong friend of the deceased, preached the memorial sermon, basing his remarks on "In My Father's house are many mansions." The speaker referred very feelingly to the late Mr. Knox as a true Christian gentleman, and a citizen of sterling qualities.

Mr. Knox had been a lifelong Methodist, and one of the main pillars in the church here.

The pallbearers were members of his own family, viz., his three sons, Messrs. William, Andrew and Matthew, his grandson, Mr. Russel Knox, his son-in-law, Mr. Arthur Brethen, and his nephew, Mr. Robert Knox.

LATE REPORTS SAY 30 TO 60 PEOPLE KILLED IN EXPLOSION

Cargo of Dynamite Blew up With Terrible Effect in New York.

Damage in Money Amounts to Nearly a Million Dollars.

Special To The Review.

New York, Feb. 2. — The number of dead as the result of the explosion here yesterday, at the Jersey City pier, is placed at anywhere from thirty to sixty. Investigation to-day shows that the disaster was even more widespread in its effect than was supposed.

New York, Feb. 2.—A cargo of dynamite in transit from a freight car to the hold of a lighter moored at pier 7, Communipaw, N.J., let go at just one minute past noon yesterday, 150 yards south of the Jersey City terminal of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and in the widespread ruin that followed seven men are known to have been killed, seven more are known to be missing, hundreds were wounded, and varying reports leave from fifteen to twenty more unaccounted for.

Thirty seems to be a conservative estimate of the dead, and property damage will hardly fall below $750,000. The cause of the explosion is variously attributed to the dropping of a case of dynamite and to a boiler explosion on a boat.

The Jersey Central terminal was wrecked; three ferry boats in the slips were torn and splintered; lower Manhattan, across the river, was shaken from the street level to the top of the Singer tower; severe damage was done in Brooklyn, Station Island, and the immigrant detention station on Ellis Island; the shock was felt on Long Island in Amityville, 35 miles distant, and in New Jersey at Long Branch, 40 miles distant.

The lighter Whistler, owned by the American Storage & Delivery Co. of New York, was so badly shattered that she sank with her crew of two, while the Swedish steel bark Entine Engrid, a stone's throw to the south, was stripped of her rigging and the lives of two deckhands aboard snuffed out. Fragments of one man's head were found swinging high on a tangled piece of rope.

The Katherine W. was tied to the outer end of the pier, and a crew of deck hands were unloading a consignment of fifty pound boxes from two freight cars to the lighter when the crash came. Theoretically, dynamite will not let go either shock or fire, but only from a combination of both—the detonation produced by a percussion cap. What followed is the best possible example of the whimsies of dynamite.

The Katherine with her crew of seven simply disappeared; not a splinter of her has been found. The freight car went up in a puff of dust. On the rear deck of the bark Entine, Engineer Edward found a pair of iron trucks. They may be the trucks of the dynamite car, or of one of the other four cars standing near that were also torn to bits.

Fifty yards back stood another car of dynamite. The explosion ripped the roof off it, and broke in the doors, but the dynamite itself held true and rested quiescent in its wooden boxes. On board the Entine the steel mizzen-mast snapped off below the lower yard and tangled wreckage came tumbling about the decks. Everything abaft the mizzen-mast was leveled flat, but the steel plates of the hull held stoutly and showed not even a mark.

For 100 feet the pier-end itself was utterly demolished. The planking seemed to have been ground to powder. Over the broken edges twisted steel rails of track.

NO TRUTH IN THE STORY

Robin Bank Wreck and Farmers' Bank Affair.

No Connection Between the Two Cases.

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Feb. 2.—The Crown Attorney, Mr. Corley, denies that there is any truth in the story that has emanated from New York that Travers' confession shows some connection between the farmers' Bank Affair and the doings of John Robin, who is being held in New York, charged with bank wrecking. Mr. Corley says that there is no connection in any way between the two cases.

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Feb. 2. The four Provisional directors of the Farmers Bank Ferguson, Fraser, Watson and Lown appeared in police court this morning charged with taking $10,000 unlawfully. It was shown that several important cheques were missing, and an adjournment was made to find what disposition was made of the $42,000 spent in organization.

FINE HOSPITAL IS NOW OPEN

Petroiea Received Handsome Gift From Englehart.

Petrolea, Feb. 2. The Charlotte Eleanor Englehart Hospital was formally opened Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The hospital itself, a very fine building, is situated on the brow of an incline, and a fine view is obtained of the surrounding country across the stream that runs past the foot of the garden, on the further side of which the golf links stretch. A fine conservatory is attached to the building, and every convenience is provided that could be suggested.

The formal opening consisted of a short service, which Rev. Canon Craig announced, was held at the request of the hospital committee, in accordance with the wishes of Mr. Englehart. The doxology was sung, and after a reading of the Scripture by Rev. Mr. Grimshaw, Rev. Dr. McNair delivered a prayer, following by reading of the Bible by Mr. Knight of the Salvation Army. Rev. Mr. Garbutt then prayed, and the service was closed by Rev. Father Hussey pronouncing the benediction.

Mr. Englehart then made a few remarks and presented Mayor Pollard with the documents by which the town takes possession of the premises. Mayor Pollard read an address of appreciation, in which the town recognized the generosity of Mr. Englehart.

ANOTHER DREADNOUGHT IS ADDED TO BRITISH NAVY

Bulwarks of the Deep Receive Powerful Addition —Thunderer is Name.

London, Feb. 2.—The Thunderer, the seventeenth British Dreadnought and the fourth of the super-Dreadnought type was successfully launched from the yards of the Thames Iron Works Co. at Canningtown yesterday. The Archbishop of Canterbury conducted the religious services preceding the christening by Mrs. Davidson.

Fifteen thousand people, many of whom had gone by special train from this city, witnessed the ceremonies and cheered wildly as the great fighter woke to life and plunged into the water.

The Thunderer has a displacement of 22,680 tons, and will be equipped with turbines with a total of 27,000 horse-power. She is expected to make a speed of 21 knots an hour. The vessel is 584 feet in length and is armed with ten 13.5-inch guns, and 24 4-inch guns. She is the largest vessel ever launched so far up the Thames. Three thousand workmen were employed in her construction.

HE FEARS THE PLAGUE

Berlin, Feb. 2.—It was officially announced to-day, that in view of the plague epidemic in the Far East, the tour of Crown Prince Frederick William will be terminated at Calcutta, from which city he will return home, the government and the Crown Prince at Bankok, Pekin, and Tokio, and also to the United States and the Netherlands, to whose colonies a visit had been planned.

The abandonment of the trip was determined upon the initiative of Chancellor von Bethmann-Holweg, who made representations to the Emperor setting forth that there was danger in its continuance.

CONMEE TALKED IN VAIN FOR TWO HOURS ON POWER BILL

Sunny Jim's Measure is a Private Bill — Other Matters in the Commons.

Ottawa, Feb. 2.—The proceedings of the House of Commons yesterday were unusually barren of interest. James Conmee tried to get his bill to amend the act respecting the Ontario & Minnesota Power Co. introduced as a public bill, but the Speaker ruled that it was a private bill and must be treated accordingly. He was ruled out of order after he had spoken for two hours on the subject.

Hon. Frank Oliver introduced a bill to amend the Dominion Lands Act. Its object is to render it possible to lease as well as sell school lands. It was read a first time.

Mr. Verville's much amended bill to compel an eight-hour day on public works was talked out.

J. D. Taylor (New Westminster) said that in fairness to the House it should be made clear whether the petitions in favor of the bill related to the original measure, or the bill in its amended form. When Mr. Taylor referred to Prof. Skelton, who compiled information for the eight-hour bill of last session, as the Minister's own witness, Mr. King objected. He said Prof. Skelton, with the approval of the committee, had been engaged by him during the Christmas recess to proceed with the work. Mr. Taylor had endeavored to mislead the House.

There were cries of order, and the Minister withdrew the statement.

In conclusion, Mr. Taylor expressed regret that the recommendations made by Prof. Skelton had not been embodied in the bill.

William Thoburn (North Lanark) said he could not understand the distinction which had been made between men working on public works and on Government buildings. He doubted if the bill would benefit one per cent. of the laboring men of Canada. Mr Thoburn read a letter he had received from the Trades and Labor Council of Carlton Place, in which the bill was severely criticized, and the Minister of Labor accused of curtailing the measure, in order to bring discredit on Mr. Verville as the representative of the laboring men. He said he would be willing to support a real eight-hour day measure, but not this bill in its present form.

The Height of Folly.

Montreal, Feb. 2.—The damming of the Long Sault Rapids, the project for which the Illuminum Co. of the United States is seeking authorization at Washington and Ottawa, does not find much favor with Mr. John Kennedy, the consulting engineer of the Montreal Harbor Commission. He says it would be the height of folly to hand over to this American corporation the key of the navigable St. Lawrence, and to give into the keeping of others the future of the route on which we have spent so many millions of dollars in channels and canals.

Charged With False Pretences.

Chatham, Feb. 2.—Thomas A. Morehead, a Detroit promoter, was hauled into the Police Court yesterday afternoon by Samuel Bellamy, charged with obtaining money under false pretences. Five charges were placed against him.

Bellamy is a retired farmer. Morehead, it is alleged, claimed to be selling stock for an American automobile company, and secured promissory notes from him to the amount of $800.

Plague at Harbin, Manchuria Works Terrible Havoc—Efforts to Stamp Out Plague Unavailing.

Special to the Review.

Harbin, Manchuria, Feb. 2.—The bodies of five hundred victims of the bubonic plague were piled in a great pyramid here to-day and cremated. The plague is spreading rapidly, and deaths are occuring on every hand.

The situation is rapidly becoming desperate and the residents are barricading themselves in, to avoid infection. If the present rate of morality keeps on there will be another five hundred bodies soon for the funeral pyre. The cremation was a most unpleasant spectacle, but the authorities have decided that it is the only method of keeping infection from those who have succumbed to the plague, down to a minimum.

Unearned Increment.

Berlin, Feb. 2.—The Reichstag yesterday passed the third reading of the bill taxing unearned increment by a vote of 199 to 93. Cities and other local municipalities will retain forty per cent. of the proceeds derived from the next taxation, and also may collect an additional tax in the form of a supplementary percentage. It is estimated that the German Empire as a result of the measure will obtain $5,000,000 annually.

The Conservative members held a caucus last evening, at which the trade arrangement was discussed at length. The caucus adjourned until this afternoon.

SENATE TO TALK BILL TO DEATH

United States Men Plan to Block the Agreement.

Washington, Feb. 2—President Taft's announcement yesterday that the southern tour planned for early next month would be cancelled with the exception of the visit to Atlanta on March 10, started political tongues wagging with rumors that his purpose was to prepare for a possible extra session of Congress, in case the present session fails to enact the reciprocity agreement between the United States and Canada. He has said that he hopes to see it passed before March 4.

Fears have been expressed, however, that the Senate "will talk the measure to death" or kill it in some other way, although it is believed the House, probably with the aid of the Democrats, will pass it.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME

I hope no one who saw the Fourth Estate last night will think we use such awful language around the Review. Oh, dear, no!

Marriage gets a man into an awful lot of trouble, but in the case of King George, the fact that he didn't get married at Malta, got him into a lot.

We wonder if the presence of the Duke of Connaught at Ottawa will have the effect of stopping the parliamentary squabbles.

HYDRO MEN LET ALONE

Commission Will Retain Control of Power.

O. R. & M. Board Will Not Have New Duties.

Sir James Whitney Will Not Press the Matter.

Toronto, Feb. 2.—Not for the next two years at least will the control of the Hydro-Electric Power be diverted to any rival of the commission. Sir James Whitney, with characteristic frankness and promptitude, proclaimed the important information on the floor of the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon, to a House which listened with evident interest to his obviously welcome and significant address.

When the leader of the Government gave precedence to Government order No. 21: "Bill No. 102, to amend the Power Commission Act and the Ontario Railway and Municipal Act, 1906." Sir James said that when the bill was under consideration last year there was some question whether jurisdiction over the power transmission system should rest with the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board or the Hydro-Electric Commission. This was altogether a new question. Reasons for each side of the proposition were given. It was difficult to define what the proper legislation should be.

Doubts had been expressed regarding the course to be taken. He had discussed the matter with some of the engineers interested in and connected with the transmission plan, who had pointed out that in their opinion it was important that at least a portion of the jurisdiction should be allowed to remain with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, if not all of it, at any rate, until the final completion of the transmission lines and the handing over the lines to the municipalities. It was quite possible, indeed probable, that further construction work would be entered upon by the Hydro-Electric Commission, and many additional miles of transmission line would be necessary, therefore, having regard to the doubt respecting jurisdiction and to the necessity which, according to the engineers, existed for the Hydro-Electric Commission to have some jurisdiction, notably that of inspection, and to the fact that further construction would be entered upon, and as it would be a couple of years before the final work would be completed, he was not prepared to press this bill in its present shape.

Sir James, in concluding, said that he would let the bill stand on the order paper for a few weeks at least, until he could have further consultation with the engineers, because, whatever the final form, might be, there were several provisions which experience might show the necessity of adding.

Hon. A. G. MacKay—"Are we to understand that the bill in its present form takes the power from the Hydro-Electric Commission and gives it to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board?"

Sir James—"Certainly, certainly, in its present form, yes."

J. W. Johnston (West Hastings) gave notice of a bill to prevent the issuing of watered stock in certain companies. The bill is designed to prohibit the issuing of bonus or free stock. Mr. Johnson takes the position that the increased cost of living is being keenly felt by the great mass of the people. There are certain contributing causes that are remote and not easily defined, but there are factors in the existing situation that can be easily ascertained, and can be removed, at least so far as the incorporation of future companies is concerned, by legislation.

One of these factors is the practice now so prevalent of issuing watered stock.

The consuming population is being bled by companies that are charging for their products such prices as not only yield a dividend upon stock that was paid for, but also upon stock for which neither money, property, nor service was rendered. There are articles of food, which, the member for West Hasting said, are consumed by every family that have, through the determination of companies to acquire unfair profits, increased in price fifty per cent. within two years.

WHY THEY WON'T

The Globe says—"The News tells its readers that by refusing to ratify the reciprocity agreement Washington may "save Canada from herself." That does not sound quite right. Why should Washington refuse to pass an agreement that is all in its own favor according to The News?"

The Toronto News is amply able to take care of itself with the Globe, but we don't mind pointing out that there are a lot of people in the United States who are politically cockeyed, just as are the Globe and its reciprocity friends. The agreement is certainly very much to the advantage of the United States, from the Canadian viewpoint, but if the Washington representatives can't see it, so much the better for Canada.

A MONTREAL VIEW

Geo. L. Cains, a Montreal business man, and president of the Montreal Board of Trade, says that reciprocity would be suicidal. He summarises the situation as follows;

"We, in Montreal, are perhaps more vitally interested in this question than any other part of the Dominion. Not only have we the three great trans-continental lines centering in this city, but the country has spent enormous sums of money in equipping our port so that we may be able to properly handle not only the present large traffic but also that increase which we are entitled to expect in the future.

"It cannot be doubted that the proposed arrangement received far more attentive study in the United States than it has in Canada. We could not believe that our government would ever seriously consider the question of reciprocity, and certainly not without consulting those interests which will be adversely affected. Probably it is realized at Ottawa that this would involve a most extensive enquiry, as I am convinced that this is not a matter which concerns one section of the country, but if carried to its legitimate conclusion, will be suicidal to the trade interests of Canada."

CANADIAN CLUBS

The opposition to the conclusion of the reciprocity treaty by Canada is developing strongly. Far-sighted Canadians view it with great distrust, as likely to have a serious affect on Canadian nationalism, and our connection with the empire. From every hand, boards of trade, prominent publicists, patriotic bodies, are coming strong protests against the conclusion of an agreement that will throw Canadian fortunes very largely into the hands of the United States. Canada has done very well under the present system. It has grown at a rate not equalled by any other people on the face of the earth. It has a magnificent future. It is an Eldorado for the capitalist seeking safe and profitable employment for his money.

Yet there are people who would throw away this substance, and snatch at the shadow of greater prosperity with the United States. Sir Gilbert Parker, a patriotic Canadian, says that the situation is DESPERATELY SERIOUS. The people of Britain are commencing to console themselves with the reflection that there are still left some parts of the empire which desire to remain in close touch with the motherland.

The Canadian clubs of this conutry, a chain of which extend from sea to sea in Canada, do not touch political or controversial subjects as a rule, but in a case where the patriotism of Canada is being imperilled by a group of economic faddists—are they true to the object of their being in remaining silent? Why do they not rise and proclaim themselves on this subject? It is admitted that the situation is a serious one. Are the Canadian clubs so afraid of the bogey of political differences that they cannot unite to assert their determination to stand up for imperialism, and the British connection?

We have a Canadian Club in Peterborough, a very useful institution, and an active one. Will it remain mum in the face of the new national danger?

GIFT TO FIELDING

In the House of Commons on Tuesday the gift of $120,000 to Finance Minister Fielding was severely criticised by the members of the Opposition, led by Mr. Boyce, of Algoma. They demanded publicity of the names of subscribers to the fund. They presented their resolution couched in the precise words of Premier Laurier, used in 1891, and then was afforded the edifying spectacle of the Premier eating his own words in an attempt to shield his colleague.

We have stated before that we do not believe that Mr. Fielding was personally dishonest in the matter. The purse came to him as a deserving man, but the time was inopportune. Had he been retiring from the finance minister's portfolio, there is no member on either side of the House who would not have heartily sympathized with the effort to assist Mr. Fielding after a life of labor in Canada's interest. But the subscribers to the fund got the testimonial and purse ready at a time when Mr. Fielding could not be unconscious of the favors, and in this particular position, it does not look well.

That the members of the Liberal party feel that this is wrong in principle—though Mr. Fielding may be quite innocent—is shown by extracts from speeches by the Premier, and by Sir Richard Cartwright.

In 1891 Sir Wilfrid Laurier, then in opposition, discussed a similar case. He said:

> "That in order to maintain this principle the source of any gifts of money to Ministers of the Crown ought not to be surrounded with secrecy, and that authentic statement of the names of the donors should forthwith be made public."

And in 1891, Sir Richard Cartwright said:

> "The acceptance of gifts or testimonials of any kind on the part of Ministers of the Crown or of any of their families from contractors, Government officials, or other persons having pecuniary relations with the Government, is entirely opposed to sound principals of administration, and is calculated to bring Parliamentary Government into contempt, and that the example thus given tends to demoralize the officials serving under Ministers, who have accepted or permitted the acceptance of gifts or testimonials as aforesaid."

The names of the donors ought to be published, since the public will then be in a full position to judge who might be the beneficiaries of any act of Mr. Fielding's as finance minister, and judge whether there was any favoritism, or any return of the compliment.

Public men cannot be too careful in matters like this, and it is a pity that a man like Mr. Fielding should in accepting the gift—from secret sources—lay himself open to the stigma attaching to the transaction.

EDITORIAL NOTES

They say a still tongue indicates a wise head. Silent columns are more eloquent than much talk on occasion.

The elevating effect of a raise in pay would be quite noticeable among the firemen, if the committee and council would be generous.

The Kingston Standard contains a very odd item, dated Peterborough. It is that a local editor has declined an invitation to fly, in an aeroplane with a commercial traveller. No reflection is meant on the traveller, of course: simply an editor's objection to leaving the solid earth. We don't know the editor, but his ideas on the subject are well grounded at least.

We believe that the firemen are entitled to more money than they are getting from the city. Pay ranging from $500 to $575 a year is not enough to enable the city to retain the services of first-class men, and the cost of living has certainly made great advances since this rate of pay was instituted. We believe that the advance in pay recommended by the chief would meet with general sympathy, meaning only $2.50 or so more expense to the city.

"The Fourth Estate" gave some good Peterborough people an idea of the troubles of a newspaper career. A newspaper is not slapped together holus bolus, but is the result of a great system, and hard labor, skilfully directed. And the funny part of it all is that the less a man knows about newspaper work the more confident he is in his ability to vastly improve on the efforts of the poor professional. Some day, perhaps, we will let the devil (printer's) edit the paper. Then——.

CAVAN NEWS

Cavan, Feb. 2.—A rather serious accident happened to Mr. Isaac Morton last week, when he was endeavoring to draw wood from a neighbor's. It appears that he had a young colt hitched up with another horse, and was engaged in loading up when the breast strap of the colt's harness broke, with the result that the animal became startled and broke away with its mate. Mr. Morton was badly injured in trying to arrest their speedy flight and was unable to perform his necessary duties the following day.

$300 FOR SCHOOL.

There is a great amount of comment abroad these days over the seemingly unnecessary sum of money that was voted for by the ratepayers of the Beechwood school section. Such an insignificant sum of $300 is simply appaling. There is talk of displacing the present members of the School Board, though why they should, we fail to see.

Mr. Staples of the North-west spent Friday evening with his family at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chris. Sisson.

Mrs. A. B. Kennedy was the hostess of a sumptuous dinner, given at the residence of Mr. A. B. Kennedy last Friday. Among the guests were Mrs. Chris. Sisson, Miss Anne Kennedy, Miss Winnie Sisson, Mr. James and Miss E. Kennedy.

Clifford Sisson and a party of young people went sleigh-riding to Otonabee last Wednesday. On Tuesday, with his cousin Cecil, and brother, he went to Bethany skating carnival.

OYSTER SUPPER.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church, an oyster supper and entertainment will be given in the school room of above church next Monday, Feb. 6. Talented artists from Toronto have been engaged for the evening's program. Special sermons will be preached next Sunday by a former pastor.

BETHANY

Bethany, Feb. 2.—A grand skating carnival was held on the town rink last Tuesday night, and the manager, Mr. Anson Leonard, is to be congratulated on the big success that attended his efforts. There were sleigh parties, cutters, etc., innumerable arriving from all parts of the county from Millbrook, Peterborough, Cavanville, Janetville and other places. Walter Price won the prize in the gents' race, and Albert Neil in the boys'. The best costume was that of Mr. Wm. Hannah as a Roman Soldier, and was therefore accorded first prize. The proceeds expelled all doubts of the evening being a failure, amounting as they did to well over thirty-five dollars.

ORANGEMEN ENTERTAIN.

The Orangemen of L.O.L. No. 1022, Bethany, propose holding an oyster supper Friday, Feb. 3rd, to be followed by a great public demonstration in the town hall, when several gentlemen qualified to speak on the subject, "Shall Ontario be English-speaking or French?" The following are a few of the speakers:—Bro. Col. Sam Hughes, Esq., M.P.; Bro. Jonas Thornton, Esq., M.P., and Bro. J. J. Preston, Esq., M.L.A.

Mr. Alex. Monk, having enlarged his premises, is now prepared to furnish sets of harness or repairs of all kinds to all who may be in need.

PERSONAL.

Among those who were present at the carnival from Millbrook we noticed the Misses Olive Howell, Pearl Nattrass and Messrs. Norman Hunter, Wm. Johnson and Norm. Mitchell.

Miss Jessie Arnot, of Fleetwood, is visiting at the home of the Rev. Jas. McMullen, Frankford. On her way home she will be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Irwin, of Cobourg.

We are pleased to say that Mr. Walter Mitchell, who was hurt while skating here last Tuesday, is himself again, no serious developments having taken place.

Mr. Seth Lamb was a visitor at Mr. Wilkinson's last week.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Feb. 1.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable to-day was very quiet. Demand was quieter, and bids were unchanged to 1½d lower. The market for Canadian western oats was again weaker, and prices show a further decline of ¼c to ½c per bushel. There was some demand for Ontario malting barley, and bids of 68c were made for round lots. The foreign demand for spring wheat flour showed some improvement, but the bids were out of line with millers' views. A fair local trade continues to be done. Millfeed is still scarce and firm. Dressed hogs are easy, in sympathy with the further decline in prices for live hogs. Refined sugar has declined 10c per 100 lbs., to $4.25 for standard granulated.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 40c to 40½c, car lots, ex-store; extra No. 1 feed, 39c to 39½c; No. 3 C.W., 38½c to 38¾c; No. 2 local white, 37½c to 38c; No. 3 local white, 36½c to 37c; No. 4 local white, 35½c to 36c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Feb. 1.—Receipts of live stock at the City Market were 56 carloads, consisting of 414 cattle, 1164 hogs, 272 sheep and lambs, 30 calves and 2 horses.

Butchers.

Geo. Rowntree bought 185 cattle for the Harris Abattoir Company, as follows: Butchers' steers and heifers, $5.65 to $6.20; cows, $2.25 to $5.10, bulls, $4.40 to $5.10. Those quoted at $6.20 were a load of 1250-lb. cattle of choice quality, good enough for export, the best cattle on the market.

Milkers and Springers.

Prices ranged at from $40 to $70, and one brought $75.

Veal Calves.

Prices unchanged, at $3.50 to $8 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Wesley Dunn quoted prices as follows: Sheep, ewes, $4 to $4.50; rams, $3 to $3.50; lambs, $6 to $6.25. One or two lots of selected light lambs brought a little more.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, $7.50, and $7.15 to drovers, for hogs, f.o.b. cars at country points, or $7 to the farmer.

Heavy, thick, fat hogs will be taken only at a reduction of 25c per cwt. off these prices.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Feb. 1.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the offerings this morning were 700 cattle, 75 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 200 calves. There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being well maintained at the advance noted on Monday.

The demand was fairly good, and the supply was ample to fill all requirements, but there were choice beeves on the market, consequently the top figure realized was 6¼c for the best steers, while the lower grades sold somewhat down, to 3c per pound. Cows were fairly plentiful which met with a fair sale at prices ranging from 3c to 5c per pound, as to quality, and bulls sold at from 3½c to 5¼c per pound, the outside figure being obtained for a few choice heavyweights.

Supplies of sheep and lambs were very small, but, notwithstanding this, the market for sheep was weaker, and prices show a decline of ¼c per pound, with sales of a few small lots at 4c to 4½c per pound. Lambs were steady at 6c to 6½c per pound. A weaker feeling prevailed in the market for hogs, and prices scored a further decline of 15c to 25c per 100 pounds, on account of the continued liberal supplies coming forward. At this reduction the demand from packers was fair, and sales were made at $7.50 to $7.75 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars. A fairly active trade was done in calves at prices ranging from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

The Perfume of The Lady In Black

By GASTON LEROUX Author of "The Mystery of the Yellow Room."

* * * * * * *

In the train en route for Cannes the boy was so quiet that I could not even hear him breathing.

"Do you know what I have been thinking of?" he said. "Of the dispatch that came to us from Bourg and was signed 'Darzac' and the other dispatch which came from Valence and was signed 'Stangerson.'

"And the more I think of them the stranger they seem to me. At Bourg M. and Mme. Darzac were not with Stangerson, who left them at Dijon. Besides, the dispatch says, 'We are going to rejoin Stangerson.' But the Stangerson dispatch proves that Stangerson, who had continued on his journey toward Marseilles, is again with the Darzacs. The Darzacs might have rejoined Stangerson on the way to Marseilles, but if that were so the professor must have stopped on the road. Why was this?"

We consulted the time table.

Finally we reasoned that Darzac must have sent his wire from Bourg one minute before leaving for Lyons by the 9:29 train. But this train reached Lyons at 10:23 o'clock, while Stangerson's train reached Lyons at 10:24. After changing their plans and leaving the train at Bourg, M. and Mme. Darzac must have rejoined Stangerson at Lyons, which they reached one minute before him. Now, what had upset their plans? We could only think of the most terrible hypotheses, every one of which, alas, had as its basis the reappearance of Larsan. The fact which gave the greatest color to this idea was the desire expressed by each of our friends not to frighten any one. Darzac in his message, Mme. Darzac in hers, had not endeavored to conceal the gravity of the situation. As to Stangerson, we asked ourselves whether he had been made aware of the new developments.

When we reached Toulon our impatience became extreme, and at Cannes we were scarcely surprised at all to see Darzac upon the platform, anxiously looking for us. He could scarcely have received the dispatch which Rouletabille had sent him from Dijon, announcing the hour at which we would reach Mentone. Having arrived there with Mme. Darzac and M. Stangerson the day before at 10 o'clock in the morning, he must have left Mentone almost at once and have come to meet us at Cannes. His face looked worn. Somehow it frightened us only to look at him.

"Trouble?" questioned Rouletabille briefly.

"No, not yet," was the reply.

"God be praised!" exclaimed Rouletabille, heaving a deep sigh. "We have come in time!"

Darzac pressed both our hands in silence, following us into our compartment, in which we locked ourselves, taking care to draw the curtains.

Our friend's voice trembled.

"Well," he said, "he is not dead. I have seen him."

"And has Mme. Darzac seen him?"

"Alas, yes! But it is necessary that we should use every means to make her believe that it was an illusion. I could not bear it if she were to lose her mind again, poor girl! Ah, my friends, what has this man come back to do to us?"

I looked at Rouletabille. His face was even more full of grief than that of Darzac. There was a brief pause, and then Darzac spoke again:

"Listen! This man must disappear—he must be got rid of! We must ask what it is that he wants. If he will not go I shall kill him. It is very simple. Don't you think so too?"

We could not answer. Darzac told us that the event which had changed the face of his existence had taken place at Bourg. Two compartments of the sleeping car had been reserved by Darzac, and these compartments were joined by a little dressing room. In one had been placed the traveling bag with the toilet articles of Mme. Darzac and in the other the smaller packages. It was in the latter compartment that the Darzacs and Professor Stangerson had traveled from Paris to Dijon, where the three had left the train and had dined at the buffet. They had arrived at 6:27 o'clock, exactly on time, and M. Stangerson had left Dijon at eight minutes after 7 and the Darzacs at just 7 o'clock.

The professor had bidden adieu to his daughter and his son-in-law upon the platform of the station. The Darzacs had returned to one of their compartments and remained at the window, chatting with the professor until the train started. As it steamed out the pair waved their hands to Stangerson, who was standing on the platform throwing kisses.

From Dijon to Bourg neither M. nor Mme. Darzac had occasion to enter the adjacent compartment, where Mme. Darzac's night bag had been placed. The door had not been locked either upon the outside with a key by the porter nor on the inside with the bolt by the Darzacs. The curtain of the glass door had been drawn over the pane from the inside by M. Darzac in such a way that no one could look into the compartment from the corridor. But the curtain between the two compartments had not been drawn. All of these circumstances were brought out by the questions asked by Rouletabille of M. Darzac.

When they reached Bourg our travelers learned that on account of an accident on the line at Culoz the train would be delayed for an hour and a half. M. and Mme. Darzac alighted and took a stroll on the platform. Darzac while talking with his wife mentioned the fact that he had forgotten to write important letters before leaving Paris. Both entered the buffet, and Darzac asked for writing materials. Mathilde sat beside him for a few moments and then remarked that she would take a little walk through the station while he finished his letters.

"Very well," replied Darzac. "As soon as I have finished I will join you."

From that point I will quote Darzac's own words.

"I had finished writing," he said, "and I arose to go and look for Mathilde when I saw her approaching the buffet pallid and trembling. As soon as she perceived me she uttered a shriek and threw herself into my arms. 'Oh, my God,' she cried, 'oh, my God!' It seemed impossible for her to utter any other words. She was shaking from head to foot. I tried to calm her, and I begged her to take some restorative. Her teeth chattered as though she had an ague. At length she told me that she had started to walk about the station, but that she had not dared to go far lest I should finish my writing and look for her. Then she went upon the platform, when she noticed the sleeping car porters making up the bed in a berth near our own. She remembered immediately that her night traveling bag, in which she had put her jewels, was standing unlocked, and she decided to go and lock it up without delay. She entered the car, walked down the corridor and came to the glass door of the compartment reserved for her. She opened the door and instantly uttered a cry of horror. No one heard her, for there was no one in that part of the car, and a train which passed at that moment drowned the sound of her voice with the clamor of the locomotive. What had happened to alarm her?

"The little door opening upon the dressing cabinet was half drawn toward the interior of the [illegible]tion, cutting off diagonally the view of whoever might enter. This little door was ornamented by a mirror. There in the glass Mathilde beheld the face of Larsan."

CHAPTER IV.

"She Will Go Mad Again!"

"WHEN she had told me these things," Darzac continued, "my first care was to try to convince her that she was laboring under some hideous delusion. Wasn't Larsan dead and buried? I offered to accompany Mathilde at once to the compartment in order to prove to her that she had been the victim of a hallucination. She was bitterly opposed to the idea, crying out that neither she nor I must ever enter the compartment again. She said that she remembered Larsan's face perfectly—that it had appeared before her twice under such circumstances as would impress it indelibly upon her memory, even if she were to live for a century—once during the strange scene in the gallery and again at the moment when they came into her sickroom to place me under arrest. And then, now that she knew who Larsan was, it was not only the features of the secret service agent that she had recognized, but the dreaded countenance of the man who had pursued her for years.

"She cried out that she could swear on her life and on mine that she had seen Ballmeyer—alive in the glass, with the smooth face of Larsan.

"I explained to the superintendent that my wife had been frightened at something she fancied that she had seen while alone in our compartment, and I begged him to keep her in his office while I went myself to discover what it was that she had seen.

"And then, my friends," continued Robert Darzac, his voice beginning to tremble, "I left the superintendent's office, but I had no sooner got out of the room than I went back and slammed the door behind me. I, too, had seen Larsan. My wife had had no illusion. Larsan was there in the station upon the platform outside that door. He was there in front of the superintendent's door, standing under a gas jet. Evidently he expected us and was waiting for us. He made no effort to hide himself. On the contrary, any one would have declared that he had stationed himself there for the express purpose of being seen.

"Mathilde was staring at me, her great eyes wide open, speechless, as though she were a somnambulist. In a moment, however, she came back to herself sufficiently to ask me whether it were far from Bourg to Lyons. At the same time she begged me to give orders about our baggage and asked me to accede to her desire to rejoin her father as soon as possible. I immediately entered into her plans. Besides, now that I had seen Larsan with my own eyes, I knew well that the long honeymoon trip which we had planned must be given up, and, my dear boy," went on Darzac, turning to Rouletabille, "I became possessed with the idea that we were running the risk of some mysterious danger from which you alone could rescue us, if not already too late. Mathilde was grateful to me for the readiness with which I fell in with her wish to join her father when I told her that in a few minutes we would be on board the 9:29 train, which reaches Lyons at about 10 o'clock, and we discovered that we would overtake M. Stangerson himself at that point. I will pass over his amazement when he beheld us upon the platform of the station at Lyons. Mathilde explained to him that on account of a serious accident which had closed the line at Culoz we had decided to join him and spend a few days with him at the home of Arthur Rance and his young wife, as we had before been entreated to do by this friend."

I here interrupted M. Darzac's narrative to recall to the memory of the reader of "The Mystery of the Yellow Room" the fact that Arthur William Rance had for many years cherished a hopeless devotion for Mlle. Stangerson, but had at last overcome it and married a beautiful American girl who knew nothing of the mysterious adventures of the professor's daughter.

After the affair at the Glandier and while Mlle. Stangerson was still a patient in a private asylum near Paris, where the treatment restored her to health and reason, we heard one fine day that Rance was about to wed the niece of an old professor of geology at the Academy of Science in Philadelphia. Those who had known of his luckless passion for Mathilde and had gauged its depths by the excess with which it was displayed believed that Rance was marrying in desperation and prophesied little happiness for the union. They were living at Rochers Rouges in the old castle on the peninsula of Hercules.

Darzac continued his story:

"When we had given these explanations to M. Stangerson my wife and I saw that he seemed to understand very little of what we had said, and he appeared very mournful. Her father saw that something had happened since we had left him which we were concealing from him. Mathilde began to talk of the ceremony of the morning, and in that way the conversation came around to you, my young friend"—and again Darzac addressed himself to Rouletabille—"and I took the occasion to say to M. Stangerson that since your vacation was just beginning at the time that we were all going to Mentone you might be pleased with an invitation that would give you the chance of spending your holiday in our society. There was, I said, plenty of room at Rochers Rouges, and I was certain that M. Arthur Rance and his bride would extend to you a cordial welcome. While I was speaking Mathilde looked gratefully at me and pressed my hand tenderly. Thus it happened that when we reached Valence I had M. Stangerson write the dispatch which you must have received. While her father rested in his compartments next to ours Mathilde opened my traveling bag and took out my revolver, saying, 'If he should attack us you must defend yourself.' Ah, what a night we passed! I longed to console her, to comfort her, but I found no words. And when once I attempted to speak she made a gesture so full of misery and desolation that I realized that I would be far kinder if I kept silence."

This was Darzac's story. We felt, Rouletabille and myself, that the narrative was so important that we both resolved on arriving at Mentone that we would write it down from memory. At the station of Mentone Garavan they found Arthur Rance, who was astonished at beholding the bride and bridegroom. But when he was told that they intended to spend a few days with him he was delighted. Arthur Rance had not, even after his marriage to Miss Edith Prescott, been able to overcome the extreme reserve with which Darzac had always treated him.

So far as Darzac was concerned, the terror which he felt was increased by news brought to us by Arthur Rance when he met us at Nice. But before this there had occurred a little incident which I cannot pass by in silence. As soon as we reached the Nice station I had jumped from the train and hurried into the telegraph office to ask whether there was any message for me. A dispatch was handed to me, and without opening it I went back to Darzac and Rouletabille.

"Read this," I said to the young reporter.

Rouletabille opened the envelope and read:

"Brignolles has not been away from Paris since April 6. This is an absolute certainty."

Rouletabille then said:

To be continued.

Building Aeroplane In Toronto.

Toronto, Feb. 2.—The first aeroplane to be built in this city is now under construction by H. B. Wills, director of the Ontario Motor League, by Mr. Louis Rea, who has made a special study of aeronautics. An arrangement has just been made by the manager of the coming automobile show in the Armories by which the machine will be in the show, and Mr. Rea will carry on the construction of it during the show.

GOES BEFORE JURY.

Colonel Munro Is Refused Summary Consideration.

Toronto, Feb. 2.—Colonel Munro, president of the defunct Farmers' Bank will be tried before a jury.

It was well toward noon when the slate at the Police Court was sufficiently cleared to enable Col. Denison to turn his attention to the case of Col. Munro.

The accused, who was absent when the case was first called on Monday, was on hand yesterday along with his counsel, H. H. Dewart, K.C.

During the preliminary proceedings these two sat apart, Mr. Dewart going over his brief and Col. Munro affording additional facts as they came to his mind.

Col. Munro was charged with having supplied the Federal Government, for every month throughout the year 1910 with incorrect reports regarding the standing of the Farmers' Bank. These reports are demanded by the authorities at Ottawa, and they go into every phase of the bank's business, their design is to show the relative strength of each bank at the end of every month.

Travers is believed to be the one who perverted the monthly returns sent to the Government, sending them along to Col. Munro for the latter's signature. The charge is that Col. Munro wilfully and knowingly signed the returns in question, cognizant at the time that they were false.

"Do you plead guilty or not guilty?" asked the magistrate.

"Not guilty," came from Col. Munro in low but deliberate tones.

"We elect to be tried by you," said Mr. Dewart.

"I am not asking you to do that," interposed the magistrate. "I only purpose investigating the case."

"We would like to have it settled at once," rejoined Mr. Dewart.

"Yes, I know," concluded the magistrate, "but the case will have to go to trial."

Windsor City Council has passed a resolution favoring municipal elections on New Year's Day.

LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE DOING MPORTANT WORK

Rev. W. G. Hanna, Secretary of the Alliance, Spoke to Large Audience in St. Andrew's Church—Work is Meeting With Splendid Success.

The annual meeting of the Lord's Day Alliance was held in St. Andrew's church on Wednesday, Feb. 1st. Rev. James Rollins presided, and after devotional exercises, introduced Rev. W. G. Hanna, B.A., secretary of the Ontario Lord's Day Alliance, who spoke as follows:

AIM OF THE ALLIANCE.

The aim of the Lord's Day Alliance is simply to secure the CIVIL RIGHT of rest on the Lord's Day for the people of Canada. It does not touch the sphere of religious worship which belongs to the church, but confines its attention entirely within the sphere of civil rights.

To safeguard the civil right of rest on the weekly rest day, the Lord's Day Alliance drafted a law which with some modifications was enacted as the Lord's Day Act by the Parliament of Canada, the first Lord's Day Act on the State Book of the Dominion.

IS NOT A DEAD LETTER.

The Alliance seeks that this law be not a dead letter, but be observed in a fair and reasonable way. To secure this it carries on a large educational work in making the public acquainted with the provisions of the law, and to prevent violations of the law it employs remonstrance and persuasion to the fullest reasonable degree, advising litigation only after fair opportunities have been afforded to cease from violations of the law.

Since the Lord's Day Act came into force on March 1, 1907, one hundred thousand (100,000) men who were formerly seven-day-in-the-week toilers, now have the legal right of one day's rest weekly secured to them. The distribution and sale of American Sunday newspapers, has been reduced nearly ninety-three per cent (93 per cent), and hundreds of cases of violation of law have been stopped in different parts of Canada.

GOOD WORK OF THE ALLIANCE.

It is in a very large measure due to the work of the Lord's Day Alliance in enforcing this law that our four western provinces have not degraded to the moral level of the Western States, that such typical mining camps as Yukon and Cobalt are now respectable white-men's towns. The postmasters and their helpers in the Western Provinces and the policemen in Toronto now have a weekly rest day guaranteed to them, and the employees of the Sydney Steel and Coal Works, 20,000 in number, now have a weekly day of rest.

WORK PROCEEDS QUIETLY.

Because the work is done quietly in almost all cases without prosecution that many have no clear idea of what is being done for the best interests of the people of Canada.

IS VERY IMPORTANT

It is a large work of the most important character for the common weal, the continuance of which is dependent upon the confidence, sympathy and generous support of the people. It is one of fundamental necessity, for, if the Sabbath is obliterated, we have proof from the United States and southern Europe that every other institution for moral or social betterment must suffer most seriously.

Is there, therefore, not good reason to believe that a work so fundamental and so deserving will enlist the sympathetic interest of all right-thinking people in Canada?

LECTURE ON TUBERCULOSIS; DISEASE NOT HEREDITARY

Interesting Remarks and Illustrations

It was a large and attentive audience that listened to Dr. McCullough, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health as he spoke last night in the auditorium of the Collegiate Institute, on the subject of Tuberculosis, also gave many interesting and instructive stereopticon illustrations.

He was introduced to the gathering by Dr. McNulty, chairman of the Peterboro Board of Health, and prefaced the main part of his lecture by some general remarks, incidental with the dreaded disease.

It was in 1882, he said that Dr. Cook made the discovery of the bacillus tuberculosis, as the germ causing the disease. He held that consumption was not hereditary, this having been proven so. Families had been affected, but this was in cases where children born to those afflicted, had not been strong. Another reason was on account of having lived with the consumptives in houses where the air was badly ventilated and in other conditions. Statistics showed that the death rate is smaller in densely populated communities, than in rural districts. England has the lowest death rate in the world, but Ireland, where there is much rural life, the rate is large and increasing.

Tuberculosis is not altogether a disease of the lungs but it affects all parts of the body. Hip joint disease is largely due to tuberculosis and two thirds of the cripples have their afflictions as a result of consumption.

The speaker referred to the exhibit car now in the city and which may be reached for inspection from the Hunter Street C. P. R. railway crossing, as a means of education. The department believed that by educating the people as to the dangers and causes, greater preventive steps would be taken and that was what was really needed.

As to the cure, rest for the patient was an absolute necessity. Another thing was the need of fresh air both day and night. Dr. McCullough told of a visit he made to Gravenhurst where patients slept in a "shack" with the temperature of 34 below zero. Patients told him, he said, that they didn't mind the cold and preferred those conditions to the rooms of the institution. And they were jolly and happy and had splendid appetites.

Another necessity was good food. Alcoholics were not good. Anything that quickened the heart was bad.

Speaking of patent medicines, he said that analysis made at Toronto had shown that so called consumption cures were useless and in some cases injurious. The best steps to take in regard to the use of drugs was to get the advice of the physician.

He held that it was a wrong idea for parents to claim that there was no particular harm for their children to become stricken with infectious diseases, such as fever, whooping cough and others. Some people were apt to say "let the children have them it won't hurt them. This was a great mistake.

Then too, the teeth should be taken care of. In one Toronto school, 99 out of 100 children inspected on one occasion, had affected teeth. This should not be. Medical and dental inspection should be carried out.

"RESIDENT" OBJECTS TO STREETS BEING OILED

In the Residental Parts of the City.

Other Ways for the Council to Save Money.

Peterborough, Feb. 2, 1911.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—I notice the question of oiling the streets is again before the Council, and the city engineer states this method will cost $1,200.00 less than water sprinkling.

The same authority stated last summer when an experimental test was made on Rubidge street that the odor would only last a few weeks, but we all know (especially those within 3 blocks of the place) that this is not the case.

The abominable stench was in full evidence, even after the ground was frozen, and not until covered by snow did we get a respite from the nauseating odor.

Twelve hundred dollars saved, but what does it cost us? Our city turned into a foul smelling place on a par with a dirty oil warehouse. Dirt, we can see is bad enough, but dirt we must smell is worse; from it there is neither escape nor remedy day or night.

We can clear our premises or streets of eyesores, but this foul intruder knows no sanctity of health or home; even the sick room must have added discomfort, the invalid more torture, and nausea ad libitum for everybody.

The reeking odor pervades everywhere, tainting milk, pastry and cooked foods. Not only must we smell the foul stuff, but taste it also.

We can understand how it might be used around cattle sheds or pig stys, or on a country road, but to apply it in a residential part of a city is an intolerable nuisance.

The trivial saving of $1,200.00 is no return for the discomfort. Only about 1-8 of a mill, or on a house assessed for $2,000.00, only 25 cents of a saving, who would have it for four times that amount.

The pleas put forth it will save the streets or rather country roads (not good ones, either), for we have no streets to save unless a short section of George may by courtesy (or imagination) be called one.

If the merchants of George street want oil, let them have it, but it has no place in the residential districts.

If the new council is anxious to save money there are other ways, for instance, the cutting out of "deputation picnics" at the city's expense that was such a standing feature of last year's council, would save quite an item.

The council should turn down any proposition to oil the streets in residence quarters, and if they want to know how the people regard it (especially last year's victims) they can soon find out.

If the citizens could secure the removal of the pork packing house for $1,200.00 they would quickly accept it; but it is only a single spot. How absurd then, to introduce a similar nuisance that would be general. We have quite enough in that line already. With our city permeated by such a nuisance, tourist and summer trade would be injured, and the city given a bad name as well as a bad odor. We all have a first claim on sweet, pure air.

Yours truly,
RESIDENT.

MUCH EVIDENCE IN LIQUOR CASE—JUDGMENT RESERVED

Assault Case Heard—Complainant Said He Was Choaked—Hotel Owner Charged With Having Unlawfully Allowed Liquor to be Consumed on His Premises.

A lengthy police court session was held this morning, the time being mainly consumed with a large amount of what appeared to be unnecessary evidence. Two cases were heard, the first one was dismissed and the second reserved for a week by the Magistrate before giving judgment.

SAID HE WAS CHOKED.

The first charge was one of assault laid by Frederick Leach against John Brooks, the former being an employee and the latter a foreman at Calcutt's brewery. Leach said he was thrown down amongst some kegs and choked by Brooks on Jan. 31st. The evidence of Brooks and another employee was sufficient, however, to show that Leach was under the influence of liquor at the time and his Worship dismissed the case with the customary good advice.

LIQUOR CASE AGAIN HEARD.

George Lipsett, who appeared on Tuesday charged with having unlawfully allowed liquor to be consumed on his premises, came up again to-day. G. N. Gordon appeared for his defence and W. H. Moore, K.C., prosecuted. License Inspector Stewart, who laid the charge assisted.

Many witnesses were called.

EVIDENCE HEARD.

David Quinlan, who runs the barber shop adjoining the hotel, was examined at some length by Mr. Moore. It was proven by his evidence that he had given a drink to Harry Kane, another barber, in exchange for a haircut. He had also seen Lipsett giving liquor to people in the sitting room.

Harry Kane's evidence as to getting the liquor agreed with Quinlan's. Frank Arkles' evidence did not have much bearing on the case.

After hearing the points of both prosecution and defence, his Worship enlarged the case for a week before passing judgment.

Very Large Funeral

The funeral of Joseph Clarence McKee, the eight-year old son of Mr. Walter McKee, which took place on Tuesday, was one of the largest seen here for many years. Over thirty-two cutters were in the cortege not including the pall-bearers and the family mourners in hacks. He was interred in Little Lake cemetery.

PEOPLE MUST USE ORDINARY PRECAUTIONS

Some Facts Relative to the Death of Child at Winnipeg

Recently a child of tender years, in a Winnipeg household, got hold of a box of "Fruitatives" and ate from 30 to 40 of the tablets. Death resulted in a few hours. Some investigation in going on, relative to the "accident," as it is termed. The western papers are giving publicity to the case, as one calling for stricter inspection in the sale of patented preparations. It is not assumed that the proprietors of the preparation have been careless in the matter and it is interesting to read what the manager of the company says in explanation and defence;

"It seems this little child swallowed between 30 and 40 tablets. Naturally, such a tremendous quantity as that would destroy even an adult.

There is very little to be said in the matter, as any person with ordinary intelligence would understand it. In making "Fruit-a-tives" we use the fruit powder, and we also use a very special preparation of extract of nux vomica fruit, simply as a tonic and as a curative agent. It is quite true that strychnia can be made from nux vomica, and is also true, as everybody knows, that nux vomica, in excessive doses, is a poison. For this reason we publish on the outside of the box, and the only place we can publish it, the composition of "Fruit-a-tives," and therein we state that extract of nux vomica forms part of the composition. Also, around every box of "Fruit-a-tives" we put a circular, and on this circular, at the bottom of the second page we tell persons plainly that "Fruit-a-tives" are not suitable for children under 4 years of age, on account of the tonics. It would be impossible to print any larger warning, on a little small round box, such as a box of "Fruit-a-tives" is.

The fact of the matter is in the death of this little child it was a pure accident, because if the child had taken an overdose of castor oil it would have killed it, or an overdose of any other purgative. We are very sorry this accident happened, but it is purely accidental, and everyone knows, or should know, if "Fruit-a-tives" were taken by the handful, there would be no need of prescribing doses, as directed on the boxes. If it was possible that "Fruit-a-tives" could be taken ad libitum, the same as sugar, we would not put directions on the box, but would let people take them as they like. We put the very clearest and most careful directions, not to take over a certain quantity, thus indicating to any ordinary intelligent mind, the fact that "Fruit-a-tives" must not be taken in very large quantities."

THE TWO CHIEFS.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Our Chief of Police in his annual report, was lavish in his praise of the chief of the fire department personally, but the latter in his annual report did not return the compliment in full, merely referring to the "improved police patrol." Is this a "casus belli?"

CRITICISM OF BARBARA TENNANT

A well known English critic in 'The Referee,' London, writing of Barbara Tennant and her work, said in part—"She was a revelation. Her beautiful personality certainly gripped her audience but her histrionic genius enthralled it from the beginning to the end of the recital. Whether she portrayed the dramatic or the lighter side of life, she was the same, superb. Barbara Tennant is not an elocutionist as the word is commonly understood; she is a born actress, gifted with a true intuitive conception of the characters and types she assumes and makes them live again. With a voice that is rich, deep and full; with a personality sweet and beautiful, with a great mimic and creative capacity, this girl, for she is but twenty-three, compels one to see Shakespeare and Kipling and the others with a new love that could never be begotten by all the analytical reading in the world. It really takes an instinctively soulful mind to know the master and interpret him as he would have it if he were here, and Barbara Tennant was the one to do it. She felt her Shakespeare and her Kipling and made us feel them; she was heralded as a great actress—she is."

LINDSAY STEEDS ARE TOO SPEEDY

Driver of Lindsay Fire Department Appears Before Council

While members of the Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council, are of the opinion that the horses of the fire department do not move fast enough, the case is reversed up in Lindsay. Recently one of the drivers appeared before the council, who complained to him that the fire horses were being driven at too great a speed.

FOURTH ESTATE IS FINE PLAY

Life-Like Representation of Newspaper Life on Stage

"The Fourth Estate," as presented at the Grand last night was a very fine production, and worthy of a high place in drama. The action is centered around New York newspaper life, and the scenes develop with remarkable trueness to actual conditions in a big city office, and the last act, showing the composing room with machines actually operating, and a steam chest in connection with a stereotyping outfit, was well executed. The story concerns the efforts of the managing editor of the Advance to prove the guilt of a United States judge, who is in league with the "interests" and hands down important decisions accordingly. There is a strong love story running through the play, being the complication of this managing editor's love for the daughter of the judge, whom he is trying to expose. The cast was very capable indeed, every part being exceptionally well handled. The part of the judge was remarkably well handled; in fact there was not a weak point in the whole presentation.

RUNAWAY TEAM STRUCK HIM

Unusual Accident to Mr. Thomas Brown While Driving Near Keene

Thomas Brown, a brother of Ald. James B. Brown, met with a rather unusual accident yesterday while driving into Keene in a cutter. A runaway team of horses overtook him and jumped right into the cutter. Mr. Brown's collar was turned up and he was not aware of the runaway until they crashed into him from behind. Mr. R. J. Shaw, of Otonabee, was the owner of the team.

Mr. Brown was brought to his home here at the corner of Lock and McGill streets. He is bruised all over, and his face is badly damaged. No bones were broken.

It will be some time before he is out again.

NORWOOD MAN IS IN TROUBLE AT HAMILTON

Arrested at Request of His Wife To be Examined as to His Sanity

Hamilton, Feb. 2 — The sequel to quel to an interesting case came out at the police court this morning. About a month ago Geo. W. Cooper, a baggageman on the Grand Trunk, whose home was at Norwood, charged a man with eloping with his wife, and also stealing a bed and some furniture from his home. A warrant was issued at Norwood for the arrest of Cooper's wife and the man, but for weeks the county police could not secure any trace of them.

The case was finally placed in the hands of the local authorities, and after much difficult work Detective Coulter found the couple residing in a house on Sanford avenue north. The Norwood police were notified that the man and woman had been discovered and they subsequently wired to detain the man, but informed Inspector of Detectives Campbell that they were not going to take any action against the woman.

The man was taken to Norwood to stand his trial and was acquitted by the county magistrate. Since then, it is alleged, Cooper has written threatening trouble his wife.

Mrs. Cooper consulted the authorities and yesterday a warrant was issued for the arrest of Cooper, who was taken into custody by Constable Wallace and charged with insanity.

Cooper's name was on the roster this morning, but when he was called Magistrate Jelfs announced that he had been remanded for three days to give the lunacy commission an opportunity to examine him.

The interesting phase of the case is that Cooper is locked up at the jail and the man he originally charged with stealing his wife and furniture was acquitted.

BOX SOCIAL AT NORWOOD

Under Auspices of St. Paul's R.C. Church Was a Big Success

The box social and entertainment held in the town hall at Norwood last evening under the auspices of St. Paul's Roman Catholic church, of which Rev. Father Kelly has charge, was very successful, the attendance being particularly large and the program one of keen enjoyment. During the first part of the evening's entertainment Messrs. Quinlan, Clarke, MacLaren and Barrett and Miss Carrie White, of this city, contributed and Miss White is deserving of special mention for the creditable manner in which her recitations were given.

The prices in the auction of the boxes, ranged from 75 cents to $5, the bidding at times being very keen. After lunch, progressive euchre contests were played by the older people while the young couples tripped the light fantastic.

In the contests, Miss English won the ladies' prize, a hand-painted china sugar and cream set and the gentlemen's prize, a leather pocketbook, was won by Mr. Quinlan.

A unique feature on the program was the search for a mysterious person who entered the hall during the evening. He was found by Mr. Quinlan who received a beautiful fountain pen. Those present included a number of young people from this city.

HACKENMIDT TO MEET ROLLER

One Clause of Agreement Calls for a $200 Forfeit for for Foul

Toronto, Feb. 2 — Georges Hackenschmidt, the Russian Lion, will be seen in action in Toronto again. He comes here next Tuesday to wrestle Dr. Roller. The match was made by Tom Flanagan yesterday. The articles call for best two in three falls with no time limit, and one clause demands a $200 forfeit for foul work.

"Both Yankee Rogers and Charley Fraser are barred from any bouts I promote," said Tom Flanagan to-day. "Both committed fouls in the last bouts, and I won't have anything more to do with them. I intend to have clean, fair competition, or cut the game out altogether."

"How about your bid of $30,000 for the big match?"

"I'm negotiating yet and don't think we haven't a chance of getting it," was the reply. "I'm after Zbyszko and Mahmout now, and will get Gotch here if he will take on a good man."

GRANITES WON THE TANKARD

Third Consecutive Victory for Toronto Rinks

Toronto, Feb. 2—For the third time in three years the Granite Curling Club, of Toronto, have won the Ontario Tankard. When the semi-finals had been completed the old rivals—Lindsay and Granites—were left to do battle for the much sought after trophy. In the final games at Victoria rink last night Tom Rennie was seven shots up in his match with the veteran, J. D. Flavelle, while G. A. Little, of Lindsay, had a majority of two shots on H. T. Wilson thus leaving the Granites winners by five shots

TRENTON TO HAVE CHANGED LINEUP

For Game With Locals To-morrow Night

Great interest is being displayed by the fans regarding the game to-morrow night, when the local intermediates meet Trenton to re-play the game thrown out by the O.H.A. at its recent meeting, and the indications are that a record crowd will be in attendance to watch the visitors take their second defeat. It looks like a hard sheet of ice for the meeting, and the players will be able to get away for more speed than in the first game when the ice was soft. Trenton has changed their line-up and several new faces will be seen in action.

SPORT TALK

Two new rules—one in regard to shaving the pitcher's box down to the level of the plate, and the other in regard to reducing the number of balls necessary for a pass to first base from four to three—are likely to come in for a lot of discussion on the part of the joint rules committee of the National and American leagues before another baseball season opens.

It will be observed that the first of the two rules mentioned if passed, gives the batter an additional advantage; and the second, if passed, will give the pitcher an additional advantage. On the face of it, then, it might seem to many persons that either both rules should be passed or neither of them.

It is difficult to see why the pitcher's box should be allowed to be higher than the plate. It is easy enough to understand how this has come about, but it is surprising that there has not been a lot of wrangling over the matter before. On the face of it there is no more reason why the pitcher should be allowed to stand on a mound than the first baseman or any other player. That he does so has come about through various groundkeepers—probably acting under instruction—gradually raising the level of the pitcher's box.

Ottawa Free Press—Those who have been following hockey for the past three or four years may have noticed a little trick employed on the ice whereby a man carrying the puck drops it behind him as he is about to be checked, and crashes into the player of the opposing side, who is bent on blocking the way. In the meantime the derelict puck is picked up by another skater from behind, and frequently carried into the defence unmolested. At first it looks like interference, but if properly carried out no referee can or will stop the play. It is known as the "Skidoo pass," and originated from the brain of that great player, Hod Stuart, whose brilliant hockey career was abruptly terminated three years ago.

TO WIN GAME ON LOCAL ICE?

Supremacy of Frontenacs Must be Maintained is the Feeling at Kingston

Says the Kingston Whig. Frontenacs have received word that their next game will be at Peterboro with the junior team of that city on Tuesday next, the 7th. On the following Friday the 10th, the return game will be played here. Manager Sutherland wants all the Frontenac players to turn out at the covered rink this evening to practice, and at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium to-morrow evening. It is essential that the champions should be in perfect condition, as no chances are to be taken. Peterboro must be defeated not only in the return game here, but also on their own ice, for the supremacy of the Frontenacs must be maintained. Kingston has the team that can beat any junior team in Ontario but it is necessary that the players keep in condition all the time. In the games with Peterboro, the total goals on the round will decide the winner.

PUCKLAND

Lawson Whitehead will referee the game here to-morrow night.

Port Hope accepted Picton's challenge to play on neutral ice for $200 a side, and the game will take place in Oshawa on Saturday evening. It is likely that a special train will be arranged for.

MUSEUM OF THE ARCTIC

Fort Simpson Has a Most Enviable Collection of Birds and Books.

Times change. Up at Fort Simpson on the Mighty Mackenzie there is a cluster of log buildings, the beams of which are now getting a little rusty with rot. Years ago, there used to be tall stools in those buildings, heavy ledgers, and an army of strapping young chaps who rubbed their palms together to keep warm, and when they were feeling comfortable, took a spell at adding up tall pyramids of figures, and talking smoothly to their red brothers, whose wont it was to drop in off the trail with a pack of pelts. That was Fort Simpson in the days that it was the head-post of the Hudson Bay Co., the headquarters for guns and food before the board packed the whole outfit, clerks and all, down to Fort Smith and made it the base.

The evacuation must have taken place suddenly. For the Hudson Bay Co., clerks left considerable treasure behind them. This property tells a highly interesting and creditable feature of the lives of the clerks of Fort Simpson; skins and figures were by no means their whole existence. At Fort Simpson you will find taxidermy and literature; a collection of Canadian birds whose equal no museum in the Dominion possesses; and a library — antiquarian. It was Bernard Ross, factor in 1859, and one Hennicott who got together the birds and the books—mainly Hennicott. He was an old army veteran who loved the open places, and a chair and a book before the glare of the campfire when the sun went down. The books have the biggest appeal to a delver in the museum of the Arctic. There's humanity in those sere, mosquito-bitten pages. They belong to a hardy age; before the literary era of Robert Chambers and the hammock. Here is part of the mental menu of old Fort Simpson:

"Virgil," printed by order of George II., with a royal proclamation signed by Hollis Newcastle, 1741; "Works of British Poets," Robert Anderson, M.D., 1795; "History of Europe," Sir Archibald Alison, Bart., 1860.

The traders at Fort Smith are going to chase back after their things aesthetic it is reported. And there is a rumor that the National Museum is to receive a present of the birds.

A new freight train, known as a "manifest" train, has been placed on the run from Midland and Belleville.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Mrs. Annie Clobesky of Guelph stepped off a moving train at Clifton, and was seriously injured.

The smallpox situation at Moncton, N.B., grows more serious, ten new cases developing yesterday, making fourteen in all.

A wireless message from the C.P.R. steamer Princess Adelaide says that the vessel went ashore at Appletree Point in a blinding snowstorm last night.

Nine passengers were injured when the C.P.R. Overland Limited was derailed near Gleichen, Alberta. Mr. Robert Taylor of Toronto was slightly injured.

Stamford fruit-growers held a meeting and warmly endorsed the proposed trade arrangement with the United States. No resolution was put, but the sentiment of the meeting was unmistakable.

A group of Ontario capitalists have had forwarded to them photographs and data in connection with a scheme they have to harness the reversing falls at St. John, N.B., to supply power for industries.

Louis Leblanc, employed by a contractor to drive the mail between Yarmouth and Wedgeport, N.S., pleaded guilty and was sentenced to five years in Dorchester penitentiary, for robbing the mail bags of letters.

The militia officials are considering the feasibility of taking all the units of the eastern Ontario militia to Petawawa this summer for training. The idea would be to have military manoeuvres extending over two or three days.

On the historic Plains of Abraham a statute is to be erected to the memory of King Edward the Peacemaker. Hon. Mr. Taschereau, Minister of Public Works for Quebec, has given notice of a motion of the intention of the Government in that respect.

Fire Interrupts Wedding.

Toronto, Feb. 2.—Some of the "quiet but pretty" features were lacking in connection with the nuptials of Mr. Joseph Schipman and Miss Lealla Ross on Tuesday night, but in spite of the wrecking of the synagogue by fire and the consequent uncomfortable surroundings, the marriage ceremony took place on the ruins and festivities were enjoyed until early the next morning.

Fortunately, although there were many people in the synagogue, including a lot of old people, they all escaped after considerable difficulty, aided by heroic acts by Rabbi Gordon.

A Serious Situation.

Washington, Feb. 2.—The eruption of Taal volcano, and the accompanying disturbances in the Philippines killed 700 people in the town of Talisay, according to the report of the governor of Batangas Province. Five thousand families have been ruined by the disaster.

The Philippines authorities are face to face with the absolute necessity of adopting relief measures in order to avoid suffering, as the falling mud and lava destroyed the crops within a considerable radius. The red cross is taking steps toward that end.

Magazine Eats Crow.

New York, Feb 2.—Counsel for the Standard Oil Co., which recently began suits for $250,000 damages against Hampton's Magazine, and for $100,000 damages against Cleve and Moffett, the writer of an alleged defamatory statement concerning the Standard Oil Co., yesterday received written retractions from both the publishers and the writer. The article in question stated that the Standard Oil Co. manufactured and sold impure materials, which went into candies, and that, when the various dealers were arrested and fined, the Standard Oil Co. paid the fines.

Fisher Folk Pleased.

St John, N.B., Feb. 2.—J. F. Calder, Dominion fisheries inspector for the southern part of New Brunswick, says that the proposed reciprocity agreement has brought joy to the hearts of the fisher folk along the Bay of Fundy coast. This joy seemed to be mutual, for in Maine, where he has been, all interested are of the opinion that the fishermen on both sides of the line will benefit.

Defective Switch Causes a Wreck.

Montreal, Feb. 2.—Five persons were injured, three of them probably fatally, when the New York bound Rutland express which left Montreal yesterday morning tore through a defective switch at Lacadie, Que., 18 miles from here, cut its baggage car in two and overturned the locomotive.

Fireman Wm. Marchand and Engineer H. Laperiel and Mrs. Laura Lebombard, of Isle La Motte, were most seriously hurt. They were brought to the Royal Victoria Hospital.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Canifton, Ont.—"I had been a great sufferer for five years. One doctor told me it was ulcers of the uterus, and another told me it was a fibroid tumor. No one knows what I suffered. I would always be worse at certain periods, and never was regular, and the bearing down pains were terrible. I was very ill in bed, and the doctor told me I would have to have an operation, and that I might die during the operation. I wrote to my sister about it and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Through personal experience I have found it the best medicine in the world for female troubles, for it has cured me, and I did not have to have the operation after all. The Compound also helped me while passing through Change of Life."—Mrs. LETITIA BLAIR, Canifton, Ontario.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to suffering women.

LATE REPORTS SAY 30 OR 40 PEOPLE KILLED

of the Katherine W.; Frank Ackley, Henry Ackley, Oscar Stolpe, James London, Louis Belgian, all of the crew of the Katherine W.

Thought to be missing: Twenty unknown laborers just getting ready to eat luncheon at pier 7, when the explosion came.

James Healing, owner of the Katherine W., said he is not positive that the lighter and her crew of seven had been blown up. Nobody living knew for certain if she had been tied to the pier or not.

A man whose senses had been strangely deranged apparently by the dynamite explosion on the Jersey waterfront, appeared at the mayor's office in the City Hall yesterday afternoon. His incoherent mutterings about his "sufferings from electricity" and other weird talk, prompted the attendants to arrest him. He gave his name as Charles Tolleland and said he was working in Bayonne when the explosion occurred. An open knife was found in the man's pocket, but he was not otherwise armed.

Progress of Johannesburg.

If any one gifted with prescience a generation ago had written out the story of Johannesburg's rise and progress he would have been regarded as a burlesque Jules Verne. For a city to spring up in the centre of South Africa in twenty years, to attract a quarter of a million settled population, and crowd an enormous municipal development within a single decade, sounds certainly more like imagination than fact. So does the arrangement by which she farms her black domestics out in a suburb ten miles away, and runs special trains for them morning and night. But one secret of the town's success rests on her natural throne of 40-mile ridge 6,000 feet above the sea, and her nine hours of sunshine a day in perhaps the mildest and most equable climate in the world.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Quickly Cured His Backache and Lumbago

Well Known Nova Scotia man rescued from the clutches of Kidney Disease tells others to use Dodd's Kidney Pills

James River, Antigonish Co., N. S. Feb. 1st (Special.)—Suffering from Backache, with eyes puffed and swollen, and occasional attacks of Lumbago helping to make his life miserable Dan McGee, a well known resident of this place, turned to Dodd's Kidney Pills, and is to-day a strong, healthy man once more. It is hardly to be wondered at that he says:

"I advise all persons suffering with Backache or Lumbago to use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Mr. McGee realized from his symptoms that Kidney Disease was claiming him for his own. For two months he waited, like many another, for it to go away of its own accord. It didn't go, it simply got worse. Then he turned to the natural cure, Dodd's Kidney Pills, and the disease vanished because it had to. No case of Kidney Disease can stand before Dodd's Kidney Pills. They always cure.

Rheumatism, Lumbago, Dropsy, Diabetes and Bright's Disease are some of the deadly results of diseased Kidneys. You can safeguard yourself against any or all of them by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

...A... BLUNDER

Being a Tale of the Restoration of Charles II.

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

It was the year that King Charlie came from over the water to take his rightful place on the throne of England. All was good cheer and merrymaking, for the people of London, who had long endured the psalm singing Roundheads, were beside themselves with joy at the change.

The day the king entered London, while his majesty was passing through the Strand, I was standing on the sidewalk, having intended to view the pageant, but my eyes were drawn above the gentlemen on richly caparisoned horses escorting the king and even the king himself to a window from which was looking down on them a young girl who seemed to me to be the fairest gentlewoman I had ever seen in my life.

Her hair was put high on her head, after the custom of the times, and bound with ribbons. Her ruff stood up under her ears, though not so high as when Elizabeth set the fashion in England. Her sleeves were slashed at the shoulders, and her stomacher was studded with gems. Indeed, she wore the costume of a highborn dame, and, as to her face and figure, they were the face and figure of an angel.

When I saw Lord Everest, whom I knew well, bending above her, craning his neck to get sight of the king, I was rejoiced, for I knew that he could tell me who she might be and mayhap would make me known to her. And so when the pageant had passed I went to the door of the house in which these people were and which stood not far from Temple Bar, and when they came out I made pretense of surprise at seeing Everest and greeted him pleasantly, whereupon he seemed glad to see me and bade me come with him to his father's seat at Slough, which is near to Windsor, where great merrymaking was to take place among the gentry of that region for a whole fortnight to celebrate the return of the king.

I knew not if the lady I had seen at the window would be of the number present, but I thought it likely that she would be, so I went with Everest to a tavern, where a meal was served, and after we had eaten our [illegible] and paid the reckoning we took boats and went that night to Cragnew castle, the seat of the Duke of Berrymore.

And what was my delight that the lady who had thralled me remained with us at the tavern on the river and was guest as well as I at Cragnew.

Such a fortnight as we passed I have never passed since. There were riding and hunting and feasting and dancing, and all the while I was the acknowledged cavalier of the Lady Eleanor, whom I had seen at the window in London. Other young gallants vainly tried to replace me, and I rejoiced greatly that it was not necessary for me to threaten them, for the lady seemed willing that I alone should at all times be her attendant.

But the time came when I was made greatly wroth through jealousy. It came about in this wise: We were to have at the end of the festivities a great ball at which we were all to wear apparel of other peoples and other times and masks and were to dance and feast in these costumes. Many of us went to London, where these things necessary to our masquerade were to be procured, but we went secretly and not together that the habit we were to wear should not be known. I bought me a costume that would do for Christopher Columbus, who sailed over from Spain more than a century ago and discovered that land which has since been called Virginia and which has conferred so great a boon upon us in giving us tobacco.

My love for Eleanor waxed stronger day by day, so that now, looking backward to those times, I marvel greatly how I should have advanced with her so speedily, especially since there was no opposition to our fancy, for, notwithstanding that my family had stood by the king's royal father, our estates had not been confiscated, and I was just coming of age to inherit them. Besides, I had served Prince Rupert in all the battles he fought in the king's cause. And so it came about that when we strolled out into the greenwood that surrounds the castle and sat upon a fallen tree trunk I told Eleanor how my heart had gone with my eyes to her as she sat in the window in London on the day of the king's restoration and begged her to be my lady. She did not withdraw the hand I held, and when I kissed her lips she did not gainsay me.

And so it was all settled between us, and there was no happier man in England than I. We were to end our rejoicings at the king's return by the masquerade, and the next week I was to go to the seat of my lady's father to make a formal proposition for her hand. But before that might happen I well nigh rendered our union impossible.

The day before the masquerade I was walking through a corridor at Cragnew lined with sleeping chambers. As I passed one of them, the door of which stood ajar, I saw a sight that froze my heart with horror. Within the chamber I saw a Spanish cavalier admiring himself before a reflection of a mirror. And by him with his arm about her waist stood my Eleanor.

In a moment I was a madman. Whipping my rapier from its scabbard, I cried at the top of my voice: "Death! Come out lest I disgrace myself as you have done by intruding into a lady's chamber and I slay you there!"

The fellow turned and, seeing me glaring at him with my rapier leaping forward to pierce his vitals, lost all the color from his face, which as soon as I saw it I knew it belonged to one of tender years. But he was not unarmed, having a rapier at his waist, which gladdened me, if, indeed, I could be gladdened at such a time, for it gave me an excuse to slay him.

Eleanor turned, too, and gazed at me, all amasement.

"Aha, my Mistress Eleanor! Is it meet that you should accept a lover one day and the next receive another in your chamber? Mayhap had not a draft set the door ajar I should never have known of your faithlessness!" With that I began to bawl and to roar at the "Spanish dog," the "miscreant," to come out into the corridor and defend himself. And, he not coming, I made a step forward. What did the coward do but run behind the bed and crawl under it!

By this time, with my roaring and swearing, the corridor was filled with guests, both gentlemen and ladies, who had come from their rooms to learn, mayhap, if a lion had got into the castle. They saw me standing before the Lady Eleanor's open door, she, facing me, white as a sheet and not able to make herself heard above the noise I made.

Then came Lord Everest running along the corridor, and when he reached me and saw me standing, rapier in hand, glaring and howling for the Spanish cur to come out and fight like a man, he drew his own sword and beat mine down, crying:

"What means this bedlam? Cease your howling and let me hear what the Lady Eleanor has to say."

This somewhat quieted my tongue, though I continued to glare. The Lady Eleanor, seeing protection, went to the bed and, putting her hand under it, dragged the Spaniard out and helped him to stand upon his feet. Then she pushed him forward, saying:

"Look at this 'Spanish cur,' seeing for yourselves the crime I have committed in harboring him in my chamber."

"Why, 'tis the Lady Gwendolin Tracy!" said one of the bystanders.

Then my choler suddenly gave place to a sinking in the heart as well as the knees, for I saw what I had done. Surely the Spaniard was none other than the Lady Gwendolin, whose costume for the masquerade had just arrived from London and who, having taken her friend the Lady Eleanor into the secret of her character, was trying the suit on in her company.

"There, Sir Ralph," said Eleanor, "is the Spaniard for whom you would rob me of my good name before all these goodly people. Get you gone from me and never let me see you again."

With that she burst into a torrent of weeping and, retreating within her room, shut the door.

And I stood broken by my folly before the whole company, who presently, after the retreat of the Lady Eleanor, suddenly seeing the absurdity of my action, burst into loud peals of laughter.

"Down with the Spaniard!" cried the old duke, who had heard the same words often during his boyhood when Queen Mary's Spanish match was unpopular in England, whereupon all the company laughed again.

"'Tis like the dons," cried another, "to hide under the bed before a drawn rapier!"

"For shame, Sir Ralph, to draw sword upon a girl!"

But I, full of anguish at having by my choler induced by jealousy to act upon impulse and without knowledge, heard not a word of these jests. I was longing to throw myself upon my knees before the Lady Eleanor and at the same time bethinking myself that I would never obtain her forgiveness. Finally Everest, with kindly courtesy, seeing my suffering, came to me and, taking my rapier from my hand, thrust it into its scabbard. Then, putting his arm through mine, he led me away. As we walked down the corridor together I heard the murmur of voices and laughter behind me of those who continued to discuss my lamentable blunder.

"Do not fret your soul," said Everest. "This evening's festivities will wear away the effects of your rashness."

"There are no more festivities for me," I wailed, "unless mayhap the Lady Eleanor may find it in her guileless heart to forgive me."

"And so she will," replied my friend, "when she comes to consider that your act was goodly evidence of your love for her."

"She will never forgive the affront I put upon her."

"Come, come; cease this maudlin whining! I will engage that you are forgiven this very evening."

With that he poured out a flagon of sack and bade me get up my courage, but be sure not to drink so much as to spoil the reconciliation that was to be between me and my ladylove. I dare not excite my brain, already hot, with the liquor and would have none of it.

When the ball was on Everest sought me out and led me to a curtained corner where sat Isabella, that queen who furnished the funds by means of which Virginia was discovered.

"Here is Columbus, your majesty, who returns to you penitent."

He left me with my love. And as I drew the curtains that those passing should not see in, so I draw the curtain over the close of my story.

SLANDERER CONVICTED

Edward Mylius Goes to Prison For a Year.

Editor of The Liberator, Who Declared That King George Had Been Morganatically Married, Has His Allegations Disproven to the Hilt—His Majesty's Honor Is Completely Vindicated.

London, Feb. 2.—A prison sentence of one year was imposed yesterday upon Edward F. Mylius after he was found guilty of criminally libelling King George.

Mylius had published in The Liberator an assertion that the monarch, while Prince of Wales, had morganatically married a daughter of Admiral Seymour, and that several children had resulted from the union. He was tried on three counts and was convicted on all of them.

Only a few witnesses were called. Among these was the crown advocate at Malta. He testified that it was compulsory under the law at Malta to register every marriage. He declared on the stand that the registration between the years of 1886 and 1893 had been searched without discovering a record of the King's alleged marriage.

Admiral Seymour took the stand and swore that none of his daughters had ever been married to King George.

"I had only two daughters," declared the admiral. "One died when she was 22 years of age and the other is the present Mrs. Napier."

Mrs. Napier was also called to the stand.

"I was never married to King George," was the simple statement to which she swore.

Mylius attempted a long elaborate cross-examination but was cut short by the court.

The verdict was the occasion for a ripple of subdued applause which disturbed even the stern dignity of the English court for a time.

Lord Chief Justice Alverstone, in delivering the sentence, stated that Mylius had wronged not only the British sovereign, but the British people.

The Liberator is a small paper published in Paris, its editor being Edward H. James, formerly a lawyer in the United States.

Sir John A. Simeon assisted Sir Rufus in the prosecution, collaborating with Public Prosecutors Roylatt and Muir, the latter being the prosecutor of Dr. H. H. Crippen.

New York women were in the crowd which surged about the court, attempting to break by the guards and enter. It required the efforts of fully a score of policemen to keep back the people who tried to fight their way into the room after it was already filled.

Mylius conducted his defense in person. Immediately after the opening of court he petitioned the tribunal to compel the attendance of King George. He gave three reasons why the King should be present, summing up his contentions in the following words:

"I demand the presence of King George, first, because the accused has the right to be faced by his accuser in court; secondly, because in libel action the accused must be in court, and, third, because without the accuser in court there is no proof that the prosecutor is alive."

Mylius also demanded the return of private papers which, he said, had been seized.

Sir Rufus Isaacs, for the prosecution, declared in opening the case, that all the allegations made by Mylius in his story in The Liberator were fakes.

"Beyond the fact that King George is married to Queen Mary every statement made by Mylius is an utter falsehood," declared Sir Rufus.

In addressing the court the Attorney-General announced that the charge of seditious libel had been withdrawn and the charge of plain libel substituted.

The Attorney-General further declared that the King could not appear constitutionally, although he is willing to refute in person the aspersions cast upon him in The Liberator.

DIAMOND DIGGING.

How Precious Stones Are Mined for In Kimberley Workings.

Kimberley is a curious place, not beautiful either in itself or its surrounding country, but interesting as the centre of the world's diamond supply, which it entirely controls, and also as the centre of a certain gambling spirit which seems to pervade South Africa.

When the hard blue clay has been dug from the mine and spread out to break and crumble under the African sun, it is difficult to believe that diamond tiaras and necklaces are hiding in those uninviting fields behind their wire fences. There is something rather fascinating about the actual extraction of the stones. The crushing of the clay in the great central "pulsator" is noisy and unpleasant, as is all machinery on a large scale to anyone not accustomed to it; but when the finally crushed stuff comes pouring out of the huge machine and is thrown in little handfuls upon the sloping tables, down which it is washed by running water, the spirit of "shikar" of the chase, enters into one.

As you stand by the side of one of the tables and watch, you see the little throbbing shallow stream carrying down bits of iron pyrites and other matter, which slide or roll into a receptacle at the bottom of the table. The tables are covered with a coating of grease, but it does not seem able, as a rule, to hold these against the slight force of the water. Suddenly a little whitish object drops upon the top of the table with the rest of the handful, turns over, and sticks, the water running around it but failing to dislodge it.

You look closely and see that it is a diamond—a clean, regularly shaped, eight-sided figure, with one flat side lying against the slope. The smoothness of its surface or some other quality makes it cling to the grease, and the water fails to move it. A certain proportion of the rubbish also sticks.

After various processes the selected crushings are finally picked over by hand. I was invited to sit down before a long table, not greased or sloped, and a sheet of white paper was put down before me. Upon this was poured a handful of blackish stuff, and with a little pair of pincers I set to work to pick out the diamonds. As a rule it is easy, as they were of fair size, quite regular in shape, and colorless, or very slightly tinged with yellow. In a minute or two I had twenty.

But the stones are often irregular, or small or colored, and then the work requires the skill of an expert; and even an expert's eye is apt to get tired and overlook some of the stones.—Sir Mortimer Durand, in Blackwood's Magazine.

THE WEATHER FOR FEBRUARY

(AS HICKS PREDICTS)

A reactionary storm period is central on the 2nd and 3rd, blending with the Mercury period which is central on Jan. 31st, and extending up to February 10th. Falling barometer, rising temperature and return of rain sleet and snow may be expected on and touching the 2nd and 3rd. The moon being on the celestial equator on the 3rd, suggests electrical storms especially southward, on and about that date, to be quickly followed by sleet, freeze and blizzard. The seismic period, central on January 30th extends at least three days into February. The quadrature of Jupiter with Earth and Sun, on the 3rd will intensify this seismic period. Note current reports of earthquakes from about January 28th to February 3rd. A cold wave will dominate most parts of the country from the 4th to the 7th.

A regular storm period, blending with the mercury disturbance and the beginning of the Mars period, covers the 6th to the 10th. Western sections will show rising temperature falling barometer and threatening storms, on or before the 7th, and during the 8th, 9th and 10th, these conditions will grow into active storms or rain, turning to sleet and snow, as they pass progressively from west to east. Change to fair and very cold weather will follow promptly in the rear of these storms, being pushed eastward and south by an energetic, high barometer.

A reactionary storm period recurs from the 13th to 16th, beginning with full moon on the 13th, and ending with moon's passage of the celestial equator on the 16th, bringing storms of tropical nature, after several days of threatening weather, all ending in violent change to colder weather.

A regular storm period is indicated from the 17th to the 21st. The reactionary period just preceding the regular period will leave little or no time between the two for fair, open weather, so that by the 18th falling barometer and the oncoming of rain and snow storms in the west will be in progress. This period will be well into the Mars period, blending also with the Venus equinox, and the vernal equinox of Earth. The Mars influence will be dominant at this time, and the character of storms and weather prevailing at this period may be regarded as indicating the kind of storms and weather to be expected, generally through the month of March. We figure that the weather will be rough and wintery, continuing after that manner well through the month of March. If, on the other hand, the general weather and storm conditions, should prove to be decidedly mild and moderate at this time, look for much the same conditions until the end of the Mars influence, late in March. From the 11th to the 16th we should have stated, is another marked seismic period. Behind general rain and snow storms which will probably pass eastwardly over the country about the 19th, 20th and 21st, look for rapid rise of the barometer, cloudiness rain and snow. The Moon is at greatest declination south at this period, calling for northerly winds, and bleak, winter weather. Any storm period in the last half of February, may bring dangerous tropical storms in the south, in which event counter boreal storms from the northwest will prevail over interior parts of the country. A seismic period, central on the [illegible], covers the [illegible] to March the 5th.

SHOWING THE PRINCE

KAISER'S ELDEST SON WAS ENTERTAINED IN INDIA.

Nizam of Hyderabad Held a Great Review In the City of Swords When Crown Prince Handled a Native Cavalry Brigade—Has Learned the Fighting Capacity of the Eastern Empire.

During his recent visit to India the German Crown Prince reviewed the native troops of the Nizam of Hyderabad, and handled a cavalry brigade himself. The gorgeous pageantry of our native troops is thus described editorially by The London Telegraph:

A brilliant episode of the German Crown Prince's tour in India has been the visit to the City of the Swords. At Hyderabad, in the centre of the most important of the feudatory states, the Kaiser's heir reviewed the native troops, himself handled a cavalry brigade, and he expressed his pleasure at the efficiency of the manoeuvres. The whole incident was of extraordinary interest.

Far and wide through the Near East and Asia, since the achievements of 1870, has run the fame of German prowess, and every representative of that empire is regarded with more consideration in consequence. It is a lesson for ourselves. Oriental men in the twentieth century, as of old, still worship excellence in the wielding of arms and armies, and our own dominion in the vast Peninsula would soon crumble if it were not for the obvious firmness of its military foundations. A distinguished soldier used to say that we held India "by the swagger of Tommy Atkins," whose obvious courage and self-confidence were, and are, more of an Imperial asset than is usually realized. That truth is not so all-important as it was.

No extent of force would maintain us in India without the progressive wisdom of our administration. Yet it is still essential to remember that throughout the east power is still the vital guarantee of authority. This being so, we may imagine all the stir that has belonged to the crown prince's experiences in a native state of exceptionally warlike traditions. In their guest and visitor the Nizam and his subjects saw the heir of the greatest war-lord in the world. We have no doubt that when the crown prince himself led the Nizam's squadrons, their evolutions excited evidences of enthusiasm to which the immobile East rarely gives way. Hyderabad offered a famous setting for such a scene.

To begin with, it is the capital of the second most important Mohammedan state in the world. The Nizam is a very proud monarch. He is something between a feudatory and an ally. In the heart of the Deccan his ancestors carved out with their good blades a dominion which is well-nigh as large as all Great Britain, and to-day the Nizam rules over more subjects than any Moslem Sovereign except the Sultan. This fact alone may convey some sense of the magnitude of that splendid system of feudatory states, in which the Nizam shines as premier, under the Imperial Crown.

What will probably have fascinated the imagination of the Kaiser's heir, like that of other men, is the infinite variety of India, regarded in its military aspect alone. Hyderabad is called the City of the Swords, because its inhabitants, though to a less extent now than formerly, are hung with arms like Albanians, and their bazars are stuffed with all manner of fighting iron.

Among native forces the Nizam's army is conspicuously good. The core of the troops maintained by two or three other princes is also soundly disciplined, but it is to be hoped that inspection of the more serious side of military life has not prevented the crown prince from making acquaintance with the more traditional and disorderly levies which at many of the courts are still among the most bewildering and bewitching sights in the world.

Successive epochs of history seem to pass visibly before us in waves of rainbow-crested color. There are squadrons jingling in chain mail, such as they might have worn in the days of Marco Polo. There are marching battalions of men in thick-wadded quilting, a kind of soft armor which Alexander may have seen more than two thousand years ago in his campaigns beyond the Indus. There are troops, with swords and bucklers and iron caps and flowing robes of red and green, very like many of the light-armed auxiliaries that must have swarmed among the miscellaneous hordes of Xerxes.

These arrays have no military value, but they bring before the mind as nothing else does a sense of the tenacious antiquity of Asiatic custom and of the fighting aspect of tumultuous ages that have long since sunk to dust. But it is not, of course, in these many hued spectacles, nor even among the sterner pageants which the Nizam can marshal, that the German crown prince will learn to realize what very few in Europe really understand, the stolid fighting weight and potential military capacity of India. For that demonstration the heir of the Hohenzollerns will depend upon his experiences in the north.

The chivalrous clans of the Rajputs are still grouped round their rock fastness or strongholds towering from the sand. Most conservative of Indian races as fullest of the sense of immemorial tradition, they are in spirit and fidelity second to none on earth. Their tradition is of the concentrated and consuming valor that took "death before dishonor" for a motto in the utter extremity of its meaning.

Then, again, further north, is the Ghurkas and Sikhs. Lord Roberts has always been convinced that these tribes, properly brigaded with British battalions, could face any imaginable military task. Nor does this exhaust by any means the compass of the subject.

Samuel Laughs is dead in Whitby House of Refuge at the reputed age of 108. He was born in Dublin, Ireland.

PYRAMID LORE.

Study of Cheops Proves a Fascinating Riddle For the Scientists.

The great Pyramid of Khufu (Cheops) has, for nearly ten years, been the object of special study and investigation by Dow Covington, the American Egyptologist and explorer, and his latest excavation there is of considerable interest.

Last season, with the authorization of Sir Gaston Maspero, director general of the Egyptian Service of Antiquities, and through the generosity of Frederick S. Phillips, an Englishman, Mr. Covington excavated more than 100 feet at the north base of the pyramid, west of the centre, exposing nineteen finely cut and perfectly joined casing stones, such as formerly covered all the faces of the great work. The first three had been discovered and partly cleared in 1837 by Col. (afterward General) Howard-Vyse, and again exposed in 1882 by Prof. Petrie, and fully discussed by him. Last season, however, Mr. Covington discovered and fully cleared sixteen more of these interesting stones, and a strip 100 feet long and some 15 feet wide of the well-finished pavement on which they rest; and he has just secured a further authorization from the Egyptian Government to extend this first course examination right out to the northwest socket.

The first four casing stones, being at the centre of the great movement (which dates back to about 3,700 B.C.), were perfectly preserved by the debris which came down when the pyramid was forced open in 818 A.D. by the Caliph Mamoun. The remaining 15, however, owing to centuries of exposure, have greatly and picturesquely aged. But Mr. Covington firmly believes that the Great Pyramid was opened and then closed both in remote ancient and Roman times. A few years ago, in the pockets of the natural rock in the well-shaft above the grotto, he found many clear and colored fragments of delicate, well-made Roman glassware; and firmly wedged in at the east end of a loose stone extending across the entrance passage (used by Prof. Piazzi-Smyth as an astronomical instrument stand) he found the right femur of an adult male mummy. The Caliph Mamoun, as we know, found the sarcophagus both lidless and empty.

The joinings of the casing stones, and those of the super-pavement on which they rest, are almost invisible appearing at places like a mere pin-scratch; yet every joint contains a web-like film of an almost white cement.

The few defective parts in the top surface of the casing (or facing) stones, which, of course, were intended to be forever concealed by the overlying courses, had been carefully chiseled out and replaced by a neatly fitted let-in stone. The masonry throughout the structure is practically faultless.

Several writers have erroneously stated that the Great Pyramid was covered by marble, by granite, or even by alabaster. The facing stones were, in fact, quarried out of a white compact limestone (principally Mokattam). The limestone facing stones still "in situ," the tons of limestone chips and dust which covered them, to say nothing of the tremendous bulk of workmen's limestone rubbish covering the face of the pyramid plateau (but not placed there to strengthen it), leave no doubt on this point. Mr. Covington, however, believes with Prof. Smyth that the great quantity of diorite chips—some of which have dressed faces—found on and near the surface of the embanked pyramid of workmen's rubbish, justifies us in believing that somewhere far up in the mysterious structure there exists a fairly large diorite chamber. Where the sealed entrance to it may be, and what it contains, are thrilling things for future explorers to solve.

With a height of almost 59 inches (58.75), the average length of the 19 facing stones now uncovered is 8 feet 5 inches; the first stone, however, measured at its base on the east side (exposed) almost 10 feet 1 inch, and almost 10 feet 11 inches on the west. Across the east face of this first casing stone there is a 2-5 inch vertical shoulder, on which the adjoining core stone fits.

They Agree to Differ.

A striking instance of a house divided against itself on questions of politics is furnished by the case of the Earl and Countess of Carlisle and their family. The earl has been described as an "unswerving and rigid" Tory, while his wife has always been a staunch supporter of the Liberal cause. Their son, the Hon. Geoffrey Howard, is also a keen Liberal, while the eldest son of the family, Viscount Morpeth, has been elected again for South Birmingham as a Unionist.

A story of Viscount Morpeth's candidature for South Birmingham is to the effect that Mr. Chamberlain remarked at one contest to Lord Morpeth, "If women were allowed to stand for election, I suppose we should have your mother down here running against you as a Liberal candidate?" "I have not a doubt of it," the viscount is said to have replied, "and a poor figure I or any other man would cut beside her. She is one of the best of mothers, but for the good of the country, as she sees it, my defeat would cause her unbounded satisfaction."

Hoaxing the Latinists.

One of the best of the numerous class of sham Latin inscriptions was that which appeared recently in a Dublin paper. It was in antique "Latin," as follows: "I sabylle haeres ago, fortibus es in aro. Nobile Thisbe forte trux se vaticinem . . . pes an dux." This purported to have been found near the site of a church dedicated to "the saint known to the old chroniclers as Uncatus Ambulanus." The "Latin" inscription was in reality an absurd rhyme:—

"I say, Billy; here's a go;
Forty 'buses in a row.
No, Billy, this be forty trucks;
See vot is in 'em!—peas and ducks."

FARM AND DAIRY

Packed full of the latest and most helpful information in regard to farm poultry, illustrated with photographs of Prof. Graham's wide open air poultry house for winter egg production, types of farm poultry, plans of feed hoppers, and other illustrations that instruct and please, Farm and Dairy this week goes to its subscribers in the form of its Third Annual Special Poultry Magazine Number. Never before in the history of this country has any issue of a farm paper gone to its subscribers containing so much live, up-to-the-minute, helpful, profit-making information, as is given to the readers of Farm and Dairy between the covers of its issue for February 2nd.

Mr. J. W. Clark, of Brant County, Ont., a well known farmer and institute lecturer, on 25 acres of land with poultry, fruit, and bees, secures from these an annual income exceeding $4,000. Much information from Mr. Clark is given in this Poultry Number. Other contributions in this special Poultry Number are from men who, like Mr. Clark, know whereof they speak.

The debate between Mr. Drury, for the farmers, and Mr. Russell, for the manufacturers, that was held last week in Beaverton, is reported in Farm and Dairy for February 2. Much space is devoted in this issue to a review of the proposed tariff changes, in so far as they affect farmers.

Any man or farmer who keeps poultry, or is interested in agriculture in any way, will find this special Poultry Number worth the price of a year's subscription to Farm and Dairy. It contains many ideas that if put into practice, would cause many flocks of farm poultry to yield hundreds of dollars where they now yield little, if any profit. Single copies of this poultry issue sell for 10 cents. The subscription price of Farm and Dairy (Weekly) is $1.00 per year. By clubbing with The Weekly Review you may start your subscription with this Poultry Number, and secure the two papers for $1.85.

Next week Farm and Dairy issues an eight page illustrated supplement, showing the prize winning horses and cattle, and the interior of the dairy stable and the horse ring at the recent Ottawa Winter Show. This issue alone will delight you; and it will be worth the subscription price. Don't miss these good things that are going in Farm and Dairy. Call in and leave your subscription for the two papers at your earliest opportunity.

PAID NO HEED TO WARNING

The Government Officials Received Well-meant Tips

Numerous Letters and Telegrams Were Sent by Prominent Officials of the Bankers' Association Telling the Department of Finance of Shakiness of the Bank, But the Authorities Did Nothing to Stop It.

Ottawa, Feb. 3.—A voluminous return was presented to Parliament yesterday by Mr. Fielding at the request of Mr. Foster, composed of correspondence which reached the Finance Department relating to the transactions of the Farmers' Bank. The return refers to the warnings given as to the methods adopted in organizing the institution. The later letters deal with various transactions of the bank.

On Oct. 8, 1906, Leighton McCarthy wrote to Mr. Fielding that a number of subscribers to the shares of the Farmers' Bank would dispute the bona fide character of the subscriptions. "Grave conditions have arisen," he said, "which require careful consideration before the Treasury Board grants any certificate for the organization of this bank." In a subsequent letter dated Oct. 19, Mr. McCarthy again wrote the Minister of Finance, formally asking that the Treasury Board stay any action on the application of the Farmers' Bank for a certificate.

To this Mr. T. C. Boville, Deputy Minister of Finance, replied that when the application was made by the Farmers' Bank for a certificate, the representations made in Mr. McCarthy's letter would be laid before the Treasury Board. On Oct. 31, however, Mr. Boville again wrote to Mr. McCarthy, asking whether the latter still wished the protest contained in his letters brought before the Treasury Board. Mr. McCarthy replied that his client's claim had been settled by the transfer of their stock to parties interested in the bank, the return of their money and of the notes which they had signed. "The objections which I made on their behalf to the issue of the certificates are therefore withdrawn," he concluded. On Nov. 27, 1906, W. R. Travers applied for a certificate for the bank, enclosing the required declaration and a list showing that $579,200 of subscribed stock and $201,310 as the amount paid up.

Mr. Boville thereupon referred the application to E. L. Newcombe, Deputy Minister of Justice, and the latter replied that the statements in the statutory declaration of Mr. Travers were sufficient—if they were accepted—to show compliance with the statute, and that the evidence thus offered was such as the Treasury Board might lawfully accept and thereupon issue to the bank a certificate. However, Mr. Fielding wrote on Nov. 30 to Mr. Travers, stating that in a previous case there had been an evasion of the intention of the Bank Act, and that subscribers for stock had given their notes instead of paying in cash. He asked for an assurance that nothing of this kind had taken place in connection with subscriptions for stock of the Farmers' Bank. Mr. Travers replied: "I have to say in that in the case of the Farmers' Bank of Canada the provisional directors did not raise money in the way mentioned by you."

This statement was apparently accepted as true, for a certificate was issued to the bank on Nov. 30, $245,000 was returned to the bank, and the remaining $5,000 of the deposit was placed to the credit of the bank in the circulation redemption fund.

On the very day that the certificate was issued, Sir Edward S. Clouston, president of the Canadian Bankers' Association, wrote to Mr. Boville stating he had reason to believe that the money lodged at Ottawa as stock subscriptions could not be regarded as paid up capital.

"Permit me to request," said Sir Edward, "that if only for the protection of the public the Treasury Board will exercise its right to refuse to issue the certificate until a thorough investigation has been made."

Mr. Boville replied that the certificate had been issued, and enclosed a copy of Mr. Travers' letter to Mr. Fielding.

Further information reached Mr. Boville on April 17, 1907, in a letter from G. Van Koughnet, manager of the Milton branch of the Farmers' Bank. Mr. Van Koughnet asked an opinion respecting some of the transactions.

Mr. Boville thought this matter of sufficient importance to warrant further enquiry, and asked for copies of any of the notes. On May 2 he wrote to Travers, under the direction of the Minister, asking for a special return showing what part of the $375,473 paid up capital, as shown in the monthly returns to the Finance Department, was represented by promissory notes or other obligations of shareholders, for which the bank was really liable. Mr. Travers made a return showing that $50,110 of the paid up capital was represented by promissory notes

NO HARNESS ON THE RIVER

Long Sault Dam Proposals Are Discussed

Judge Doherty Brings Forward the Ashburton Treaty, Which Says That Navigation on the St. Lawrence Must Not Be Interfered With—Mr. Pugsley Tries to Evade the Issue—Says No Damming of River Asked.

Ottawa, Feb. 3.—There was a revival in the House of Commons yesterday of the discussion on the proposal to dam the Long Sault rapids on the St. Lawrence. On the motion to go into supply, R. L. Borden arose to draw the attention of the Government to the present situation of the matter. A bill, he said, was before Congress in which a company sought power to build a dam at this point. He pointed out that under the Ashburton treaty the channels of the river from shore to shore were to remain open for navigation for ever to the vessels of both countries. The country was startled last year by an application to dam the Canadian side of the river.

The bill proposed to dam the channel and build a lock on the American side, and complete the dam across both channels to the Canadian side.

Mr. Borden declared that the navigation of the St. Lawrence was of such a supreme importance that the control of it should not be allowed to go into the hands of a private company, and an alien corporation at that.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier differed from Mr. Borden's view regarding the purpose of the Canadian bill last year. He assured him, however, that before the Government would agree to the damming of the St. Lawrence from shore to shore there would be a full discussion of the project. His understanding was that by international law a country had the right to put on its shores of the stream all works which would not affect navigation, and which was deemed for its own advantage or for the advantage of its citizens.

Mr. Pugsley took the first opportunity to deny a statement that the bill of last session was to permit the power company to dam the St. Lawrence. The application was simply for power transmission equipment.

Mr. Graham declared, amid cheers, that the interests of navigation were paramount along the St. Lawrence and nothing could or would interfere with this. If power from the south Sault could there be produced without harm to navigation, and without damage to the Canadian side of the river, he favored permission being given.

Judge Doherty (St. Annes) taking up the Ashburton treaty, showed a specific clause which referred to the channels at this particular spot, which declared that the river would be free and open to navigation by vessels of both countries forever. Those who framed the treaty foresaw just such a contingency as has arisen. Canada had a strong case to present at Washington.

At the evening session, F. D. Monk (Jacques Cartier) moved an amendment to the motion to go into supply, calling upon the Government to take steps to enquire into the cause of the mergers which have become so prominent in the commercial life of the country.

He said that in the course of the last two decades at least 20 of these mergers had been formed, having an authorized capital stock issue of $214,750,000, of which $168,075,000 had been issued.

Hon. Mackenzie King said he would like to know just what sort of investigation Mr. Monk had in mind in reference to his motion.

Mr. Monk: A royal commission composed of competent men would, I believe, be the proper way.

Mr. King said there was no need for a commission to get the facts concerning mergers in Canada, for Mr. Monk himself had given an admirable exposition of the subject. He did not think the commission idea of investigation of last session, the Combines Investigation Act, was the ideal method of investigation for matters of this sort.

Snow Delays Trains.

Toronto, Feb. 3.—Fierce storms have been raging in western Canada for the past forty-eight hours, and this has had the usual effect upon the railway traffic. C.P.R. train No. 94 from Winnipeg, due here at 3.30 yesterday afternoon, arrived at 5.30 this morning. No. 86 from Sudbury, due here at 8.20 yesterday morning, steamed into Toronto at 11.15 last evening, covered with snow.

A man named James Ferguson, who was stalled for four hours on his way down from North Bay, claims that the delay means a loss of $50,000 to him through his not reaching Boston in time.

The snow in the northern part of the province is ten feet deep in some places, according to Chairman Englehart of the T. & N. O. Commission. For the first time this winter snowplows have been at work on that line and the large quantity of freight moving into the northland has been held up on account of the snow.

The Triple Alliance Alive.

Paris, Feb. 3.—Several of the French newspapers have been insisting almost daily that the triple alliance between France, Russia and Great Britain is almost a dead letter.

M. Pichon, Minister of Foreign Affairs, in the Senate yesterday said that the entente was never so complete or productive of results as it is to-day. It was charged, he said, that Russia had left her ally in the dark with regard to the historic interview between Emperor Nicholas and Emperor William at Potsdam last November. This, he said, was untrue. Russia not only informed France before hand of the subjects which were to be discussed, namely, Persia and the Turko-Persian railroad, but kept France posted daily on all that transpired at the meetings.

M. Pichon, in conclusion, said he could affirm from the point of view of the interests of France and international peace that France had nothing to regret in the matter of this interview.

WANTS TO STRIP CANADA

London, Feb. 2.—Max Aitkin, M.P., when interviewed by the 'Express in regard to the reciprocity agreement, said that although it is a blow at imperial preference, "I do not think that it is irretrievable, I feel certain that Canadians will come to see the real designs of the United States, and how damaging will be the agreement to future development.

"The truth of the matter is that the United States having wasted its own resource in extravagance and prodigality, is now turning to strip Canada."

COL. MATHESON PRESENTS VERY FINE BUDGET SHOWING

It Could Have Been Made to Appear Much Larger By a Little Skilful Juggling of the Books, Says Treasurer—T. & N. O. and Hydro Electric the Big Items—Assets Are Two and a Half Millions to the Good.

Toronto, Feb. 3.—Clear in statement and serious in tone, was the budget speech, delivered by Hon. Col. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, before the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon. The serious tone was owing entirely to the crisis in regard to the trade of Ontario and the Dominion caused by the projected reciprocity agreement with the United States.

Hon. Col. Matheson congratulated the Legislature and province upon another very successful year. The current account showed receipts of $8,891,004.67; expenditures, $8,887,520.09, leaving a balance of $3,404.59. This balance might have been made considerably larger by a little bookkeeping.

The receipts had exceeded the estimates, except subsidies which are fixed and the T. & N. O. Railway. Others were much in excess of the estimates. The increases aggregated $690,000, while the decrease in the T. & N. O. of $205,000, left the increases an aggregate of $485,000 over the estimate.

It was very satisfactory to note the promptness with which executors had paid the succession duties.

In spite of the spread of local option the brewers licenses fees amounted to $5,800.

The decrease in the net earnings of the T. & N. O. Railway were accounted for by the large additional amount expended in connection with maintenance of railway. This outlay of $164,000, the wage schedule was also increased to correspond with that of the Grand Trunk and the C.P.R.

The T. & N. O. carried 670,000 passengers, without one passenger's life being lost.

The charge against the T. & N. O. for the current year was for the Porcupine extension. It would be from 30 to 40 miles in length, and would cost $15,000 a mile. There was already a very large traffic going out from Kelso.

Negotiation were in progress with the Grand Trunk Railway by which, when the extension north was completed the T. & N. O. would share in the G. T. R.'s northwest traffic. If these expectations were not disappointed by the reciprocity agreement the T. & N. O. would pay its way in two or three years.

According to such leading C.P.R. officials as Mr. Whyte of Winnipeg, under the proposed agreement the tendency of the northwest traffic would be southward. That would divert the northwest traffic from Ontario and would result in great loss to Ontario and Quebec by trade going by Minneapolis and Chicago.

In re-building the west wing of the Parliament Buildings the Government had provided an additional 52 rooms. The 18,000 square feet of extra floor space, figured at $1.50 a foot rental as is charged for good office buildings, providing light and heat, should be considered a good investment.

The new north wing and library cost $500,000 and provided 41,000 square feet of floor space.

"Two million one hundred thousand dollars had been spent on the Hydro-Electric system. In some respects it has cost more than was estimated on the original plan, but I am told that the whole original scheme will be built within the estimates given to the municipalities and the municipalities will get the benefit of the rates promised. From all over the province come requests for the extension of the service, and down in the eastern part of the province and in Port Arthur district extensions will be made.

"The whole system, without striving to drive out the other power companies, has compelled them to reduce their prices to a more reasonable figure."

Col. Matheson declared it was odd that the Dominion Government had not given the Dominion Board of Railway Commissioners power to regulate the prices which power companies should charge.

"The only real and supreme test as to whether we have done well or not is to be noted in the development of the province. The Government has opened the north country, completed the T. & N. O. Railway, and have practically completed the Hydro-Electric system.

"We show $24,500,000 assets against $22,000,000 of liabilities. Of those assets, more than $23,000,000 is interest-bearing."

The Provincial Treasurer again referred to the danger to Ontario of the reciprocity pact. He urged the members of the House as patriotic Canadians to make their voices felt against the ratification of the agreement, to stand true to Canada not to give the trade of the Dominion to a foreign country.

The main and supplementary estimates for the fiscal year ending Oct. 31, 1911, aggregate $10,232,785. These expenditures are $578,008 less than the estimated revenue.

MURDERED 40 PEOPLE

Russian Doctor Makes Amazing Confession Confession

St. Petersburg, Feb. 3.—There was an unusual occurrence at yesterday's session of the trial for murder of Count O'Brien de Lassy and the notorious poisoner, Dr. Pantchenko, the latter being called upon to plead a second time. He pleaded guilty as before.

The police say the doctor has killed at least forty people for various sums paid him to commit murder.

The count is accused of having employed the doctor to murder his brother-in-law, Count Vassilli Bouturlin, the heir to estates of an estimated value of $3,000,000, in order that the property might be inherited by Countess de Lassy.

Pantchenko confessed his guilt but set up the defence that he committed the crime while under the hypnotic influence of the count. As the trial progressed he wavered in matters of detail and his lawyers were quick to strengthen his original defence by declaring to the court that their client was still under the influence of the count to such an extent that he was little by little retracting the vital points of his confession.

Yesterday the public prosecutor took cognizance of the situation and after referring to the proximity of the prisoners in the dock made a motion that the cardinal question of his guilt or innocence be proposed again to Pantchenko. He said that the replies of the poisoner had been unsatisfactory throughout his examination. The court granted the motion and the formal question of the indictment was again read.

Once more the aged physician replied that he was guilty of Bouturlin's death.

His examination was then continued. Asked whether he had administered poison to his victim, Pantchenko demurred, saying that he would answer that question after the data of the medical experts who had made the post mortem had been presented in court. He explained that he did not sterilize his hypodermic syringe after he had sent some one on the way to the grave, because the spermo preparation diminished in effectiveness when the syringe was sterilized.

The whole empire is interested in the case because of the wholesale confession made by Pantchenko. Every mysterious death of recent years is recalled and there are rumors that the prisoner may have been engaged to cause the death of members of the royal family. He has admitted that he made a business of killing for hire, heirs, rivals in love, insistent creditors, and in fact, any undesirable person whose enemy was prepared to pay liberally for their sudden taking off.

The poison doctor, according to the police, has admitted some forty deaths, his fees running as high as $250,000 for single assassination. His method was to innoculate the patient with cholera bacilli, after he had been called to the bedside in his professional capacity. Ordinarily it was necessary that the proposed victim should be caught while indisposed, and some ruse adopted to bring about Pantchenko's attendance. He is now credited by some with having originated the cholera epidemic of a few years ago.

ALEXANDRA AND MARY

Friction Existing Between Two Queens

Alexandra May Not Attend the Coronation

Special to the Review.

London, Feb. 3.—The semi-official announcement that Queenmother Alexandra will not attend the coronation caused a great deal of surprise here, and led to many curious inquiries as to the reason why. Though official silence has been maintained, of course, rumor to-day says that the reason Queen Alexandra will not attend the coronation is because of friction as to the social supremacy between her and Queen Mary.

It is regarded as likely, however, that the matter will be patched up, if this report is true, because Queen Alexandra and Queen Mary possess more diplomacy than to let such differences be outwardly seen and commented on.

Abdul Hamid Killed Two of His Wives

Special to the Review.

Salonika, Feb. 3.—Abdul Hamid, the deposed Sultan of Turkey, went suddenly insane to-day. He killed two of his wives before he could be overpowered and shackled. Hamid is the sick man of Turkey and was deposed two or three years, the Young Turks getting control of the government. The harem of Abdul Hamid was a thing of wonder. There is little hope for the ex-ruler ever recovering his reason. He is being watched day and night.

Found Dead in Bed.

Colborne, Feb. 3.—At two o'clock yesterday afternoon Mrs. George M. Teasdale, wife of the proprietor of the Bristol Hotel, Colborne, was found dead in her bed by her son.

This is the hotel in which Josephine Brimacomb was recently strangled to death. The proprietor is now in jail for selling liquor illegally. It is a strange coincidence that Mrs. Brimacomb, a sister-in-law of the murdered girl, slept Wednesday night with Mrs. Teasdale, but she is not under suspicion.

Wednesday, Mrs. Teasdale visited her husband in Cobourg. She was apparently in good health when she returned. Yesterday morning her son looked into the room and his mother was apparently sleeping. At two o'clock yesterday afternoon he found her dead.

The coroner is now at the hotel, and an inquest will be held.

Shot Down at Her Door.

Flint, Mich., Feb. 3.—Miss Ellen Blane, who kept a boarding-house here several years, was shot and killed early yesterday when she answered a knock at the door of her home. Her sister, Mrs. Catherine Talbot, who was also shot in the arm, charged the crime to Frank Fox, of Sandusky Ohio, a brother-in-law, who has disappeared.

Breakwater for Port Stanley.

London, Ont., Feb. 3.—Government Engineer Lamb announced yesterday that he had received instructions to prepare plans for a breakwater 1,200 feet long at Port Stanley, to cost $250,000. Sixty thousand dollars has been appropriated this year.

A Formidable Indictment.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 3.—The Douma committee on national defence has drawn up a formidable indictment, charging the Ministry of Marine with diverting the credits voted in 1903-09 for torpedo boats and submarines for the Black Sea, and with disregarding the naval program approved by the Emperor, and neglect of Russia defensive needs.

The report dwelt on Turkey's naval developments in the Black Sea, and raises a warning of possible disaster, the consequences of which cannot be foreseen.

Ordered to Remove the Poles.

Montreal, Feb. 3.—Judge Charbonneau yesterday refused to allow the Dominion Light & Power Co to erect poles in the city alongside of the poles already there. He then ordered all the poles erected by the company in the city to be removed within fifteen days. This judgment forms a precedent.

A DETROIT OPINION

The Detroit Journal, one of the most ardent advocates of reciprocity on the border, and a strong Republican journal, says;

> "Commercial interests are stronger than sentiment, and the day that Canada realizes that her natural market is on this continent rather than in Britain, that day she will begin to consider whether her interests do not demand a severance of the purely sentimental tie that binds her to the Mother Country."

People here in Canada are busy protecting their loyalty to Britain while demanding free trade with the United States. Their loyalty is the lip kind, that fails to reach the pocket. They claim that reciprocity is possible with the United States without weakening the British tie. The United States newspapers looking ahead into the future, do not think that way. With remarkable unanimity, they, and all the public men favorable to reciprocity urge that it is a step towards the alienation of Canada from Britain. This Detroit Journal says, mark you, that reciprocity means Canada, "will BEGIN TO CONSIDER WHETHER HER INTERESTS DO NOT DEMAND A SEVERANCE OF THE PURELY SENTIMENTAL TIE THAT BINDS HER TO THE MOTHER COUNTRY.

AN HONEST OPINION

The Ottawa Free Press frankly does not like the reciprocity deal, though a strong Government organ. It is saying so, also, having the courage of its convictions. The pity is that other government newspapers feel bound to follow the Laurier lead in servility, no matter what they think. The Free Press says:—

"If it is going to result in the diversion of much of our total trade with England to the United States, then the Free Press for one, does not welcome it. The Americans are a fickle people. They have turned sharp corners in the past and they will turn them again. The dominant note of their politics is "The United States first.' It may be worth their while to make a trade agreement with us to-day and to-morrow they may cancel it.

"But supposing the proposed trade agreement with the United States revolutionizes our foreign trade, as it probably will, supposing the nearness and attractiveness of the American market leads us to pay our chief attention to that and to neglect our English market and our machinery for getting into that market, and supposing the American people in five years from now decide to discontinue their agreement with us, what will be the position of Canada? Take a case of which we were reminded by the schedules presented by Mr. Fielding. Years ago the farmers along the border in Western Ontario worked up a tremendous trade in barley with the United States distilleries. Then, all of a sudden they were shut out of that market by a hostile tariff. That act put many farmers out of business. It took years for them to get into general farming and other markets. Under the latest proposals barley and wheat and a lot of other natural products are to be admitted free to the United States. That will be our most convenient market, our farmers will cater to that market and machinery will be created for reaching it. What will happen if the United States, possibly owing to the representations of sectional and selfish interests at some time decides that it is no longer to their advantage to continue the trade agreement?"

EDITORIAL NOTES

We suppose that an editor who refuses an aeroplane ride may be justly accused of being swayed by low purposes. We hope the accusation is groundless.

Some enterprising Toronto people are building aeroplanes now. If they could only induce R. J. Fleming to take to one, Toronto people might be happy in his street cars.

In Australia the people say that they will get the benefit of Britain's interest financially and commercially, if Canada seeks reciprocity with the United States.

The coronation spectacle is already engaging public attention in Great Britain. But wait until the members of Parliament go over on our flagship. The coronation will be only a side issue.

They are turning now to injunctions in the battle of the canned eggs in Montreal. If they used the eggs themselves in the battle, it might be more to the purpose, though less pleasant perhaps.

The United States wants Canada's products to curb the trusts. It's quite a pleasure, to be sure, to be trust-busters, but even President Taft's mighty frame will find it hard to use Canada as a big stick.

There is a strong and well-defined sentiment in Canada for a straight appeal to the country on the question of the reciprocal trade with the United States. Before such an agreement is constituted, let the people at large pass on it. In importance to the national life of the country, it is far greater than the creation of the navy, and if a reference to the people was desirable in that case, in this instance it is doubly so.

TORONTO GENERAL TRUSTS CORPORATION

Among the financial institutions which have their head offices in Toronto, none is more carefully, and efficiently managed than the Toronto General Trusts Corporation. Carefulness and efficiency are the two essential qualities in the management of a Trust Company. As the Managing Director, Mr. J. W. Langmuir emphatically stated in the able address he made at the annual meeting of the institution on Wednesday afternoon, the duty of a Trust Company is not only to safe-guard the trust funds committed to its care, but to avoid speculation of any kind, even with its own capital and reserve funds, as these are the security for the safe management of its trusts. The directors of The Toronto General Trusts Corporation follow the rule of investing its capital and reserve under the terms of the Trustee Investment Act. Mr. Langmuir is justified in attributing the marked success of the Corporation in large measure to the public appreciation of the Corporation's determination to eliminate from its transactions all business of a speculative character, and confine itself exclusively to the managements of estates and trusts and the investment of funds under the terms of the Trustee Investment Act.

This marked success is indicated by the gratifying increase in the volume of the assets in the care of the Corporation, these assets having increased during the year by a net amount of $3,728,184.10, so that to-day, they reach the surprising sum of $41,607,297.63. The fact that the new business received during the year reached a total of $6,725,047.90 is a tribute paid by the public in their appreciation of the conservative, reliable and efficient management of the Board. When a man makes a will and appoints a Corporation as the executor, he is apt to choose the one in whose carefulness he has most confidence.

The Directors of the Corporation have expressed their sense of the value of public confidence by electing to the Presidency, the Honorable Featherston Osler, for so many years a Judge of the Court of Appeals of Ontario. His frank and cordial words of appreciation of the way in which its business is being conducted, and his belief in the principles underlying these business methods will certainly add to the public's confidence in this reliable and sturdy company.

The U. S. View

(Philadelphia Ledger.)

"Already the pretended friends of the people are raising the cry that the farmer and the timber grower will be harmed, when they really mean that the Meat Trust and the Lumber Trust and the Refrigerated Food Trust and the embalmed edible purveyors will not have so complete an opportunity to prevent the people of the United States from buying nourishing fresh food at reasonable prices. No party can go before the people which says that eggs must not be brought in from Canada for the consumer because the Cold Storage Trust wishes to force the people to take its old 'rots and spots' at top prices."

Expenditure of more than $75,000,000 by the Harriman lines to complete double tracking has been decided on by the directors of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

The Perfume of The Lady In Black

By GASTON LEROUX Author of "The Mystery of the Yellow Room."

Copyright, 1909, by Brentano's.

"Well, what does this amount to now that you have it?"

"It was at Dijon," I rejoined, vexed at the attitude of the lad, "that the idea came to me that Brignolles might be concerned in the misfortunes crowding upon us and of which warning was given by the telegrams you received. I wired a friend to make inquiries in regard to the movements of the fellow."

"Well," said Rouletabille, "you have your inquiries answered. Are you willing to admit now that Brignolles is not and has never been Larsan in disguise?"

"I never thought of any such thing as that!" I exclaimed. I suspected that Rouletabille was laughing at me.

The truth was that the idea had actually entered my mind.

And this time both Darzac and Rouletabille begged my pardon and paid their respects to my despised intuitions. I mention this incident here to show to how great an extent I was haunted by the image of Larsan hiding under some new form and lurking unknown among us. Dear heaven! Larsan had so often proved his genius in this respect that I felt him quite capable of defying us now and of mingling with us perhaps even as a friend.

I was soon to change my ideas, however, and to believe that this time Ballmeyer had altered his usual tactics, and the unexpected arrival of Arthur Rance was to go far in leading me to this opinion. Instead of hiding himself, the bandit was showing himself openly with an audacity that staggered belief. After all, what had he to fear in this part of the country? He was aware that neither Darzac nor his wife would be likely to denounce him. His bold revelation of his presence seemed to have but one end in view, that of ruining the happiness of the couple who had believed that his death had opened the way for their marriage.

But now let me tell you of the news brought by Rance when he joined the three of us at Nice. He knew nothing of what had happened at Bourg, nothing of the appearing of Larsan to Mme. Darzac on the train and to her husband in the station. But, if we had retained the slightest hope that we had lost Larsan on the road to Culoz, Rance's words obliterated it. And he had come to warn us.

"After taking you to the station," said Rance to Darzac, "and the train had pulled out, your wife, Stangerson and myself thought that we would leave the carriage for a little while and take a stroll. Stangerson gave his arm to his daughter. I was at the right of M. Stangerson, who, therefore, was walking between the two of us. Suddenly we paused to let a tram car pass. A man said to me, 'I beg your pardon, sir.' The voice made me tremble. I knew that it was Larsan. He cast a long, calm look upon us. I do not know how I kept from crying aloud his miserable name. Happily Stangerson and Mme. Darzac had not seen him. I made them walk around the garden and listen to the music in the park, and then we returned to the carriage. Upon the sidewalk in front of the station there was Larsan. I cannot understand how Stangerson and Mme. Darzac could have helped but see him"—

"Are you sure that they did not see him?" interrupted Darzac.

"Yes. I feigned illness. We got into the carriage and ordered the coachman to drive as fast as he could. The man stood on the sidewalk, staring after us with his cruel eyes as we drove away."

"And you are certain that my wife did not see him?" repeated Darzac.

"Certain, I assure you."

"But, good God, Darzac," interposed Rouletabille, "how long do you think you can deceive your wife as to the fact that Larsan has reappeared and that she actually saw him? At the time you reached Garavan your wife sent me the telegram I am going to ask you to read." And he held out to M. Darzac the paper which bore the two words, "Save us."

Darzac read it, with whitened face.

"She'll go mad again," he said.

CHAPTER V.

The Castle of Horrors.

WHEN he alights at the Garavan station, whatever the season, the traveler might almost fancy himself in the garden of Hesperides, whose golden apples excited the desire of the conqueror of the Nemean lion.

When, after alighting from the train, we came to the bank of the sea our eyes were struck by a dazzling silhouette of a castle standing upon the peninsula of Hercules, which the works accomplished on the frontier have, alas, nearly destroyed. The oblique rays of the sun which were falling upon the walls and the old square tower made the reflection of the tower glisten in the waters like a breastplate. The tower seemed to stand guard like an old sentinel over the bay of Garavan before us like a blue lake of fire.

Upon the lower steps of the stairway which led to a tower was the charming figure of Arthur Rance's wife, who had been the beautiful Edith Prescott.

The voice of the young wife was her greatest charm, although the grace of her entire being was perfect. She greeted us in the simple fashion—the fashion of the ideal hostess. Rouletabille and myself made an effort to tell her that we had intended to look for a stopping place in the village. She lifted her shoulders with a gesture that was almost childish and said that our rooms were all ready for us.

"Come, come! You haven't seen the chateau. Oh, I will show you 'la Louve' another time. It is the only gloomy corner in the place. It makes me shiver. But, do you know, I love to shiver! Oh, M. Rouletabille, you'll tell me stories that will make me shiver some day, won't you?"

And, chattering thus, she glided in front of us in her white gown. She made a singularly pretty picture in this garden of the orient between the threatening old tower and the carved stone flowers of the ruined chapel.

And at our left is the immense tower of the twelfth century, which, Mme. Edith tells us, the natives call "la Louve" and which neither time nor war nor tempest has been able to destroy. It is just as it appeared in 1107, when the Saracens were able to make no headway in their attacks upon it. It was there that Mme. Edith had chosen to have her rooms. I stopped looking at the objects around us to look at the people. Arthur Rance was gazing at Mme. Darzac when my eyes fell upon them, and Rouletabille seemed to be lost in thought and far, far away from us all. Darzac and Stangerson were talking in low tones. The same thought was filling the minds of each one of these people, both those who kept silence and those who if they spoke were careful to say nothing which could give a clew to the thoughts.

We had passed through the postern and found ourselves in another court. Opposite us was the old donjon. Its appearance was more than impressive. It was high and square, and it was on account of its shape that it was known as the square tower. And as this tower occupies the most important corner of the fortification it was also known as the corner tower.

"That tower yonder in the opposite corner," went on Edith, "is the Tower of Charles the Bold, so called because he was the duke who furnished the plans when it became necessary to transform the defenses of the chateau so as to make them resist the attacks of the artillery. Old Bob has made this tower his study. I have never been able to refuse old Bob anything he wanted. Old Bob," she added, with a charming smile, "is my uncle. That is the name he taught me to call him by when I was a little thing. He went to Paris on the 5 o'clock train, but he will be back tomorrow. Ah, here is an oubliette!"

And she showed us in the center part of the second court a small shaft which she called romantically an oubliette and above which a eucalyptus tree, with its white blossoms and its leafless limbs, leaned like a woman over a fountain.

Since we had entered the second court we understood better—the topographical plan of the Fort of Hercules.

The castle had been built in 1140 by the seigneurs of Mortola. In order to isolate it completely from the land they had made an island of the peninsula by cutting away the narrow isthmus which connected it with the mainland. The isthmus in the course of the centuries had again resumed its old form, the drawbridge had been thrown down, and the trenches had filled up. The walls of the Chateau of Hercules followed the outline of the peninsula and were built upon the rocks, and the latter in some places extended over the waters in such a manner that a little ship might have taken shelter beneath them, fearing no enemy while thus protected. This building was marvelously well adapted for defense.

COL. MATHESON PRESENTS FINE BUDGET SHOWING

A prolonged and tumultuous applause followed the conclusion of the budget speech, and it was several minutes before D. J. McDougall, Ottawa East, lieutenant of Hon. A. G. MacKay, Opposition leader, could make his voice heard. After a few words of congratulation upon Col. Matheson's recovery from his injury, Mr. McDougall lavished his criticism. Mr. Matheson, he said, had different methods of calculating the finances at the present time than he had in his first term. Then he was very emphatic that the receipts from crown lands should be charged up to the capital account and not put into the current account. There was a very different treatment of these accounts now, when the honorable gentleman proposed that all revenue from crown lands be placed to the current account. Also, the Provincial Treasurer had then criticized an annual expenditure of $5,000,000 in ten years of Liberal rule. Now, after five years in power, the present administration was expending $10,000,000. "His prunning down has resulted in doubling in five years what we spent after ten years," said Mr. McDougall.

The speaker made a plea for conservatism. "What benefit are we to derive by selling our timber if we are to lose our forests? There should be a policy of reforestry, as in Germany. The problem is so important that a commission should be appointed to investigate the whole great subject."

T. W. McGarry, South Renfrew, replying to the previous speaker, drew attention to the fact that $1,035,000 in royalties had been received from mines, which would never have been if the Opposition had had the reins of Government. He believed that the position taken by Col. Matheson on reciprocity was the right one. He did not think that the treaty of reciprocity would ever become law.

Calls Trial Illegal.

Paris, Feb. 3.—Edward H. James, the editor of The Liberator, whose article was the basis of the suit against Edward Mylius, convicted in London on Wednesday of libelling King George, yesterday issued a statement declaring that the trial of his British agent was illegal and the proceedings "whitewashing."

The statement proceeds: "The trial was illegal because Mylius was not indicted, but was tried under an 'information ex-officio,' which is used only in charges of sedition. It was a whitewashing because the crown had no right to call witnesses to disprove charges, when the defendant had refused to offer evidence proving the charges. Mylius having refused to substantiate that bigamy was practiced, the case ended immediately."

Manitoba Boundaries.

Ottawa, Feb. 3.—Premier Roblin and Hon. Robert Rogers of Manitoba had a conference last evening with Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. W. S. Fielding on the question of the extension of boundaries of Manitoba. The conference lasted for two hours and was adjourned until this afternoon. After the conference, Mr. Roblin stated that they had discussed the old proposed delimitation of the boundaries and the financial consideration, but had not reached an agreement.

Nominations in West Middlesex.

Wilson of Wardsville for the Provincial House. Mr. Coffan is a prominent stock dealer, and Dr. Wilson is a dentist. Dr. Wilson is a graduate of Toronto University and an active temperance worker.

of the shareholders held by the bank. On Dec. 3, 1908, Mr. Boville again asked for a special return giving details as to the subscribers and the amounts paid in-cash by each in connection with the increase in capital stock of the bank to $1,000,000.

Mr. Travers informed the Deputy Minister of Finance that the subscriber capital of one million dollars was paid up to the extent of $541,891. He also commented upon Mr. Boville's "rather strange request."

Secretary John Knight of the Bankers' Association, wrote to Mr. Fielding on Dec. 7, drawing attention to the fact that a deposit receipt, issued by the Farmers Bank in its own favor, for from $100,000 to $150,000, was being offered for sale in New York.

Apparently no reply was made to this, but on Dec. 21 Mr. Boville, in response to a telegram from Mr. Knight, said that he had several conversations with Mr. Burns, vice-president of the Bankers' Association.

On Dec. 23, Mr. Boville drew attention to the fact that the monthly bank statement for November showed that in the case of the Farmers' Bank the proportion of cash reserved to immediate liabilities to the public, and also the total liabilities was something over two per cent., while the average for all the banks was something over ten per cent. Mr. Boville said: "It seems to the Department that a cash reserve of between two and three per cent. of immediate liabilities is very small compared with what is usually held."

Mr. Travers replied that there were two special items in return of assets totalling over $300,000, which could be immediately converted into cash, thus making the reserve over 15 per cent. of the total liabilities.

PRESENTATION OF ELECTRIC LAMP

At a social gathering of the Sewing Circle of the George street Methodist Sunday school yesterday, the President, Mrs. G. Curtis, was presented with a handsome electric reading lamp. An address also read was as follows:

Dear Mrs. Curtis,—We, the members of the Sewing Circle, feel that we owe you a debt of gratitude for your unfailing hopefulness and kindness to every member of our Circle. You have been our President ever since our organization and during all the time have encouraged and fostered its interests by faithful, unwearying work. Many times have we grown lukewarm and might probably have become altogether cold had it not been that you have so persistently kept the flame aglow. You have looked after the membership, sought for materials for work and helped to distribute the finished article. In short you have been untiring in your efforts to make the Circle a success. It is with great pleasure, therefore, that we to-day make this little present as a small mark of our appreciation, and hope that you will continue to admonish, rally and encourage us for a long time to come. Signed on behalf of Sewing Circle.

MRS. W. H. CUNNINGHAM,
Secretary.

PASSENGERS COMFORTS WILL BE INCREASED

By Passenger Trainmasters on the G.T.R.

With the object of adding to the comfort of the passengers on the Grand Trunk an innovation has been introduced into their service. The head office has appointed a number of passenger train-masters, whose duty it will be to travel on passenger trains and see that passengers are properly protected and looked after. The system has been introduced at five points, namely. London. Detroit, Toronto, Montreal and Allandale.

Mr. F. Santy, local G.T.R. agent, when interviewed to-day, said that he received a letter from J. Little, at Allandale two weeks ago, notifying the local staff of the G.T.R. of the new idea. Mr. Little is passenger trainmaster of the northern division of the Grand Trunk.

From now on passengers on this road may be assured of every precaution and care being taken for their travelling comforts.

Two Wordsworth Anecdotes.

A correspondent of The Spectator (London) contributes two anecdotes of Wordsworth. "The scornful pity felt by an old gardener for Darwin, who, as he toiled among the idle rich, reminds me of an anecdote which I have somewhere come across about the similarly unproductive Wordsworth":

An old laborer near Rydal, who had often seen the poet, had been struck by his odd way of spouting his verses out-of-doors. When he was thus "booing his pottery" he seemed to the peasant to be quite daft; but his malady was intermittent, for actually he could sometimes say "Good morrow, John," just like anyone else. This may be supplemented by one of the Wordsworthiana which came to me on good authority. Some thirty years ago an aged lady who in her girlhood had known the poet, told me that he once showed her a daisy besprinkled with dew and applied to it the lines which I quote from memory:

Small service is true service while it lasts;
Of friends, however humble, scorn
not one;
The daisy by the shadow that it casts
Protects the lingering dewdrop from the sun.

I rather gathered that the stanza was composed on the spot; but it is possible that it had been written before, and was drawn from the poet by the object-illustration. This incident seems to me worth mentioning. It awakened a special interest in a grandson of Wordsworth, who told me that it was almost, if not quite, the only one of his great kinsman's poems the occasion of which had been unknown to him.

SENSATIONAL FINISH IN BONSPIEL PRIMARY WON ON THE LAST SHOT

Skip Giroux Sent Down the Shot That Won the Honors and the Grand Challenge Cup — Skip Medd Defeated Skip Fitzgerald in Consolation Final—The Bonspiel a Big Success

THE CHAMPIONS.

W. P. Adamson lead.
H. Foote, vice.
R. M. Waddell, second.
G. H. Giroux, skip.

The bonspiel of the Peterborough Curling Club finished in a most sensational manner last night, when Skip Giroux won the primary final and the grand Challenge Cup with his last shot. The play brought down the gallery, and he with the members of his rink were heartily congratulated on their clever win.

In the early stages of the game and at the fifth end, Giroux held what looked to be a safe lead, being eight up. For the next five ends it was nip and tuck, and then the opposing quartette proceeded to put it all over the Big Four, taking nine shots in the next five ends, while Giroux failed to tally. With the score tied at 12—12, the interest was at fever heat, but the seasoned players were right on edge, and while skip Lang laid his guards nicely, Giroux worked his stones like winners, and on the last shot—a beauty—it was all over but the cheering. It was such a game and such a finish as is played and seen but once in a life time, and every curler who saw it will tell of it to his children and his children's children.

SEMI-FINALS.

Giroux had won out from Finlay, and the semi-finals of the consolation played yesterday afternoon were won by Skips Medd and Fitzgerald, the former finishing six up against Connal, and the latter nine up with Sykes, of Oshawa.

The bonspiel has been a big success and reflects considerable credit on the officers who have been in charge. The ice, a most important item for the carrying out of such a long programme of games, was in splendid condition, and Caretaker Mac is to be congratulated. There were naturally many evidences of a high standard of sportsmanship, and the Fenelon Falls rink contributed its share. The visitors came here with young and first year players, but despite this handicap, made a very creditable showing. One of the most pleased of the officers of the local club is the secretary, J. H. Ferguson, who, it must be said, has been untiring in his efforts to make the 'spiel a success.

THE PRIZES.

The rink skipped by G. H. Giroux, with their win, take the Challenge Cup, and each member receives a leather dressing case. Each of the rink, skipped by W. M. Lang, gets a silver bake dish. In the second competition, the winning rink gets the leather suit cases, and the losers one ivory handle carving set each. The players of Skip Connal's rink won the coat sweaters.

CONSOLATION FINALS.

Sam Ray's rink with S. T. Medd skipping got away to a good start and counted during the game in eleven out of the sixteen ends, and taking four in the fourteenth. At the end of the eighth Fitzgerald was nine down, while at the thirteenth, his opponent was only five up. The hoodoo number was all the same, however, and while the genial Jack made a strong finish, it was not to be, and the suit cases went to Ray and his crew by five shots.

The rinks were:

Skip Giroux then gone through the last two bonspiels without a defeat and has set up a record of 71 shots for five games, in the competition which closed last night.

PUCKLAND

Here's a cruel one from the Lindsay Post—Peterborough Grillers and Kingston Frontenacs play home and home games. The first game is at Peterborough Tuesday night, and the return at Kingston on Friday. Unless the Grillers can roll up a good lead at home, it will be easy picking for the Limestone City.

Score cards will be on sale at the rink to-night with the names and positions of the players. The price of the card will be five cents and every person should have one in order to keep correct tally of the game.

The standing of the clubs in the eastern pro league is:

Ottawa	7	0
Wanderers	4	2
Canadiens	4	4
Renfrew	2	5
Quebec	1	7

Toronto N. S. defaulted to Dominion-Ottawa in the bank league yesterday and the regular hour was taken up with a practice.

Trenton protested Peterborough for playing Park, whom the easterners claimed was not eligible under the residence rule. The evidence was sufficient to convince the O.H.A. Committee that Parks was not eligible, but instead of awarding the game to Trenton they order it replayed at Peterborough to-morrow night. The O.H.A. is becoming pretty punk.—Port Hope Guide.

LOCALS TO WIN TO-NIGHT

Giroux Replaces Park at Centre and Bond Will Play Point

The line-up of the Intermediates for the games with Trenton is announced and shows two changes from that on the occasion of the first game here. Cyril Giroux will replace Park at centre, and Perry Bond, will patrol the territory in front of Derocher, Denison will be on the job at his own position.

Trenton team will have to be a whole lot faster to get away with a win. The hard ice for to-night will be greatly in their favor, but it will also help the locals, who have been going at a fast clip in their workouts. That game must be won, to-night, if the Brock Street team never wins another game. The players know just what the fans expect of them to-night, and intend to work as never before.

The line-up is

Goal — Derocher.
Point — Bond.
Cover — Denison.
Rover — Ray.
Centre — Giroux.
Right — Serels.
Left — Kelly.

BIG STORE TEAMS PLAY HOCKEY

Cressman's Semi-Readys Lost to the Annex Dodgers

Cressman's hockey team of bye-gone fame has again come into the limelight, and two teams from this establishment met last night at Brock street rink between 6 and 7 o'clock, the Annex-Dodgers taking the Semi-Readys into camp to the tune of 11—4. The Dodgers would have piled up a still larger score, only for a sign in the rink which read "no fast skating," this being the cause for their failure to score during the last half.

When the report got abroad that Miss Helen Pringle was going to referee, everyone wanted to play. But twelve fast men were chosen and she displayed the ability not uncommon to the feminine sex, of holding a dozen men easily in command.

When the teams faced off it was discovered that the Annex-Dodgers had placed a German Dreadnought in the nets. This combined with the fast English Cruiser at cover-point, formed an Anglo-German defence which was as invincible as Sir Wilfrid Laurier's toy navy.

For the winners, Deem played such a fast game it was almost impossible for the feminine time-keepers to record; while for the losers Fred Cressman was mostly in evidence.

The line up—

Annex-Dodgers — Max Schleuter, goal; Manning, point; Edney, cover; Deem centre; Walton, right; Patterson, left.

Semi-Readys—Foley, goal; H. Edwards, point; F. Cressman, cover; Brown, centre; Jay Edwards, right; Duffy, left.

One game of the indoor baseball double-header billed for the Armouries last night with the Bugle Band taking the big end of the score against No. 7. The tally was 35—26, and the game was fast and snappy. The attendance, which was quite large, included a number of ladies. The teams were:

TWO LIONS AT BAY.

Thrilling Experience of an English Music Hall Comedian.

Stage fright of the sort that afflicted Whit Cunliffe, at one time a prominent singer in English music halls, is not avoidable. Fortunately also it is not common. At a place where he was engaged in Birmingham one of the attractions was a lion show, some of the beasts being really wild and untamed. Nearly the whole stage was taken up with the setting of the animal show.

"Just as I was going on," said Cunliffe in telling of the incident, "I heard a hurried rush and confused shouting, and some one slammed an iron gate. I heard a voice say: 'Just in time, he was nearly out.' My music was starting, so I had not time to enquire. I went on the stage.

"In a moment I heard ominous growls and savage snarls, mixed with much whip-cracking and strenuous breathing. I am never fond of a wild animal show, and I felt distinctly nervous that night. The cloth behind me sagged and swayed, and then to my horror suddenly in the wings I saw the huge head and front of a lion.

"I was singing a song called I Would, which had a lot of short verses. As I sang them, my blood running cold. I watched the lion. It seemed to advance slowly, and its baneful eyes glittered in a truly horrible way. I could not go off that side without passing it, so I prepared to make my exit with haste.

"Turning, I was horrified to see another lion on the other side.

"I was caught like a mouse in a trap. I dared not go off the stage; I dared not show my discomfiture to the audience. There was only one thing for me to do—sing. So I sang in desperation, hoping that some one would come and take the lions away. They told me afterwards that I sang ninety-eight verses, but I think that was unkind.

"I wondered how long it would take those two brutes to make up their mind to come into the full glare of the footlights, and I had just prepared to leap into the stalls, regardless of the consequences, when I heard the hoarse voice of one of the stage hands say, ''Ere, Bill, these two chaps are too far forward. Give a 'and with them, will yer?' And coming up between the two lions they lifted them bodily. They were papier mache."—Scraps.

The Unionist Organizer.

At the Conservative Central Office, Westminster, sits the man, Mr. James Percival Hughes, who organizes and directs the British Tory forces. Mr. Hughes became chief agent of the Tory party in 1907, and the arduousness of the work may be gathered from the fact that he once confessed that he barely found time for a daily walk. Mr. Hughes has had a varied career. In the first place, he was private secretary to the late Col. Fred. Burnaby, gallant soldier and pioneer aeronaut, and after the latter's death was left trustee of his estates in Ireland on behalf of the colonel's only son, who has distinguished himself as the inventor of the Atalanta mono-rail high-speed system. Then Mr. Hughes was called to the Bar, but his high reputation as an organizer and his fondness for political work led him to his present responsible position.

A LOST DIPLOMAT.

Recently Found Skeleton May Be That of Young Benj. Bathurst.

One November evening a British envoy, returning home from Vienna, took his way through a Prussian forest. He was never seen again. That was 100 years ago. The other day in that forest a skeleton was found which is supposed to be that of the missing man. He was Mr. Benjamin Bathurst, a son of Dr. Bathurst, Bishop of Norwich, 1805-37, and he was in 1809 envoy to the Court of Vienna, and had been following the campaign between the Austrians and French. He seems to have been incomprehensibly afraid of falling into the hands of the French, and as soon as the treaty between Napoleon and Austria was signed he fled from Vienna, making for Hamburg, whence he intended to reach London. In November, 1809 he had arrived at Berlin, spent several days there, and continued his journey, in the slow fashion of the times, by coach. With him traveled his secretary and a confidential servant. On the 25th inst. he arrived at Kletsche, the last posting station before Perleberg, which is to-day a railway station between Magdeberg and Berlin. Here, when asked for his passport and papers, he declared he was a Berlin merchant named Koch. While awaiting a relay of horses, he put a number of questions to the postmaster concerning the safety of the roads, and if he should be likely to meet any French patrols. He seemed altogether to be in a very nervous condition. Those in the posting house saw Bathurst pull a pair of pistols out of his pocket and watched him adjust and readjust the trigger continually. He was warned twice that the horses were ready, but he seemed lost in terrified conjectures, and took no notice. Finally, on being reminded that the hire of the horses began from the moment they were harnessed, he made a start.

At half-past five he arrived at Perleberg, and here he left his carriage and insisted on being conducted to the house of the governor of the district, from whom he again inquired with much anxiety about the security of the roads, begging to be told the shortest route, saying he had a terrible fear of French patrols and customs officers, who had twice already tried to poison him. The governor recognised that Bathurst was suffering from dementia, and did his best to reassure him. The British envoy left and started for the posting house. Two girls living next door to the posting house watched him pass their window, but nothing more was ever seen of Mr. Bathurst. The next day the diplomatist's cloak was found hidden under a pile of wood in the posting house, and a fortnight later his riding breeches were found by two women gathering dead leaves in the forest of Quitznow, close to Perleberg. The prevailing idea was that Bathurst had been assassinated by French soldiers, who were after his despatches. His wife appealed to the Emperor Napoleon to give her every facility to seek her husband, and this was done, all the resources of the country being at her disposal. The hat of the lost diplomatist was found on the edge of the River Stepnitz, and this was consequently dragged for his body, but in vain. Recently some wood cutters in the forest of Quitznow discovered a skeleton in a good state of preservation, not far from the spot where Bathurst's riding breeches were found. The bones are thought to be those of the envoy, whose disappearance has always been a mystery.

A Fighting K.C.

Sir Edward Carson, the famous K.C., who challenged Mr. Asquith recently to an open debate on Home Rule, has always been noted for his strenuous fighting qualities. He is at his best when there is a difficult case to be won or a severe party battle to be fought. He has been a fighter all his life. Even during his schooldays in Dublin he displayed decidedly pugilistic tendencies. The cricket team of which he was captain, so the story runs, challenged the team of a regiment to a match. A dispute arose and as neither side seemed willing to give way, the future K.C. suggested that the best method of settling the matter would be for him and the captain of the regimentals to fight it out. But for some reason or another the soldier declined the proposal.

Sir Edward was a great athlete in his younger days. At Portarlington School he was in the first cricket eleven and the first football fifteen, and one year he carried off the championship cup for all-round athletics, winning most of the races from the 100 yards to the mile, as well as the high jump, the long jump, and throwing the cricket-ball. Sir Edward started life, by the way, as an architect.

The Oldest New Year Custom.

Every New Year's Day an interesting custom is observed at Malmsbury. The story is romantic.

In 937 the Saxon King Athelstan won a great victory at Brunanburg over a combined army of Danish vikings, wild Scots, and Welshmen.

The men of Malmesbury did yeoman service on this occasion, and Athelstan was not ungrateful. He not only gave the Wiltshire town a charter, but also presented it with a large piece of land to be held as common, and to this day the commoners keep up the old custom of the grant.

On the first of each January the Commoners are taken, one by one, by the steward of the manor to their allotments. The tenant digs a small hole, and the steward places at the bottom of it a new shilling. He then strikes the tenant three times on the back, and repeats these words:

"I give this to thee as freely as King Athelstan gave it to me, and hope a loving brother thou wilt be!"

The report to the Shareholders was then read as follows—

This amount, together with the balance of $54,770.94 brought forward from last year, enabled us to bring down for distribution the sum of $232,844.95, which your Directors have appropriated as follows—

Two half-yearly Dividends, No. 57 and No. 58, at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum	$80,000.00

The new building in course of construction for the Corporation on the corner of Bay and Melinda streets, is sufficiently advanced to show the exterior design which has been very favorably commented upon. Some delay has arisen in receiving the Doulton Terra Cotta from England, but it is hoped that the building will be ready for occupation by the 1st of September this year.

Your Directors have pleasure in announcing that the Honorable Featherston Osler, K.C., late a Judge of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, was appointed a director and subsequently accepted the Presidency of the Corporation in the place of Dr. John Hoskin, K.C., LL.D., who resigned in the early part of the year.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Managing Director.

AUDITORS' CERTIFICATES.

We, the undersigned, beg to report that we have made a full examination of the books, accounts and vouchers of The Toronto General Trusts Corporation to the 31st December, 1910, and find same to be correct and properly set forth in the above statements of Profit and Loss, and Assets and Liabilities. We have examined, and find in order, all the mortgages, debentures, bonds, and scrip of the Corporation, as well as those negotiated for the Supreme Court of Judicature for Ontario, and Trusts, Estates, and Agencies in the Corporation's hands, and we have checked same with the mortgage and debenture ledgers and registers. The bankers' balances, after deducting outstanding checks, agree with the books of the Corporation.

We have also examined the reports of the auditors of the Winnipeg and Ottawa Branches, and find that they agree with the Head Office books.

R. F. SPENCE, F.C.A., "Can."
GEO. MACBETH,
Auditors.

Toronto January 30th, 1911.

The President, Hon. Featherston Osler, made the following remarks after the presentation of the report:

During the few months in which I have had the honor of being connected with the Corporation, I have had many opportunities of observing the general character of its business and the system adopted by it in relation to investments and the administration of estates.

To the general body of the shareholders I would say that as to the former what at once struck me was the absence of anything that could be described as merely speculative in its nature, the funds entrusted to it under the agency and guarantee side of its transactions being invested, as trustees are required to invest them, upon securities approved by trained and experienced valuators and passed upon by the Board. Properties are examined and inspected from time to time, and revalued upon any extension of a loan, and the securities accepted are closely scrutinized at short intervals by an Inspection Committee, and every care is thus taken that valuators and others continue to perform their duties.

Of the administration of the estates under the care of the Corporation I cannot speak too highly. This is done by an experienced staff of officers, and results in a promptitude of winding up and economy of administration which contrasts favorably with similar administration by individuals.

I need hardly say that it is in the interest of the shareholders that each of them should be, as he can be, a centre of influence for increasing the business of this important Corporation.

The Managing Director, Mr. J. W. Langmuir, in presenting the Financial Statements of the Corporation for the year, said:

The statements which have just been read to you, showing the operations of the Corporation for the past year, and the financial results of such operations, should, I think, be satisfactory, not only to the Shareholders of the Corporation, but also to the several thousand persons who are interested in our work as beneficiaries of estates and trusts under the management of the Corporation. With the exception of 1905, when an Executorship of over five millions fell into the Corporation, the past year brought to us the largest aggregate volume of new business since our establishment in 1882. Not only has the annual amount of new business largely increased, but the net profits are, as the result of such increase, in excess of any previous year in the history of the Corporation.

I think I am quite safe in assuming that the continued success of the Corporation is largely attributable to the public appreciation of the Corporation's determination to eliminate from its transactions all business of a speculative character and confine itself exclusively to the management of estates and trusts, and the investment of funds under the terms of the Trustee Investment Act, unless otherwise provided by Wills or Trust Deeds.

The Assets and Liabilities sheet shows the residuum of assets remaining under the management of the Corporation at the close of 1910, after large distribution to beneficiaries, to be $41,601,297.63, as compared with $37,881,113.53 in 1909; $35,161,616.79 in 1908; $32,909,902.68 in 1907; $31,408,279.30 in 1906, and $29,096,178.11 in 1905, thus showing an increase in assets of over $12,000,000 in six years.

The Profit and Loss Account shows net profits for the year of $178,074.01, which, added to the balance of $54,770.94 brought forward from the preceding year, leaves $232,844.95 at the credit of that account for distribution. Out of this amount your Directors have declared and paid two dividends at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, amounting to $80,000; have carried $100,000 to Reserve Fund, thus increasing that fund to $600,000, and have brought forward to the credit of Profit and Loss Account $52,844.95. It will thus be seen that our paid-up Capital, Reserve Fund, and Undivided Profits as at 31st December, 1910, amount to $1,652,844.95.

The Profit and Loss exhibit for 1910 is the more satisfactory when I state that we have been obliged to realise from our Capital investments, funds to the extent of $336,637.39 for the purchase of the new site on which our building is being erected, and for the payments made to the construction contractors, thereby reducing our earning power until the building is ready for occupation. We have not, as is frequently done, charged interest against our building account during the process of the construction, as such a charge would only add to the cost of the building.

In the matter of the earnings of the Corporation for the year, I am sure, having regard to the fact that we have now in our hands for management assets of over forty million dollars, that it must be conceded by everyone that our profits are exceedingly moderate. This statement should be all the more interesting to our clients, as well as to those having under consideration the employment of the Corporation, when it is remembered that, notwithstanding the expert service and experience required in the administration of estates comprising assets of almost every description, our total management expenses and all charges for rent, advertising, etc., were for the year just closed approximately only 2-5ths of 1 per cent. on the volume of business in hand. I am confident that this rate will be found to compare most favorably with other companies and, indeed, with loan companies, notwithstanding the fact that a trust company business is necessarily much more complex.

Our new investment in mortgages amounted during the year to $3,147,206.85, and in municipal debentures to $355,975.90, these latter securities being purchased for estates where the Corporation is directed under the wills to invest in such securities; the policy of the corporation being, as far as possible, to place the trust funds under its care in first mortgages on improved real estate as authorized under the terms of the Trustee Investment Act. Reference to our statement of Assets and Liabilities will indicate that out of total investments of over $20,000,000 made by the Corporation for Trust and Guaranteed accounts over $15,000,000—or 75 per cent—is invested in first mortgages on real estate; and I might add that nearly 20 per cent of the investments in debentures were made under directions contained in wills or deeds of trust.

I am pleased to state that the supply of applications for loans on mortgages has been well maintained during the year, and that the close of the year finds our available trust funds practically all invested.

Respecting the collection of interest on mortgage investments, you no doubt will be interested in knowing that of the interest which fell due prior to October 1st last over 96 per cent. was paid before the end of the year. With the short crop of the past year, in some sections of the North-West, we cannot, however, expect as prompt payment of interest this year.

Reference is made in the report to our new building now in course of construction on the corner of Bay and Melinda streets. We hope that this building will be ready for occupation not later than the 1st of September next, and I am sure, when completed, it will be not only a credit to the Corporation but also to the city, and, I trust, will bring a reasonable return on the amount of capital invested therein. We purpose making a prominent feature of the Safe Deposit Department, which is being constructed and equipped up to the very highest standard that obtains in the largest cities in the United States. The entire basement, seventy-four by ninety-one feet, will be utilized in this branch of the work, including the storage of all kinds of valuables. In the large cities of the United States efforts are being made, with considerable success, by companies operating safe deposit vaults, to rent to every family, even to those of moderate means, a compartment for the safe keeping of securities, life insurance policies, deeds, etc., and there is no reason—provided excellent accommodation is furnished in the way of waiting and writing rooms, apartments for examination of papers, and for the holding of meetings of committees, companies, or beneficiaries of estates, who have securities under their care—why this class of business should not very largely increase in the City of Toronto.

The Board of Directors have had under consideration for some time the opening of a Branch of the Corporation in Vancouver, B.C., and authority has been received, subject to proper arrangements being concluded, to proceed with the establishment of a Branch to be located in that city. The Corporation has also opened up during the year an office at Saskatoon and agencies have been established throughout the Province of Alberta, such office and agencies being under the supervision and direction of the Advisory Board of the Winnipeg Branch.

The shareholders will be pleased to learn that it has been decided by the Board of Directors to pay quarterly dividends instead of half-yearly. The stock of the Corporation is held by about four hundred shareholders, the very large majority of whom reside within the Province of Ontario.

The shareholders of the Corporation and its many clients were doubtless glad to learn that the Board had secured the services, as President of the Corporation, of the Honorable Featherston Osler, K.C., who retired from the Bench in the early part of the year. Mr. Osler brings to the performance of his duties not only the very highest legal qualifications, but a large and varied experience extending over thirty years on the Bench. In the selection of Mr. Osler as successor to such eminent lawyers as the Honorable Edward Blake and Dr. John Hoskin, the Board has practically concluded that it is in the best interests of a Corporation having charge of a large volume of estates and trusts in respect of which legal points are constantly presenting themselves for settlement, to have as its President, one who has been a prominent member of the legal profession.

I would feel that I had neglected my duty to the shareholders and the general public if I did not again refer to the apparent want of discrimination that exists, both by the Parliament at Ottawa and the Legislature of Ontario, in granting charters to organizations designated "trust" companies, empowering them to speculate in the purchase and sale of real estate, underwrite industrial bond issues, act as holding companies and other work of a more or less uncertain character, and, at the same time, authorising them to become executors, trustees, administrators, and to deal generally with the estates of deceased persons. I am convinced that the time will come when the Governments issuing such charters will have cause to regret the lack of discrimination between companies of the kind to which I have just referred applying for charters and companies strictly confining themselves to the management of estates and agency work.

It cannot be logically argued that because in Canada, so far, there has been no apparent loss occasioned through speculations on the part of Corporate Trustees, this country will in the future be exempt from such losses, for American Trust Companies in the United States have lost enormous sums by speculation. In this connection I would also include the trust funds not only the estates of deceased persons and minors, but also what is recognized as guaranteed funds which, in so far as this Corporation is concerned, are invested in mortgages and other securities that come within the terms of the Trustee Investment Act. With funds that are received under the guarantee principle by trust companies and are invested in this way, while the net earnings may not be so large, yet, on the other hand, the trust company's liability under its guarantee, is reduced to a minimum. I take even stronger ground, and say, that trust companies having care of trust funds should not even hazard their capital and reserve funds in speculation, but that the investment even of these funds should be made within the terms of the Trustee Investment Act, so as to leave their capital intact as a guarantee for the proper administration of the trust funds that have been committed to their care, and which may remain in the hands of a company for future generations.

I am well aware that more money has been and is being made by trust companies engaging from time to time in transactions that may be termed more or less hazardous than by being strictly confined to the performance of the duties of an executor and trustee. That kind of an argument should however, have no weight with a trust company having trust funds under its control. One must look to the future, and as far as is humanly possible, provide against a series of years when, because of crop failures or general trade depression, values of real estate, and particularly of industrial stocks and bonds may be very seriously depreciated.

In a recent number of the "Trust Companies Magazine" published in New York, I find an article by Oliver C. Fuller, President of the Wisconsin Trust Company, Milwaukee, and President of the Trust Company Section of the American Bankers' Association, treating on this very subject to which I have referred, and in speaking of the services rendered by the Committee of the Trust Company Section of the American Bankers' Association he says in part: The Protective Committee of the Trust Company Section is accomplishing very valuable results in securing laws safe-guarding the title of trust company and discouraging the indiscriminate organizing of so-called trust companies for speculative purposes, a condition which has prevailed in a degree in some States where the banking and incorporation laws are lax."

In this connection, in order that I may not be misunderstood, I wish to say that I am only pleading that a distinction should be made between companies organized for the administration of estates and trusts and the investment of funds under the Trustee Investment Act, and companies whose charter provides that while they may engage in this class of work, gives them also the additional privilege of entering into many other fields more or less hazardous or uncertain. I do not wish it understood that I am opposed to the existence of companies that act in capacities such as I have outlined, I only ask that they be confined in their operations to the investment of funds subscribed by shareholders or investors for these particular purposes, and that they be prohibited from handling the funds of deceased persons and minors.

So far as this corporation is concerned we have for twenty-nine years strictly confined ourselves to estate and trust work, and now that we have over forty millions of estates, trust and agency assets in our hands, we certainly will not deviate from the rule adopted at our initiation, and this Corporation will confine itself, no matter how moderate the profits may be, to a legitimate trust and agency business.

In closing, I have pleasure in expressing my appreciation of the very faithful and efficient services rendered by the staff of the Corporation during the year, both at the Head Office and its Branches.

The report of the Inspection Committee was adopted as signed by The Hon. J. J. Foy, Sir Aemilius Irving, and Mr. Frederick Wyld.

The following shareholders were elected Directors for the ensuing year:— W. H. Beatty, John L. Blaikie, W. A. Brock, Hamilton Cassels, K. C., Wm. Mortimer Clark, K. C., LL. D., Hon. W. C. BABY FOODS CRITICIZED

No Substitute for Pure Milk Says Doctor

Prepared Foods Do Not Fill the Bill at all

New York, Jan. 30.—Prepared food for infants and the men who make and advertise it both come in for criticism at the hands of Dr. Charles G. Kerley, who told an audience at the Child's Welfare Exhibit that the mother who used the prepared foods according to directions would be sure in the end to have a starved and unhealthy child.

"Many babies," said Dr. Kerley, "have undergone a slow form of starvation while eating daily from prepared foods, the labels of which showed pictures of rosy-cheeked, crowing infants, said to be the food's especial products. Often the starvation could not be detected by the mother because the child would continue to appear fat and plump. But the sad fact has been that it was overfed on sugars and received a serious deficiency of fats and bone and muscle-building material.

PAYS 1.00 POUND FOR 20c FOOD

"Sometimes the prepared foods have advertised that they were to be used in conjunction with milk. In that case the plump healthy babies of the label may have been genuine, but it was a cruel injustice to the cow that made them so not to give her the credit. The only deception of the food company in such cases is that it has furnished the easily obtained hydrocarbons at 80 cents and $1 a pound, while the mother could easily have procured them in other forms at from 10 to 20 cents a pound."

MILK HAS NO SUBSTITUTE

Dr. Kerley insisted that long practice in infant wards of hospitals in this city had convinced him that there was no substitute for milk as a food for babies, and that any attempt to use the substitutes now offered would be sure, if continued for any length of time, to result disastrously. It was for that reason he said, that medical men are combining in a fight to make milk purer.

He told of an experiment conducted by Dr. Falk under the auspices of the Board of Health in which he tried pure milk on east side children in a neighborhood where the death rate was high in the late summer months. He took fifty children under eight months of age in a section where twelve out of each fifty had died in the preceding three months. These children were fed on milk of certified purity, and at the end of three months' test all of the fifty were alive.

DANGER IN IMPURE MILK.

"When you read in the newspapers," said Dr. Kerley, "that from 3,500 to 4,500 children die every summer in New York city from intestinal disorders it simply means that they have swallowed vast quantities of deadly germs in their milk, and that these germs have caused their death."

Dr. Lafayette D. Mendel, of Yale University, attacked the practice of mothers of putting children in short stockings with ankles exposed. He said it often caused much harm.

CHURCH UNION AT CONFERENCE

Methodists Will Meet at Port Hope This Year

The Bay of Quinte conference of the Methodist church is to hold its next annual session in Port Hope. The conference program committee met on Tuesday afternoon in Port Hope. The committee is composed of the president and secretary of conference, the president of the Layman's Association, the chairman of the Cobourg district, the pastor of the Port Hope church, and two laymen appointed by the Port Hope Quarterly Official Board. The ministerial session of the conference will begin on Wednesday morning, May 31. The conference will continue until June 6th, and will be one of the most important sessions ever held, as the question of church union will be up for decisive action.

The President, Hon. Featherston Osler, made the following remarks following the report—

COOPER WAS DISCHARGED

Was Found to be Perfectly Sane

Did Wife Want Him Out of The Way?

Hamilton, Feb. 3. George W. Cooper, who is employed as a baggageman for the C. P. R. company at Norwood, was brought to court this morning to face a charge of threatening preferred against him by his wife. Cooper is the man who was examined by the lunacy commission and found to be perfectly sane. The case is the culmination of family troubles, which caused the man and his wife to live apart.

Mrs. Cooper was this morning asked by his worship what her husband had done to cause her to have him arrested.

She could give no definite answer to the question, but simply said that he acted so strangely, she was afraid to live with him.

"What were his strange actions?" his worship asked her.

"Well, he refused to let the children attend Sunday School, and would not let me go to church," she replied, going on to say that he would no go to church himself, and that she did not want the children to be brought up as heathens.

In answer to several questions put by Chief Smith, Mrs. Cooper said she had left her home because of the above trouble and had come to Hamilton, where she was keeping house for a man named Tompkins on Sanford Avenue, Tompkins, she said, is a widower with two children, and he paid her $10 a month to keep house for him.

"Who else is there in the house besides Tompkins?" asked the chief.

Mrs. Cooper replied that a colored man named Henry boarded there. She assured the magistrate that she loved the children and had taken them away because her husband refused to send them to Sunday School.

"Do you think the father does not love his children as well?" his worship asked.

George Cooper then told how his wife had left him and a good home to come to Hamilton. At this point he broke down completely, and the scene that followed moved many in court to tears. Sobbing violently, he said that he loved his wife and children better than anything else in the world, and that he had never given her cause to leave him. She had always been true to him, he said, and he had nothing against her; but "My poor children, God bless them," he sobbed: "I want them so much."

His worship then told Cooper that he was a free man, and that if he wanted the children he could have them, and turning to Mrs. Cooper, he said:

"It appears to me as if you wanted to get your husband committed to the asylum so that he would be out of your way, and you need not have left him because his ideas were not the same as yours. I would advise you to go and live with him."

$5000 FOR NEW LIBRARY

To Defray Cost of Present Site From Sale of Water Street Property

At a meeting of the Finance Committee yesterday afternoon a letter received from W. J. Green, tax collector, regarding business taxes of the hotelkeepers, whose licenses were not granted last year, was referred to the Court of Revision.

The Board of Police Commissioners asked that the city treasurer be authorized to make payments for expenses connected with the police department, on the order of the Board.

On motion of the mayor and Ald. Buller, the request was granted. A by-law will be prepared for that purpose. The payments in each year not to exceed the amount appropriated.

It was decided that $5,000 of the proceeds from the sale of the property on Water street, which was donated to the city by the Nicholls estate, be transferred to the account of the new public library, to defray the cost of the present site.

The Chamberlain estate will be notified that the city will terminate the lease on part of lot 7, No. 1, south of Charlotte street, and east of Water street, on October 11, 1911. This property is known as the carters' stand.

A grant of $50 was made to the Hospital for Sick Children at Toronto.

The estimates and appropriations of the year were examined, and a number of accounts ordered to be paid.

DECIDED TO HOLD EXCURSION

Annual Meeting of St. Luke's Bible Class---The Officers

The annual meeting of St. Luke's Church Bible Class was held last evening at the home of J. J. Turner, jr., and the following officers elected—

Hon. President—Rev. Dr. Langfeldt.
President—Arthur Kingdon.
Vice-President—W. F. Turner.
Treasurer—Miss Violet Whittaker.
Recording Sec'y—Miss Baxter.

Following a discussion, it was decided to hold the annual excursion of the Bible Class on July 1; and a committee composed of Messrs. S. Whittaker, H. Moore, A. Whittaker and F. Legon was appointed to secure information and report. Refreshments were served, and the evening was a pleasant one for all.

Pastors of Methodist Episcopal churches in Washington, D. C., will join the fight against fortifications at Panama.

NEW PASTOR WAS INDUCTED

Rev. Mr. McCarkindale Installed at Induction Ceremony in Lakefield Presbyterian Church

An enthusiastic meeting was held in the Presbyterian church of Lakefield last evening to extend a welcome to their new pastor, Rev. Mr. McCorkindale, who comes to the new pastorate almost direct from Aberdeen, Scotland.

After a sumptuous supper enjoyed by those present, the induction ceremony commenced.

Rev. R. G. Smith presided at the public meeting. Dr. Marsh, as Moderator of the Presbytery, was present, also Rev. James Rollins, St. Andrew's church, Peterborough.

MODERATOR'S ADDRESS.

In a well-worded and able address, Dr. Marsh told the people what their procedure should be to extract the very best service from their minister. He should have the undivided sympathy and help of the entire congregation.

MINISTER'S DUTIES.

Rev. James Rollins explained the minister's duties to the congregation, after which words of fraternal greetings from the sister churches were extended by representatives of the Anglican, Methodist and Baptist bodies.

The progressive congregation are to be congratulated on securing such a capable pastor as Rev. Mr. McCorkindale, as he comes to the Canadian church from the Old Land Church of Scotland, with the best of credentials. Both he and his wife are now in the prime of life, and are determined to do their very best for the church in Lakefield, and the spirit manifested last evening indicated that the congregation would do their best to aid him in his work.

A musical program was also given adding to the pleasure of the occasion.

WEDDING BELLS

PATOINE—GARROW

The wedding took place last evening at eight o'clock, of Miss Sarah J. Garrow, to Mr. George Antonio Patoine, formerly of Quebec, but now of this city. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride, 482 Park Street, by Rev. R. Pogue.

CORONATION TO BE GREAT SPLASH

Military and Naval Spectacle of Unprecedented Splendor

The Coronation of King George the Fifth will be the occasion for a naval and military pageant of great splendor. The chief note will be on the army side, whose representatives will come from every state and dominion in the Empire. Elaborate arrangements are well in hand at the War Office, and one of the busiest officials of the year will be the Quartermaster-General to the Forces, Major-General Sir Herbert Miles, whilst the heavy detail work will fall upon Major-General A. E. Codrington, Coldstream Guards Colonel Granville Smith, and Colonel C. Wallis King.

The staff of the London District will be augmented with special Coronation duty officers, and some of those who helped so admirably in former street and procession functions will be again co-opted. The actual officer in chief command of the forces for the Coronation will be either Field-Marshal, the Duke of Connaught or General Sir John French. A suggestion has been made that Lord Kitchener should have the command, but this is not likely. Whoever is appointed will have as his chief working lieutenant Major-General A. E. Codrington, and there will be another general placed in charge of the Military Department of the Coronation Committee.

The total parade state will approximate about 25,000 troops, including naval brigade, but as details are only in the elementary stage any accurate figures are impossible. The War Office authorities, however, have before them as a basis the arrangements made for the Coronation on August 9, 1902, of the late King Edward, with the necessary variations such as a larger naval force and a smaller contingent from India, owing to its having a special ceremony of its own. The various contingents will be as follows:—

Indian Empire	700
Oversea Dominions	1,500
Colonies and protectorates ...	200
Channel Islands Militia	20
Royal navy	2,000
Cavalry	1,500
Royal Regiment of Artillery...	500
Corps of Royal Engineers	400
Infantry	10,500
Army Service Corps	150
Royal Army Medical Corps	100
Army Ordnance Corps	100
Military cadets	350
Special reserve	1,000
Territorial force	6,000
Various departments	180
	25,000

The special bands on duty will be the massed bands of the Foot Guards, the Household Cavalry, Royal Artillery, Royal Engineers, Royal Marines and the Royal School of Music. These with the bands which single units bring with them, will provide 2,000 performers.

Altogether there will be twenty-five cavalry regiments, eleven batteries, etc., of Royal Artillery, one Royal Engineer battalion, and one hundred battalions of infantry of the regular army represented in the parade state in addition to non-regular troops. There will also, of course, be a considerable number of men employed in the rest camps, on transport work, supply duties, etc., apart from the street ceremonial itself.

In reply to a correspondent who had suggested the issue of a special Coronation stamp as a source of income for the King's Hospital fund Sir A. Bigge has written on behalf of his Majesty to state that this matter has been under consideration.

His campaign to break down the excise law regulations was begun at Albany by Assemblyman McCue in his bill to relieve saloon men from [illegible] bonds for proper observance of the law.

THE INTERESTS OF THE DAIRY

Addresses by Members of Dairy Commission at the Conservatory Hall

A meeting of the patrons of the Peterboro Creamery and surrounding cheese factories, was called yesterday afternoon by G. A. Gillespie, at the conservatory of music hall.

Geo. H. Barr, chief of dairy division Ottawa, was the first speaker of the day. He dealt with the subject of how to care for cream.

The quality of the creamery butter depended upon the condition of the cream sent to the creamery, and if a high price was wanted for butter, the cream had to be looked after properly.

In some tests made at Renfrew, it was found that a cooler method was necessary than merely keeping cream in the cellar. There were [illegible] insulated tanks were attached to a windmill pump. When there was not sufficient wind to run the pump, the storage water in the tank would be too warm. It was not advisable to go to the expense of this and the men to the pump as often it was not practicable to use it.

Charts were shown which gave some valuable information to creamery patrons, such as the temperature and acidity of cream kept in water and ice for different periods, benefits of skimming a rich cream in a herd of [illegible] cows, temperature and acidity of thick and thin cream, comparison between acidity of cream cooled in insulated tanks and cream kept in cellars, etc. Figures were shown to prove that if a separator was only washed once a day there would be a loss of butter fat and a loss also if the bowl was unbalanced or the separator turned too slow. The temperature at which cream should be separated, was not less than 90 [illegible]

RECORD CENTRE

C. F. Whitley said the Dairy Division at Ottawa, was enlarging the cow testing work. The addition was to be called a Dairy Record centre and one was to be established at Peterborough which would be the first point in central Ontario to have one. Anyone would be admitted as a member if he would signify his intention of taking weights and samples of milk from each cow in his herd, and have the samples tested at the nearest factory, free of cost, for a representative from the Dairy Division would be detailed to the work here, and his duties would be to keep in touch with the dairymen and products.

The speaker gave in all twenty-four results which would be realized by cow testing. A farmer should get acquainted with the present performances and future possibilities of every cow in his possession.

Joseph Burgess, representative and supervisor of cow testing in Western Ontario, who will be detailed to Peterborough centre for a time, emphasized the value of cow testing. The man with a poor or average herd of cows, was the one who was going to benefit the most as he would know what cows to dispose of.

FRIENDS ITS ENEMIES.

Nobody In U. S. Senate Seems Anxious For Reciprocity.

New York, March 2.—The growing conviction that an extra session of Congress, to pass the reciprocity bill, will be rendered necessary no less by the luke-warmness of its friends than by the vigorous campaign being waged by its avowed enemies, is reflected in the Washington correspondence appearing in yesterday morning's issues of the leading metropolitan journals.

The Tribune says:

"It is the conviction of many Senators that had a vote on the Canadian reciprocity agreement been made a condition of a vote on the Lorimer case at this session, it could have been obtained and the necessity of a special session of Congress avoided, but the reciprocity had no friends who were ready to make an earnest fight in its behalf when the crucial moment arrived.

"The agreement between the advocates of a tariff board and the regulars is of an informal nature, but the former are confident that their efforts will meet with success. They expect that the Senate will hold a night session to-morrow, and they believe that the tariff board bill will be enacted before adjournment is taken."

The Sun reluctantly admits the same point. It says:

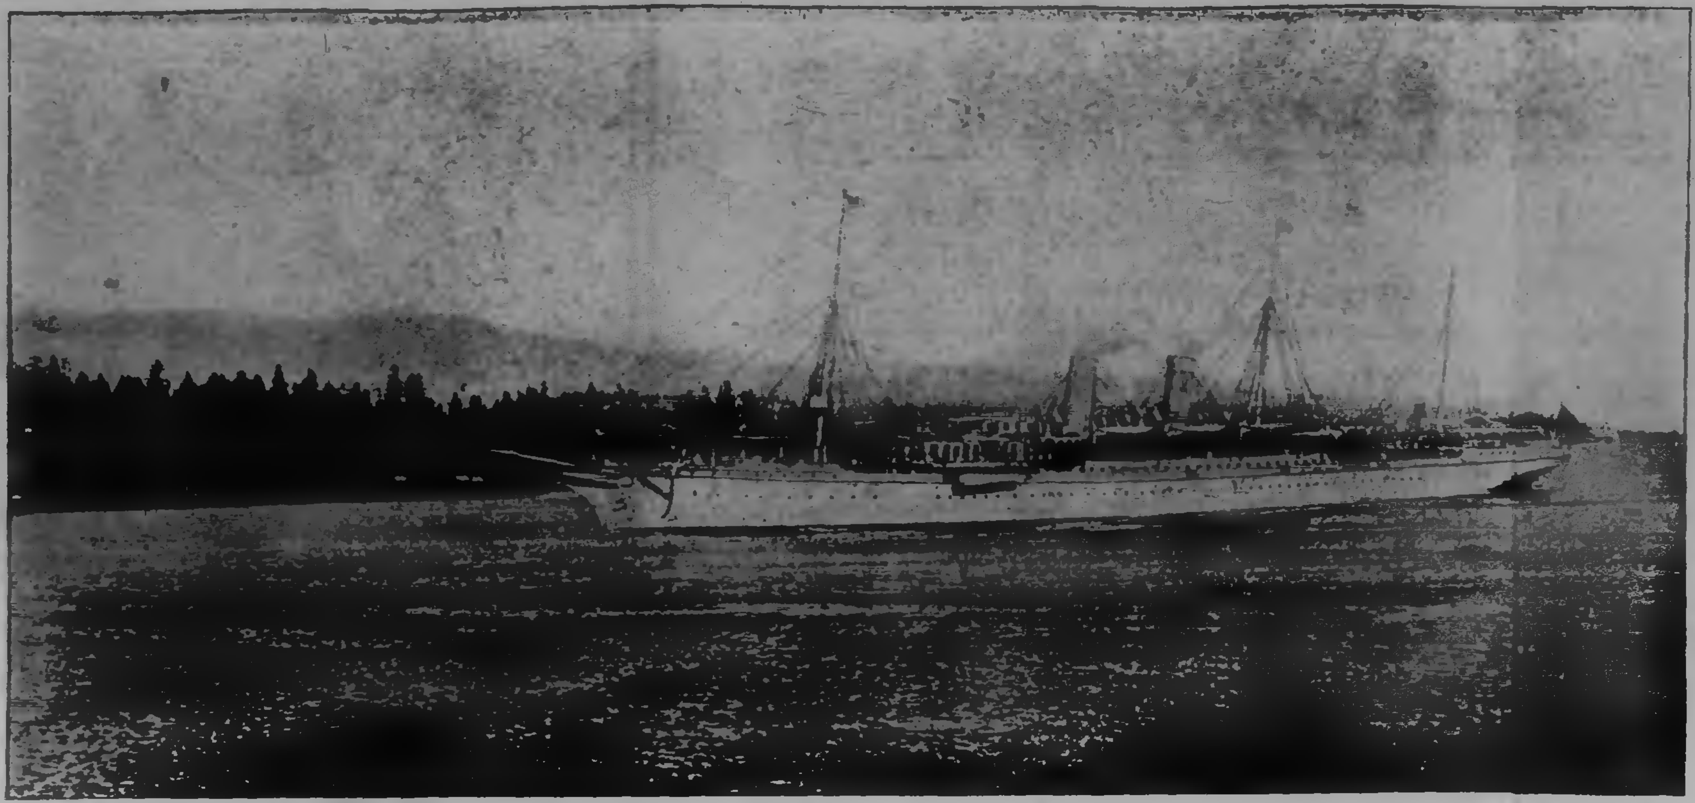
"The Canadian reciprocity situation in the Senate remains unchanged as a result of the breaking of the deadlock except in so far as the legislative log jam is relieved by the advancement of the Lorimer case and the tariff commission proposition. No attempt was made by friends of reciprocity to force a compromise upon this measure and a special session to consider this subject still seems inevitable.

"The disposal of the Lorimer case and the advancement of the tariff commission bill, however, will give the supporters of reciprocity a better opportunity to focus the attention of the Senate upon it, but they acknowledge that the outlook for favorable action is not bright in view of the fact that the Senate has eleven big appropriation bills to dispose of in the three and a half remaining days of the session."

Situation Desperate.

Washington, March 2.—To meet the pressing needs of the starving people of China, Consul-General Wilder at Shanghai yesterday cabled to the Secretary of State an urgent appeal to the people of the United States for the contribution of $100,000 more to be sent by cable to the stricken people. Mr. Wilder makes it plain that that amount will be needed before the army transport Buford, now loading at Seattle, can possibly arrive in China with its supplies.

The Red Cross yesterday cabled $1,000, making a total of $23,000.



The Canadian Pacific Railway's Pacific Coast Empress Steamships. The C. P. R. now has a fleet of 67 steamships. The Empress boats are all equipped with gun carriages so that they can be used in time of war.

A SILENT WORKER.

Tommy Russell Started Out to Do Big Things In the World.

T. A. Russell is one of the silentest men in Canada. But a few days ago The Toronto Globe gave nearly a page to Russell's speech at the Canadian Club on reciprocity. The main part of Mr. Russell's able deliverance was directed against the recent demands of the grain-growers at Ottawa. He does not believe the farmer is in need of reciprocity. Having been raised on a farm before he became a student and lecturer in political economy at the University of Toronto, Mr. Russell may be assumed to know how it feels to be a farmer. For the past ten years he has known some more practically how it feels to be a manufacturer. Up till seven years ago Mr. Russell was secretary of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, where he learned what protection practically means. He went from that to be manager of the Canada Cycle & Motor Co., then struggling to build up an industry against United States competitors over a tariff wall, and since competing quite as severely with United States factories in Canada. On the farm he was an early riser and hard worker. At the works of the Canada Cycle & Motor Co. he is the first to arrive in the creep of the morning and the last to leave in the dark. There is no harder working man in Canada than "Tommy" Russell. When he squeezes out enough time to prepare a speech in reciprocity he must be credited with meaning exactly what he says—and he does.

T. A. Russell's career is well worth the emulation of any young Canadian. He might have gone in for academic honors; but he was more ambitious. When he got a comfortable berth, as secretary of the C.M.A., he might have kept it—but he preferred bigger responsibility. When he took hold of the Canada Cycle & Motor Co. he began a tussle such as might have driven a less determined man back to a mere desk and a convenient salary. He has won out, by sticking to the game.

Admiral Howe Dead.

Portsmouth, Eng., March 2.—Admiral Sir Assheton Gore Curzon-Howe, commander-in-chief at Portsmouth, was stricken with paralysis yesterday morning and died in the evening.

Admiral Curzon-Howe succeeded Admiral Sir Arthur Fanshawe as commander-in-chief at Portsmouth in March, 1910, the latter being promoted to the rank of admiral of the fleet. He had served in the navy 48 years, and during that period commanded many of the best known ships and saw a great variety of active service. He received the thanks of the Royal Humane Society in 1866, and was twice mentioned in despatches in 1891. He was commodore in charge of Newfoundland fisheries in 1893-96. He was second in command of the channel fleet 1902-03; commander China, 1903-05; channel fleet, 1905-07; Atlantic fleet, 1907-08; commander-in-chief Mediterranean fleet, 1908-10.

Aged Lady Burned.

Cornwall, March 2.—Stephen Sharon's house in the fifth concession of Cornwall was destroyed with the contents on Tuesday afternoon, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Trickey, was so badly burned that she died a few hours later. The fire started about 1 p.m., and spread very rapidly. Mrs. Trickey, who was 94 years of age, was confined to bed, but she managed to stagger out with her clothing afire. She was carried to the barn, where she died. Sharon lost all his furniture. He met with a similar disaster in another house last fall.

Liquor Cases Adjourned.

Collingwood, March 2.—The hearing of the sixty liquor cases here has been adjourned, pending the outcome of an application by Col. Bruce, K.C., on behalf of the defendants for an order of prohibition to restrain the Police Magistrate from proceeding with the cases. The defendants claim that the indictments are removed from the calendar because of not having been specifically called and adjourned at the close of the first day's proceedings. It is also held that the subpoenas to the witnesses are only valid for the date specified.

AMERICAN RAILWAYS ARE THE LEADERS IN EVÉRY PARTICULAR

Highest Efficiency Says W. M. Acworth, the English Political Economist Nation as a Whole Not Efficient

Mr. W. M. Acworth, the English railway economist, who has been making a study of the railway situation in the United States during the last two months, sailed this morning on the Mauretania. Mr. Acworth was introduced to the Railroad Securities Commission, when he testified before them last month, by President Hadley as the highest authority on the railways of Great Britain. He is the author of several standard works on the railways, not only of Great Britain, but of other countries, was a delegate of the British Government to the International Railway Congress held at Washington in 1905 and to that held in Berne last summer. At intervals of every two or three years he has examined the railway and commercial conditions of the United States and his views are held in high esteem by the great financiers of England and the continent.

In commenting on the present status in the light of the investigation just concluded, Mr. Acworth spoke very freely. He said:

ABOUT CRITICISMS.

"I have been somewhat surprised to see the space that has been given in your newspapers to the criticism of the efficiency of your railways. It has always been my opinion that in actual economy of operation the railways of the United States are first in the world. In the number of tons per car, cars per train, in the fullest utilization of locomotives, in the obtaining of the greatest measure of results for each unit of expenditure they are not equalled by the railways of any other nation. When the Greek commanders after the battle of Salamis voted who should receive the prize for valor, each put his own name first, but all put the name of Themistocles second. And Themistocles received the prize. So too though German, French and English railway men would, I dare say, all put their own railways first in efficiency they would all, I am sure, put yours second, and on the voting of the experts your railways would come out first.

But further, your nation as a whole is not in other matters preeminently efficient. No one would say that your farmers were more efficient than those of France and England, or that your Government is more efficient than the Government of Prussia. Your railways have reached a higher standard in international comparison than your farmers or your Government, and under greater difficulties. In England and on the Continent, employment with a railway company is a prize, and man hopes to remain in the service of the same company throughout his life. He is, therefore, obviously more amenable to discipline than the shifting and often even foreign force employed on your railway."

PRINCIPAL FAULT

When asked what was the principal fault he had to find with the railway administration of this country, Mr. Acworth said:

"I think the centralization of administrative power in your headquarters offices in Chicago and New York, while tending doubtless to efficiency and economy, is responsible in some degree for the present strained relations between the railways and the public. As a wise railway friend of mine says, 'The counter between the salesman and the customer is too wide.' Matters that arise in Kansas, in Texas in the far South, in the far West and need prompt adjustment have to be referred to offices a thousand or two thousand miles away and the citizen in the far West thinks he is dealing with a machine. He wants to deal personally with a flesh and blood neighbor. I think that in these various important sections of your country the large railroad systems should have real executive officers with the largest possible discretion to deal with local questions on the spot. I also think that the ranking officers of your railways should, every now and then, visit the different communities along their lines and cultivate the personal acquaintance of their citizens.

SOME GOOD WORK

"Some good work in this direction is being done, but there is opportunity for a great deal more. If you great railway men were steadfastly to pursue this policy, I think they would live down much of the antagonism that has been manifested in various parts of the country. Time was when your railways had a good many skeletons in their cupboards and then they naturally kept them shut. Nowadays the skeletons are all buried and I think the railways would do well to open their cupboards and let the public see how sweet and clean they are.

The investors of Europe and even your own Wall Street seem hardly to grasp the enormous amount of money that must be spent upon your railroads to keep pace with ever growing traffic. If your traffic doubles every ten years, as it substantially does, you will need not perhaps to double your facilities every ten years, but to increase them at least by 50 per cent. The eleven hundred millions per year specified by Mr. Hill as necessary for this purpose is none too much. The inhabitants of your Western and Southern States, your people in general, must understand that this capital cannot be obtained in their own communities.

BINDING MONEY

"Texas and Oklahoma have no money to spare for railroad building. They want it all for their own local business. Even the East cannot find all the money required. This money in large measure must for a long time to come be raised abroad, and the investors of other lines will not be willing to subscribe it, so long as there is a continuance of the harassing conditions which tends to impair the revenues of your railways, to retard their development. If the railways of the United States would reach a time when State legislators ceased from troubling and State commissions were at rest it would in my thinking be good for the railways and still better for the citizens of the United States."—New York Evening Sun, February 1st, 1911.

A MEETING OF ALL THE RACES

First Universal Race Congress to be Held at London in July

The Central Building of the University of London will witness this July (26th-29th) one of the most inspiring sights of history. Representatives of all the races in the world will meet as equals and in council to discuss how prejudices may be removed and friendlier relations established between the Western nations and the other peoples of the earth. Never before has a meeting of this kind taken place, and it is to be hoped that it will be only the first of a series of such gatherings. The First Universal Races Congress will be truly inter-racial, for India, China, Japan, Turkey, Persia and Egypt as well as the African and the other races, will be represented by writers to their own kith and kin, Great Britain being represented by Sir Sydney Olivier, K.C.M.G., Sir Charles Bruce, G.C.M.G., and Sir Harry Johnston, G.C.M.G., among others.

No empire occupies such a vast area nor has its constituent parts so widely scattered as the British Empire, and accordingly no other empire has to face so constantly the grave problem of being fair and just to other races. For this reason it was only right that the First Universal Races Congress should take place in London, and that the support should mainly come from the Empire. No less than twelve Colonial Governors and eight Colonial Premiers are among the Hon. Vice Presidents of the Congress, besides several Cabinet Ministers in England.

The Congress Executive issues herewith a hearty invitation to all friends of the cause of inter-racial friendship in the colonies to make a very special effort to attend the Congress and convert it into an imposing demonstration in favor of good will between the peoples of European and those of Asiatic, African, and Australian descent. The Committee hopes that the Coronation of the King and the festivities and Exhibitions connected therewith will act as an additional incentive to Colonial sympathisers of the great Cause to undertake the journey. It feels sure that those who attend will carry away with them precious memories, valuable knowledge, and a new hope for the near future.

Full details concerning the Congress may be obtained free of charge from the undersigned, 63 South Hill Park, Hampstead, London.

VICTOR HUGO'S KINDNESS.

Sarah Bernhardt Witnessed It and Hugged Him In Appreciation.

One day when the rehearsal was over an hour earlier than usual I was waiting, my forehead pressed against the window pane, for the arrival of Mme. Guerard, who was coming to fetch me. I was gazing idly at the opposite footpath, which is bounded by the Luxembourg railings. Victor Hugo had just crossed the road and was about to walk on. An old woman attracted his attention. She had just put a heavy bundle of linen on the ground and was wiping her forehead, on which were great beads of perspiration.

In spite of the cold, her toothless mouth was half open, as she was panting, and her eyes had an expression of distressing anxiety as she looked at the wide road she had to cross, with carriages and omnibuses passing each other. Victor Hugo approached her, and after a short conversation he drew a piece of money from his pocket, handed it to her; then, taking off his hat, he confided it to her and, with a quick movement and a laughing face, lifted the bundle to his shoulder and crossed the road, followed by the bewildered woman. I rushed downstairs to embrace him for it, but by the time I had reached the passage, jostled against De Chilly, who wanted to stop me, and descended the staircase Victor Hugo had disappeared. I could see only the woman's back, but it seemed to me that she hobbled along now more briskly.

The next day I told the poet that I had witnessed his delicate good deed. "Oh," said Paul Maurice, his eyes wet with emotion, "every day that dawns is a day of kindness for him." I embraced Victor Hugo, and we went to the rehearsal.—From Sarah Bernhardt's Recollections.

A Remarkable Experience.

A Calgary correspondent sends this remarkable record of western conditions to The Canadian Gazette of London, England: "To leave 400 acres of spring wheat unattended and go to work on an irrigation ditch because he thought the dry weather had killed his crop, and later to return and thresh 9,900 bushels from the 400 acres, or an average of 22 1-2 bushels to the acre, was the experience of Mr. William Jones, a farmer from the United States, who moved to this country last spring and purchased a farm near Gleichen. The story told by Mr. Jones is that he put in 400 acres of spring wheat last summer. Later the dry spell came, and, after deciding that he had lost all his crop, he went to work for a land company, taking a contract on their ditch. He stayed on this work for some time, but had occasion to come into Gleichen for supplies, and while there he met a man who offered him $15 an acre for his crop as it stood. This offer decided Jones to go and take another look at his wheat, which was then coming on so well that he decided he would not sell. The threshers have just completed their work on the farm, with the above results, and now Mr. Jones is trying to figure out where the necessary moisture came from."—Vancouver World.

"I am constrained to believe that the growth of Claresholm during the next five years will be a repitition of Calgary's progress during the same period just past. Another city in Southern Alberta is looked for, and quite natural, too. Claresholm has by far the best chance of any on account of its geographical location. It may never be a large city, but to say as large as Lethbridge is to-day is well within keeping, and far from conjectural."

I would not at all be surprised to see Claresholm with 15,000 population within five years, as its greatest period of growth will be after it has passed the ten thousand mark. The degree of speculation upon this basis is very low and I think my prophesy will be realized within the limit of time I expressed."

World's Champion Wrestler Brought to the Front by Farmer Burns

If there is anything in being Johnny on the spot, when Opportunity comes ambling along, then Frank Gotch, the world's champion wrestler, is the aforesaid John. What Gotch has done to the long list of aspiring grapplers, including the Russian lion, George Hackenschmidt, is ancient history. He met them one and all and when the winning number was posted Gotch was the lucky individual.

The champion broke into the game in a very peculiar manner. About eight years ago Farmer Burns, one of the great wrestlers in those days, was barn-storming through the west, and to convince the public that he was the real noise in his line, offered to toss any ambitious athlete within fifteen minutes. Many climbed up on the different theatre-stages anxious to oust with the Farmer for a double purpose. One was to show their friends that they could wrestle, and the other was to earn the sum posted by Burns for the lucky man that could pin his shoulders to the mat.

One evening Burns struck the town of Humboldt, Iowa, where Gotch lived. In his village Gotch could throw any of his rivals in jig time. When the Burns show loomed up at the town hall and the defi of the star was announced on large posters, Gotch decided that he would try Frank and his friends were squatted in the first row the evening of the show.

When Burns strutted to the edge of the stage and in defiant tones announced that he would give $25 to the man that would face him and not get thrown within fifteen minutes Gotch clambered on the stage. For the space of a quarter of an hour the pair grappled. And when time was called Burns handed Gotch the coin. The farmer boy had given Burns the time of his career, and the veteran only saved his skin through the fact that Gotch did not know the fine points of the game.

Burns was so impressed with the huge strength of Gotch that he prevailed upon the young fellow to pass up tilling and plowing and get into the wrestling game. Gotch studied under Burns and picked up so quickly that Burns toured him through the western country, and after Gotch had plenty of experience brought him to Gotham.

Jim Parr was the first man to test his prowess with Gotch. The pair wrestled, and the unknown from Iowa annexed the honors. Gotch then set sail for Tom Jenkins, who was acknowledged to be the real noise. This time Gotch was not so successful, and was forced to succumb to the veteran. Another match was made and at the finish Gotch was acknowledged the American champion. Not satisfied with these honors, Gotch started trailing Hackenschmidt. He followed the Russian Lion throughout Europe, and was so persistent that Hack finally was forced into a match. The outcome was that Gotch was proclaimed the world's champion. This left no more world's to conquer and Gotch retired to the pastoral scenery. For the past two years he has come out of retirement only to meet the best of the foreigners and has beaten them, Hackenschmidt, Mahmout and Zbysko being his victims. He has done everything that could be asked of a champion and is conceded the greatest exponent of the catch-as-catch-can game the world has known.

OUR CATHOLIC WRITERS

CANADA OWES THEM A DEEP DEBT OF GRATITUDE.

From the Time of the Jesuits Whose "Relations" Form a Mine of Historical Wealth Right Down to To-day the Adherents of the Church of Rome Have Been Prolific Litterateurs.

From the very dawn of Canadian civilization Catholic writers have been conspicuously in the forefront, this as a natural consequence of the part Catholics played in early colonization. In a short article of a few hundred words countless names cannot be mentioned and the detailed and laborious writings of those early Jesuit Missionaries who gave to all Canadian history its foundation and authority in the "Relations of the Jesuits," may be but referred to here. These are beginning to receive the recognition due them and future ages will give them their crowning. From the days of the "Relations" to the present, the activity of Catholic writers though intermittent as to quantity and quality has been continuous. Here we may only mention a few of our own day who by the making of books helped or are helping to place Canada in the van in the field of poetry and prose.

The area in fiction is probably least rich, and here if popularity be the test, first place must be given to two women. Mrs. J. Sadlier who though not a Canadian spent many years in Montreal, gave to the world her everywhere read "Blakes and Flanagans," the "Confederate Chieftains" and other stories and translations, some sixty in all. In 1895 Notre Dame University conferred on Mrs Sadlier the Laetare Medal in recognition of her services as a Catholic writer. Miss Anna T. Sadlier, of Ottawa, following in the footsteps of her mother, has given us several novels and translations, and her latest production "Phileas Fox, Attorney" is just now receiving ample praise from the critics. Miss Sadlier was the only woman to address the late Eucharistic Congress.

Frechette as the classic poet of his people has left us a memory which will endure, and Thomas D'Arcy McGee, though his lyre was largely tuned to the exile's note has given us his poem "Jacques Cartier" to link his name with binding tie to Canada. To-day in Toronto we have Rev. J. B. Dollard whose book "Irish Mist and Sunshine" has in the minds of many, noted Canada as the home of the greatest living writer of Irish ballads. A collection of one hundred and thirty poems by this gifted son of Canada's adoption is just from the press, appearing under the title of the "Extension Edition." A rare treat is here given to lovers of the poetic muse.

Thomas O'Hagan, writer of prose and poetry has given a fine output of each, his essays being of great value for their store of information. Dr. O'Hagan is now editor of The New World, Chicago. Rev. Arthur Barry O'Neil is a singer who in his book "Between Whiles" gives us a taste of true poetic sweetness. Dr. Wm. J. Fischer, poet and novelist has given us "The Toiler," a book of verse which here and there touches the sublime note and is everywhere sane and satisfying. Charles Philips, whose school days were largely passed in Toronto and who is still an occasional visitor to that city, has lately published a book of verse. Many of Mr. Philips' lines have an exquisite tenderness pervading their strong Catholicity. He is now editor of The San Francisco Monitor. Rev. E. J. Devine, S.J. of Montreal, in his book "Across Widest America" presents to the public a store of precious information clothed in the most pleasing diction. The versatility of Father Devine is shown in his well conceived and ably written story "The Training of Silas." Another writer who though for many years a resident of the neighboring republic may be claimed partially at least as of Canada is Rev. John Talbot Smith for some time a student at St. Michael's College and a brilliant writer in many directions, whose reported ambition to be the author of sixty volumes is nearing its fulfilment. The late Archbishop O'Brien of Halifax was a finished maker of sonnets. Rev. P. W. Browne late of Halifax now of Ottawa University recently published his valuable and interesting "Where the Fishers Go."

The greatest results from the endeavor of Catholic writers are undoubtedly in the realms of biographic and historical research but there is space for mention of only a few.

The prolific pen of Abbe H. R. Casgrain now engaged on the history of Canada, has given us amongst other good things a "Pilgrimage to the Land of Evangeline" and "History of the Venerable Mother Mary of the Incarnation." Very Rev W. R. Harris, the long-time Dean of St Catharines and a copious writer of rich and classical English has written "Early Missions in Western Canada," "The Catholic Church in Niagara Peninsula," "Days and Nights in the Tropics," etc. "The Jubilee Volume of the Archdiocese of Toronto," evinces much research and care and is largely written and altogether edited by Rev. Dr. Teefy. "The Mistakes of Modern Infidels" places the well-known editorial writer, Rev. Father Northgraves amongst the bookmakers. Rev. Dr. Dawson wrote a "Life of Pius IX." "The History of the Catholic Church in British Columbia," is the work of Rev. A. G. Morice. The Right Reverend A. A. McDonald of Victoria is a fecund writer on theological and kindred subjects. Miss Hughes has recently published the life of her uncle, the late Archbishop O'Brien of Halifax. A short but valuable life of Mde. D'Youville, foundress of the Grey Nuns of Canada, is written by Rev. D. S. Ramsay, an English Dean for some time resident in this country.

Stars of the Ring.

"You don't hear of any actresses losing their jewels these days."

"No, but occasionally an actor gets robbed of his championship belt."

The Supreme Court grand jury at Moncton, N.B., refused to indict Rev. Z. B. Tress, charged with arson.

"SANDY" BARTLETT STORIES.

Late Windsor Magistrate Was a Famous Character For Many Years.

Windsor, Ont., sustained a great loss in the death, a few days ago, of "Sandy" Bartlett, who for over half a century was its police magistrate. In the best sense of the term he was "boss of the town," and wherever he went in Windsor people never dreamed of questioning his authority, even though he might be dealing with matters that did not come within the range of his duties as magistrate.

He brought to bear on his work cool, calculating common sense, and often brushed aside technicalities to do justice. Many a time he imposed a fine and then promptly paid it out of his own pocket; he gave a great number of men good advice instead of a term in jail, and he would never separate man and wife if he could arrange a reconciliation.

Newspapermen of Windsor and Detroit well remember "Sandy" and his advice. Some six or seven years ago, on one of the occasion when a number of them had remained in police court after the session of the court, the venerable magistrate gave advice to some of them who were smoking. "You shouldn't smoke," he said. "It's bad business. I never smoked in my life." Some of the reporters stuck up for their smoking, but he said, "No, it's harmful. Look at Brother William. He's just smoking himself to death—smoking himself to death."

The magistrate at that time was about 81 years old, and "Brother William" was then about 88.

Mr. Bartlett invariably stood for British law and order in a town which is subject to "dumpings" of foreign criminals. He was decidedly severe on the latter, especially such characters as entered upon matrimonial adventures, regardless of former ties in the "States." On one occasion there was brought before him an enterprising gentleman, who had taken the ferry from Detroit and settled in Windsor, with a view to marrying "a lady of means." His ingratiating manner brought him success in this undertaking, when it was discovered that more than one wife awaited him in vain in the "Land of the Somewhat Free and the more-or-less Brave." Life became rather strenuous for the foreign gentleman, who finally found himself in the police court under the searching eyes of Mr. Bartlett.

"May I go back to Detroit?" asked the gentleman of many marriages.

"After you've served a sentence here," was the amiable reply.

"This is no free country," objected the prisoner.

"Not for such as you," said the magistrate, with a grim set of his Scottish jaws.

"Well," said the dejected one persistently, as he was led away, "I want to know how soon I can get married after I am out."

But the magistrate was too disgusted at this failure to appreciate the nature of the marriage vow to make any reply.

The Indian Budget.

Calcutta, March 2.—The budget came up for consideration yesterday at a meeting of the Viceroy's Council. Sir Guy F. Wilson introduced a bill reducing the import tax on tobacco, cigars and cigarettes by one-third. This bill, which will become law next week, is the only fiscal change made in the budget.

The opium question also was discussed. Sir Guy Wilson, referring to the large surplus from opium, said that he could not consent that India should suffer losses which brought no corresponding benefit in the interest of reforms in China, and the Government should therefore safeguard India's legitimate interests so long as India's trade exists. Later he again referred to the large opium revenue as a cause of anxiety, and intimated that in the course of time the Indian people would be called upon to make sacrifices in the cause of humanity. He prophesied that India would not shrink from bearing her share of the burden in uplifting a sister nation.

Dynamite Explosion.

Montreal, March 2.—Half the inhabitants of the Island of Montreal were rudely disturbed at twenty minutes after six o'clock yesterday morning by a noise afterwards variously explained by a wide range of suggestions from a boiler explosion to an earthquake. It required hours of investigation to discover the cause of the disturbance, which was created by the explosion of a quantity of dynamite stored in a wooden shanty.

Luckily there are very few houses in the vicinity, but those few several hundred feet distant had all the windows smashed and one house had a wall cracked.

Thirty-One Years In Service.

Kingston, March 2.—Lieut. T. J. Hennessy, quartermaster of the Royal Military College, retired from service yesterday. He has been connected with the college since it was opened thirty-one years ago, and every cadet who has passed through the institution has kind remembrances of him.

Keeper John Bannister, connected with the penitentiary for the past twenty-five years, retired yesterday.

Liquor In Potato Bin.

Owen Sound, March 2.—A charge against Joseph Crowe of the Central Hotel in the Police Court yesterday was the result of a sensational discovery by License Inspector Breckett a few days ago. The liquor was hidden in a concealed compartment in a bin of potatoes in the cellar of the hotel. The inspector seized 164 bottles of beer and 2 1-2 gallons of whisky. Crowe was found guilty of keeping liquor for sale and was fined $50 and costs.

Italians to Disarm.

Brantford, March 2.—A petition is being circulated among local Italians by one of their number in an effort to effect a general disarming of all Italians in this city. They are pledging themselves to turn over all weapons to the police. The action is at the suggestion of Judge Hardy.

It is estimated that 35,000 laborers will be needed in the west this year. The railways will want 15,000.

HIS GIRL FRIENDS.

Mark Twain Dearly Loved Children as Playmates.

THE ANGEL FISH SOCIETY.

A Delightful and Touching Story About Little Margaret, One of Its Members, and the Genial Humorist—A Pretty Compact and a Quaint Letter.

Like many another great man, Mark Twain was fond of children. He never outgrew childhood, and he always chose young playmates where they were to be found. He formed curious societies of these girl friends. Back in the nineties, when he was living in Europe, he created a club which was to consist of one (only one) girl in each country of the globe, the duty of said member being to write occasionally to the chief officer, who faithfully replied to these random and far faring messages. Of course these little girls were swept into womanhood presently, but even to the last years of his life the member who signed herself "France" remained faithful to the law.

Another club of girls, little girls, became one of the chief interests during his final years. It had its beginning in Bermuda during one of his frequent visits to those happy islands. It was called the Angel Fish club, after a gorgeous swimmer of those waters, and he gave to each member an angel fish pin as a society badge. It was a successful club, and on his return to America he elected other members, enough to make twelve in all.

His home at Redding, Conn., Stormfield, had been originally named Innocence at Home, and as Angel Fish headquarters Innocence at Home it always remained. Members with their parents visited him there, and the billiard room, where the "fishes" were likely to spend most of their time knocking the balls about, under the chief member's instruction, was called the Aquarium, and gay prints of many Bermuda fishes were hung along the walls to carry out the idea. Each member had the privilege of selecting one of these as her patron fish and of identifying it with her name.

It was in Bermuda one day when he was walking along the beach with one of his angel fish members that he picked up a small iridescent double shell, delicately hinged together. He separated it and handed his companion half.

"You will be going away from me pretty soon, Margaret," he said, "and growing up, and I won't know you any more. I shall see a great many Margarets, and now and then one of them will say she is my Margaret, but I will say, 'No; you resemble my Margaret, but you are bigger than my Margaret, and I can't be sure.' Then I will take out this shell and I will say, 'If you are really my Margaret you will have the other half of this shell, and it will fit exactly.' Then if she has the shell and it fits I shall know that it is really my Margaret, no matter how many years have gone by or how much older she has grown."

All this he said very gravely and earnestly, and the little girl took the shell thoughtfully and promised to keep it always. Next morning when she came running up to meet him on the hotel veranda he looked at her questioningly.

"You look like Margaret," he said, "but I can't be sure. If you are really my Margaret you will have a shell I gave her once—the mate to this one"—

He got no further. The talisman was promptly produced, and it fitted exactly. He returned to America, and somewhat later Margaret received a letter—one of the pretty letters he was always writing to children. In it he said:

> I am always making mistakes. When I was in New York six weeks ago I was on a corner of Fifth avenue and saw a small girl—not a big one—start across from the opposite corner, and I exclaimed to myself joyfully, "That is certainly my Margaret," so I rushed to meet her. But as she came nearer I began to doubt and said to myself, "It's a Margaret, that is plain enough, but I'm half afraid it is somebody else's." So when I passed her I held my shell so she couldn't help but see it. Dear, she only glanced at it and passed on. I wondered if she could have overlooked it. It seemed best to find out, so I turned and followed and caught up with her and said deferentially, "Dear miss, I already know your first name by the look of you, but would you mind telling me your other one?" She was vexed and said, pretty sharply: "It's Douglas, if you're so anxious to know. I know your name by your looks, and I'd advise you to shut yourself up with pen and ink and write some more rubbish. I am surprised that they allow you to run at large. You are likely to get run over by a baby carriage any time. Run along now and don't let the cows bite you."
>
> What an idea! There aren't any cows on Fifth avenue. But I didn't smile. I didn't let on to perceive how uncultured she was. She was from the country, of course, and didn't know what a comical blunder she was making.

Margaret, with her mother, called when they returned to America. When the cards were brought to him he looked at hers and said:

"Well, the young lady, her name seems familiar, but I can't be sure it's my Margaret without a certain token which she is supposed to carry as a proof." The shell came up without delay. He took the two halves now to a jeweler and had them set in gold as charms. One of these Margaret wore on a ribbon about her neck, and the other he linked to his watch chain, where it remained till he died. What a sweet fancy it all was!

He spent the last months of his life in Bermuda in the home of one of his angel fish, Helen Allen, daughter of the American vice consul there. She was his daily companion, and it will be her lifelong happy memory that she brightened and comforted his final days.—Albert Bigelow Paine in Ladies' World.

There were 3500 at the Galt-Waterloo pro' game last night. Galt won 8 6.

"SEEING STARS."

The Curious Illusion That May Come With a Blow on the Head.

Usually the sensation occasioned by a blow on the head or in the eye is accompanied by a hallucination. The person struck thinks that he sees something similar to the light of stars or fireworks. Such an illusion follows the compression of the globe of the eye. If there is a sudden relaxation of the eyeball, due perhaps to a passing paralysis of the external muscular system of the eye, the effect is like that of a strong breath exhaled over the face of a mirror. Instead of a shower of sparks or stars, a veil falls mist-like on the eye.

A man "sees stars" because the eye has been momentarily flattened either by sudden action or by a spontaneous spasm. Sudden sickness, a swoon, nausea or some too poignant emotion may be enough to produce the reflex movement. The most peculiar feature is that the initial seat of the phenomenon is not in the eye, but in the ear. This is a recognized physiological fact that has been demonstrated by the best eye specialists. The sense of locality, the sense of space, to which man owes his power to stand alone, to walk straight, to look straight forward or in any chosen direction, the sense which regulates his attitudes and co-ordinates his gestures, is seated in the semicircular canals of the internal ear. When a hemorrhage, a wound or a violent disturbance of any sort produces disorder in the semicircular canals the disturbance is followed by vertigo. Vertigo is a visible trouble. The victim cannot use his eyes. If he can see at all his vision is blurred or deceitful, and he imagines that he is either falling or rising from the earth.

There is a close relationship between the nerves of the eye and those of the internal ear, and some skillful physicians have declared that the physician who is summoned to a case of eye trouble should begin his diagnosis by a careful examination of the periphery of the outer ear, as well as the mechanism of the internal ear centres.

Discomforts of Coaching Days.

Posterity will know nothing of the misery their forefathers underwent in the traveling way, and whenever we hear—which we often do—unreasonable grumblings about the absence of trifling luxuries on railroads we are tempted to wish the parties consigned to a good long ride in an old stagecoach. Why, the worst third class that ever was put next the engine is infinitely better than the inside of the best of them used to be, to say nothing of the speed. As to the outsides of the old coaches, with their roastings, their soakings, their freezings and their smotherings with dust, one cannot but feel that the establishment of railways was a downright prolongation of life—Surtees (1868).

Barring Out the Wolves.

Every Siberian village is surrounded by a big stockade some ten or fifteen feet in height. This erection is to prevent the sheep and cattle from wandering into the forests and so falling a prey to the wild animals which swarm therein. In addition to this, each village makes common property of an enormous number of dogs of the wolfhound breed, which are kept for protection from the wolves which in winter, desperate with hunger, descend upon the villages. Such dogs are rightly prized and, though they belong to nobody in particular, are kept well fed and cared for. They are huge beasts, almost as savage as the wolves themselves.—Argonaut.

Rheumatism In Pigeons.

Until I kept a flock I never realized the thousand natural shocks a pigeon is heir to. Among the most insidious of these is rheumatism. If they sleep near an open window or in a draft it is pretty sure to develop, frequently in the form of wing disease. The elbow joint is the part most affected, probably on account of being the most exposed and liable to become chilled. The main symptom is a lump on the wing and feverishness. A bird so afflicted should be placed alone in a pen and fed plain food. Pluck the feathers around the affected joint and paint the swelling with tincture of iodine and it will gradually disappear.

The Third Word.

"I'll bet you anything you like," said Jones to Brown, "that you can't spell three simple words I'll give you within twenty seconds."

"I'll take it on. What are they?" said Brown.

"Well, here goes," Jones said, as he pulled his watch. "Believe." "B-e-l-i-e-v-e." "Receive." "R-e-c-e-i-v-e." "Wrong!" said Jones. "What?" exclaimed Brown. "I've spelt the two words you gave me correctly. I'm certain I'm not"—"Time's up!" Jones said triumphantly. "Why didn't you spell the third word—w-r-o-n-g?"

Prod For Prod!

"This animal, ladies and gents," said a traveling showman, "is the chimpanzee. The remarkable thing about the chimpanzee is that it comes nearest to bein' a human person of any speshy of the monkey tribe. This here is the chimpanzee, ladies and gents—the one inside the cage. Please stand a little father back, sir," he added to a youth who was poking the animal with his cane, "for the company may make a mistake!"

Flower Scents.

True flower scents are obtained in three ways—first, by spreading fresh blossoms upon glass thickly smeared with pure grease, letting them stand in the sun and as they wilt replacing them until the grease is as fragrant as the flowers; second, by repeatedly infusing fresh petals in oil, and, third, by infusing them in ether, which is then distilled to a dry solid.

Husband—I am sure you will unless the landlord raises the rent.

Backache, Headache Internal Pains.

MRS. JOSEPH LACELLE

"If every suffering woman would take Peruna, they would soon know its value and never be without it."

MRS. JOSEPH LACELLE, 124 Bronson St., Ottawa East, Ontario, Canada, writes:

"I suffered with backache, headache and dragging pains for over nine months, and nothing relieved me until I took Peruna. This medicine is by far better than any other medicine for these troubles. A few bottles relieved me of my miserable half-dead, half-alive condition.

"I am now in good health, have neither ache nor pain, nor have I had any for the past year.

"If every suffering woman would take Peruna, they would soon know its value and never be without it."

Dyspepsia and Indigestion.

Mde. Joseph Beaudoin, 59 Rue St. Olivier, Quebec, P. Q. Can., writes:

"Peruna is wonderful for indigestion. I eat whatever I want and no longer feel any oppression. Having had dyspepsia for a long time and having tried various other remedies, I decided to try Peruna and with the fourth bottle of it I was perfectly cured.

"For this reason I recommend it to all those who are suffering with the terrible malady, dyspepsia. I hope that all who are afflicted in this way will take Peruna and Manalin as I did."

Chronic Nasal Catarrh.

Mr. Chas. H. Stevens, 123 Sixteenth St., Detroit, Mich., writes:

"It affords me great pleasure to testify to the merits of Peruna as a remedy for catarrh.

"I suffered for some time with chronic nasal catarrh, but after five months treatment during which time I used seven bottles of Peruna I am pleased to say that I am entirely well, there not being the slightest trace of catarrh left.

"Peruna is without a doubt, in my mind, the greatest remedy known for catarrh."

Weak, Tired Feeling.

Miss Marie A. Lesser, 923 W. 8th St., Chicago, Ill., Worthy Secretary I. O. G. T., writes:

"I am glad to give a good word for Peruna, and I hope that all who see this who are troubled with systemic catarrh as I was for years, will profit by it.

"I had tried many remedies, but none did more than give me temporary relief, and some did not even do that.

"I took Peruna at the suggestion of a friend, and was more than pleased and surprised at the results

"I am now perfectly well and strong. That weak, tired feeling has left me, and I feel like a different person entirely."

The Slavery of Disease.

It is wonderful how many women in Canada and the United States have been practically made new again by the use of Peruna.

Not the victims of any organic disease, but just a half-dead and half-alive, condition.

Miserable, dragging pains that keep a woman always from doing her best work, from being her best self. Cross and petulent, perhaps. Maybe even a slattern in her household, just because her health is continually below par. She never feels quite right. She gets the reputation of being sullen, or morbid, or ill tempered.

Her trouble is not a moral one at all, it is simply a physical one. Make such a woman well and she immediately becomes transformed into a new being mentally.

This is exactly what Peruna has done in a multitude of cases.

MACKAY ASKS ABOUT C.N.R.

He Wants to Know About Lands for It.

Bill in Regard to Electric Wiring is Coming.

Toronto, Feb. 4.—Two consolidation bills were advanced through the committee stage at the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon.

Hon. Dr. Pyne explained in reference to the bill respecting the profession of architects that in placing the witness fee for architects at $5, while that for doctors was at present $4, it was not intended for the difference to continue, as both would be made alike.

Hon. F. Cochrane gave various technical explanations of the consolidation bill respecting the cutting of saw-logs.

Notice was given by Hon. A. G. MacKay of a series of enquiries respecting the construction of the Selwood and Port Arthur branch of the Canadian Northern.

This branch was authorized with the usual land grant in 1908. The time set for its completion was Sept. 1, 1910.

Hon. Mr. MacKay's questions are as follows:

Has any application been made by or on behalf of the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway Co. for an extension of time under the provisions of 8 Edward VII., c. 47 s. 7?

If so, what extension has been granted?

Has the Government any information showing the number of miles of railroad which have been completed by the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway between Selwood Junction and Port Arthur?

If so, what number of miles have been completed between said towns by the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway?

Have any lands within the districts of Algoma and Thunder Bay been set aside and appropriated to the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway Co. under the provisions of 9 Edward VII., c. 7?

J. Ewing (West Wellington) gave notice that he would move for an order of the House for a return of copies of correspondence between any official of the Government and the Standard Insurance Co. during the years 1907, 1908, 1909; a copy of any reports made by the inspector who inspected the books of the Standard Insurance Co. during the same years; copies of all correspondence between any official of the Government and the liquidator of the Standard Insurance Co.

A. A. Mahaffy (Muskoka) gave notice of a bill to amend the justices of the peace act.

It is understood that a bill to define the individual responsibility for fires caused by defective work in electric wiring will be introduced by Hon. Col. Hendrie.

The date for receiving private bills has been extended for two weeks. W. H. Hoyle (North Ontario) was elected chairman. Seventy-two private bills have been received by the private bills committee yesterday for the seventh time.

Dragged Fifty Feet.

Brockville, Feb. 4.—David White of Toronto, G.T.R. passenger conductor running between that point and Montreal, was injured yesterday as No. 3 express, west bound, was pulling into the station. As he prepared to step off, the collar of his coat caught in a corner of the step, and he was dragged a distance of fifty yards before the train came to a standstill. When picked up blood was flowing from a gash in his head. He was also bruised about the body. He was able to leave for home last night.

SHAREHOLDERS OF FARMERS' BANK ASK GOVERNMENT FOR ROYAL COMMISSION

Is Not Likely to be Granted, However--Wm. Laidlaw, K. C., Spokesman for Deputation.

Ottawa, Feb. 4.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. W. S. Fielding heard a deputation representing the shareholders of the Farmers' Bank yesterday afternoon, headed by Wm. Laidlaw, K.C., and supported by a number of members of Parliament.

The object of the deputation was to press upon the Government the need of appointing a royal commission to investigate the affairs of the bank, with the view of disclosing those irregularities antecedent to the failure of the bank which court proceedings would not bring into the limelight. Mr. Laidlaw made a forcible and pathetic speech. He pointed out to the Ministers that some consideration should be given to the Halton farmers who had retained him to look after their interests. These men were ruined. He thought that some redress should be given and that by way of a special act exempting these men from the operation of the double liability clause in the Bank Act.

Judging from the reply of Sir Wilfrid and the gossip around the corridors, it is evident that no royal commission can be hoped for.

Among the deputation were Messrs. Wm. Laidlaw, K.C.; J. W. Elliott, K.C., Toronto, and the following members of Parliament: David Henderson, Major Sam Sharpe, Col. Sam Hughes, George Gordon, E. W. Nesbitt, J. J. Donnelly, Uriah Wilson, M. Schell, Major Beattie, Major Currie, Haughton Lennox.

Messrs. Sharpe, Henderson and Lennox spoke in the same strain as Mr. Laidlaw, and asked the Government to provide relief for the victims. The Premier promised consideration.

ALBERTA COMES OFF SECOND BEST

C.P.R. Wins Privy Council Appeal From Province.

Question Involved Taxation of C.P.R. Lands.

London, Feb. 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council yesterday handed out its decision on the appeal of the Province of Alberta vs. the C.P.R. from a decision of the Canadian courts on the question of taxation of C.P.R. lands in the province which the railway had secured by its charter from the Dominion. The Canadian courts had decided in favor of the company's contention that the lands were not taxable.

The Privy Council yesterday dismissed the appeal without costs. It held that unoccupied C.P.R. lands are not taxable until twenty years after the actual grant of letters patent, even if there be delay of many years in taking the letters out. It also held that C.P.R. land sold on the instalment plan is untaxable until all the instalments are paid.

Millions of dollars in taxes were involved in the case, which was heard last summer. The case was divided into two parts, the first regarded the taxation of unoccupied lands and depended on the interpretation of the phrase "twenty years after the grant of lands" in the C.P.R. charter.

The C.P.R. contended that this meant after the patent was granted, and the Province of Alberta contended that it meant after identification.

The second point hinged on the interpretation of the word "sold" in reference to lands granted by the Dominion to the C.P.R. in the taxation of which the province was interested.

Canadians Are "Gudgeons"

The Washington, D.C., Daily Post of Tuesday, January 31, throws a great, bright light upon the reciprocity agreement from the United States point of view. This is the way Canada is being sized up across the border—

"Canada in a Tight Place"

The reciprocity enthusiasts are "whooping it up" on the theory that the United States has nothing to lose in the game of give and take with Canada. They are able to figure that the farmer has nothing to fear from opening the door to cheaper products, while the volume of increased imports of raw materials will give a great impetus to manufacturers. Besides, all the American-owned factories in Canada will pull up stakes and locate on this side of the border. In other words, in making the agreement we "cut a melon," leaving only the rind and the seeds to the other party to the bargain. This is a novel and attractive way of looking at it—we simply reach over and pick out what looks good, without a thought of handing over anything in exchange.

Calls Us "Gudgeons."

What gudgeons those Canadians are to be sure! A great awakening awaits them; that is, if our reciprocity optimists are to interpret the terms of the agreement. As for President Taft, who told Congress he thought the arrangement would prove mutually advantageous, why, he just pulled the wool schedule over the Canuckers' eyes and got away with the manufactured goods!

What Canada Gives Up.

Besides all this, Canada gives up her wheat market to be absorbed by Chicago; her railroad traffic, which will be shunted around from west to east to north to south; her banking activities shift borderward and beyond, along with their customers. This leaves none of Canada's reciprocity losses unaccounted for but the fishing interests, and doubtless the cod will gravitate down to Maine waters when he learns that reciprocity has been inaugurated.

Canada May Still Save Her Bacon.

This sort of talk is said to be winning many of the doubters over to ratification but what effect it will have on the prospective "melon" is not being taken into account. Everything is cut and dried for ratification except that uncertain quantity on Capitol Hill, a bourne from whence no reciprocity treaty returns. Canada still has a chance to save her bacon.

LIBERALS ARE IN HOT WATER OVER RECIPROCITY BUSINESS

Montreal Star Says J. R. Stratton is Finding Antagonism in Peterboro—Other Libs. in Same Boat.

The Montreal Star says—Were the United States Congress conjointly to throw out the reciprocity agreement—and a single amendment would that effect—a sigh of relief would go up from many on the Government side. Their position to-day is delicate, to say the least. On the one side is the spirit of party fidelity, on the other, the recognised fact of antagonistic public sentiment in a general way. Mr. Sealey, of Wentworth, himself an erstwhile advocate of reciprocity, now promises an amendment to exempt fruit and vegetables from the agreement. In other words, he would move to kill it, for in this instance, it is a case of all or none.

Mr. Harris, of Brantford, is said to dislike the agricultural implement part of it and MR. STRATTON, OF PETERBOROUGH, FINDS MUCH ANTAGONISM IN HIS CONSTITUENCY. There are many others. The present outlook is for a debate extending over a period of some weeks, at least, until it is known what Washington is going to do with regard to the matter. Next Tuesday should be an epoch-marking day in Canada's official and fiscal policy.

Suffragettes Planning Demonstration for Monday

Special to The Review.

London, Eng., Feb. 4.—Some of the more militant suffragettes have issued a warning through the press that they will hold a big demonstration against the King on Monday, unless the speech from the throne promises consideration of their cause. As there is likely to be no reference, preparations are being made to hold the unruly women in order.

Flipping the Meter.

New York, Feb. 4.—The mystery of "flipping the meter," known only to initiate chauffeurs, has been unwittingly explained by an offending adept to the chief of the city bureau of licenses, and as a result he set departmental machinery in motion which will compel the taxicab companies to take down 400 meters, with permission to assemble them again only when they have been so altered that crooked chauffeurs cannot swindle the public by their aid.

While Chief Oliver was riding in a taxicab the other night he saw the chauffeur jiggle the flag above the meter, whereupon the hand on the dial jumped from $2 to $6.40. The astonished chief investigated and learned that the practice has been general among the unscrupulous experts, and [illegible] as "flipping the meter."

THREW LOOT OVERBOARD

Intoxicated Man Robbed of $200 and Gold Watch.

Windsor, Feb. 4.—A most daring robbery occurred yesterday afternoon, when Ross Simpson and Fred Beers of Detroit robbed an intoxicated man in the Herenden Hotel of $200 and a gold watch, and then made a dash for the Windsor ferry.

The police reached the dock just as the ferry was ready to pull out for Detroit. The boat was held while the officers searched for the men.

In an effort to get rid of the evidence of the deed, the men threw the money and watch overboard. Three five dollar bills were rescued by a customs officer, who recovered the money by means of a row boat. The men will appear before Magistrate Leggatt to-day.

A University Pastor.

Kingston, Feb. 4.—That not over forty per cent. of the students at Queen's attend church regularly and not over twenty per cent. have definite church homes, is a statement made in a circular issued at the university. The solution offered is the appointment of a university pastor. An active campaign will be undertaken in an endeavor to ascertain the working of the scheme, which will be assured by a financial guarantee.

FOSTER ASKS FOR ALL DATA

Wants to See Reciprocity Correspondence

Lewis' Storage Bill Takes up a Lot of Time.

Ottawa, Feb. 4.—Safeguards for the proper cold storage of food and a mild protest from Mr. Foster that the information given by the Finance Minister as to the correspondence received by the Government on the subject of reciprocity was not sufficiently illuminating, furnished most of the bill of fare of the House of Commons yesterday. Dr. Reid (Grenville) protested against the public works' estimates blocking the way to the consideration of those of other Departments equally important.

E. N. Lewis (Huron) introduced his eighth bill for the session re the cold storage of food. He said the bill did not attempt to cover the entire subject, but it would be sufficient to call the Government's attention to the matter. American legislators had devoted much attention to the subject, which had also of late been to the fore through the destruction in Montreal of a hundred thousand dollars' worth of storage eggs. The high prices were simetimes attributed to lack of storage regulations.

Mr. Lewis proposed that food kept over a year in storage should be destroyed. He admitted that some foods spoiled in storage quicker than others, and the bill provided that game, for instance, could not be kept more than six months.

Thomas Chisholm (E. Huron) said the matter was one of regulation of storage. Some foods required different temperatures than others. When all foods were kept together at one temperature, there was bound to be deterioration. He recommended that legislation should compel different foods in storage to be kept separately. The bill was read a first time.

A desultory discussion arose over the tariff information and the nature it should take. Mr. Fielding, in answer to Mr. Foster's questions, told how the American pamphlets he had requested, would be here in a day or so.

When at four o'clock the House went into committee on the estimates for the balance of the day, Dr. Reid (Grenville) protested that the Government was not following the best course in voting estimates. Some years ago the House used to take up several Departments' estimates alternately, and this was of value as the items were sometimes entwined. The House had been in session three months, he said, and nothing but the works' estimates had been taken up.

The result would be that at the end of the session the other Departmental estimates would be rushed through in a few days. He thought that estimates concerning the interior and agriculture departments might even have more value from a public standpoint than the cost of public buildings.

Mr. Pugsley remarked that the sooner his estimates were voted the sooner the others would be got at.

A return moved for by Hon. Geo. E. Foster, and laid on the table of the Commons, contains copies of communications which the Government has received for and against reciprocity with the United States.

Those in favor of reciprocity are: Winnipeg Fruit and Vegetable Jobbers, Forest Grange, Calgary Liberal Association, and Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association.

Those against reciprocity are: The Boards of Trade of Welland, Deseronto, Brampton, Sault Ste. Marie, Cobalt, Manitou, Seaforth, Perth, Brockville, Galt, Vernon (B.C.), Port Hope, market gardeners of the Province of Quebec, malleable iron founders of Canada, Central Farmers' Institute of Victoria (B.C.), employes and mechanics of the Barrie Tanning Co., the Dominion Suspender Co., and the Niagara Neckwear Co. of Niagara, Quebec Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association (with 31 members), London shoe manufacturers and 14 shoe manufacturers in various parts of the country.

The Kingston Board of Trade petitioned for the placing of iron ore on the free list.

PROSPECTOR IS DEAD FROM EXPOSURE; WIFE IS FROZEN

Tragedy of the Gowganda Wilds—Terrible Suffering of Widow—Body Brought 150 Miles.

North Bay, Feb. 4.—The body of Homer Wilson, the unfortunate young prospector who was frozen to death in the Gowganda wilds, was brought to North Bay by his brother, and taken on to Lake Linden, Michigan, where the parents reside. The brother had a very hard trip, driving a distance of 150 miles over the indifferent and bad trails. Mrs. Wilson, the young widow of the unfortunate prospector, had to be left behind at Gowganda, as she is suffering greatly form her terrible experiences of exposure in the northern bush, having both hands and feet frozen. She is being treated by a physician at Gowganda, and it is hoped that amputation will not be necessary.

Wilson, in going to visit some traps, went through the ice, and, upon getting out, his wet and frozen garments prevented him making the return trip to the shack, and he died from exposure. The wife, becoming alarmed for her husband's safety, started out in search of him, but made little progress in the deep snow, and had great difficulty making the return trip to the shack, where, wet and cold and unable to build a fire, she was found in a frozen condition by the rescue party.

Aviator to Attempt Trip From Buffalo to Toronto.

Special To The Review.

Toronto, Feb. 4.—Victor Josenberger contemplates an airship flight next July from Buffalo to Niagara Falls, and thence across the lake to Toronto, according to advice received here to-day. Josenberger has not been heard of in aerial work before, but the machine is building, and he says that the flight will take place. McCurdy's feat in flying over the Florida strait out of sight of land has encouraged Josenberger to go ahead with this scheme.

Assistants who are normal trained first year receive $300, second $350 and third $415; assistants not normal trained, $250.

Thousands of women, right here in Canada, owe their robust health, their strength and vigor, their bright eyes and rosy cheeks—to GIN PILLS. And they know that GIN PILLS will cure the Kidney and Bladder Troubles with which so many women suffer.

IS IT NEEDED?

If the reciprocal agreement with the United States goes through, will the Laurier Government keep its promise to the western grain-growers to build the Hudson Bay Railway? Will it spend a few millions of the people's money on this questionable—under any circumstances—proposition? Some of the Conservative members of Parliament would do well to ask this question of the Government, because the folly of going ahead with a northern outlet for the west's surplus wheat is apparent if a free southern market is to be provided.

If the western grain man is going to ship his wheat and other products to Chicago, Minneapolis, Duluth, Omaha, for distribution over American transportation systems, why bother braving the uncertainties of the Arctic region for the sake of getting another Canadian route? This new outlet will take all the surplus the west will ever produce, and handle it over a dozen railway lines, instead of one.

1891 AND 1911

The Liberal newspapers are finding considerable solace in the fact that Sir John Macdonald and Edward Blake, two great imperialists, were in favor of reciprocity with the United States in natural products, and the Toronto Star points out that in 1891 Sir John tried hard for such a treaty, the election turning on that issue. It may be remarked here that before going into such a deal, Sir John Macdonald sought the people's mandate, and getting it, went ahead. The Laurier administration seeks reciprocity at a time when Canada has grown strongly opposed to any such agreement, without even consulting the people.

The last Dominion election was not fought on this question at all. The people of to-day—the new, independent generation of Canadians—have not pronounced on the question of reciprocity with the United States at the polls. At the time of the Dominion election in 1908 the recognized fiscal policy of both parties was protection. They differed only in the extent to which that protection should be applied. The Liberal Government was returned, though its actual majority in the number of total votes cast was very small.

But the Government was not returned on the reciprocity question. It has not received the endorsation of the people at any time in late years on the reciprocity question, and its proposal to plunge Canada into relations with the United States—however profitable they might be for the passing day—is absolutely unauthorized by the people of Canada at large at the polls.

The fact that the Liberal party has been victorious at the polls on a protection policy—to a very large extent the old National Policy—does not mean that the people have expressed any willingness whatever for any change in fiscal policy. In a matter of such national importance, it is only right that the people should speak at the polls before Canada becomes bound by any such agreement.

The fact that Sir John expressed in his enunciation of the National Policy a desire for reciprocity with the United States in natural products does not carry with it the conclusion that what might have been good for Canada in 1891 is good for her now. In the twenty years, Canada has become—in spite of the United States—a wealthy and powerful young nation, so advanced that the United States is compelled to abandon her old policy of seclusion and assume a more courteous attitude. If Canada in 1891 had been what Canada is to-day, commercially and in sentiment, it is very probable that the grand old imperialist, Sir John A. Macdonald, would say "Canada's best interests as a nation lie with the British Empire, and imperial development, not in the merging of her commercial life with the United States."

Canada suffered severely in those early years through lack of markets for her products. But she has spent millions and millions of dollars to find markets, however distant; to perfect great transportation systems for her commercial development; to join scattered provinces into one solid whole. She has forced tremendous prosperity out of adverse circumstances. Under these conditions, does it necessarily follow that we must seek the commercial favor of the United States?

The blow to Canadian imperialism in such reciprocity may not show itself in one year, or two, or ten. But our children, our children's children, growing up under reciprocal conditions, not knowing what Canada has gone through at the hands of our friends to the south, will not feel the same close affection toward the empire that we probably feel. The question of reciprocity should be clearly defined at the polls, and it will be found then that old political affiliations will disappear, and the question be handled on its merits.

THE WESTERN BALANCE

The Saskatchewan Agricultural Society's convention has passed a resolution "that this community regards with approval the proposed reciprocity arrangement with the United States." The prospect of getting a free wheat market is quite attractive to the western farmer. Not that the western farmer, in harvesting great crops year after year, is not getting along very much faster than his Ontario brother, but it helps him to get rich so much faster—so he thinks.

The one great fault of the west to-day—and the writer has been over practically every principal district—is a mad rush to get rich. Much more value is placed on getting rich in the west than in the east. A man is measured by "How much he is worth?" not by "what can he do?" or "what is his ability." So many men have got rich in the west quickly, have amassed fortunes over night, almost, that the desire to get a big bank account or great land holdings is driving aside most other considerations of life. Thus we have it that the west, in becoming leavened with American sentiment, is a splendid money-making field, but it has not the solid stability of sentiment that characterizes the older parts of Canada.

It will be found that this Americanization of the west will make it much more easily amenable to commercial influences from across the border. The west will be much more easily detached in sentiment from Canadian nationalism, and attached to the idea of continentalism. This is but natural, from the fact that the west is the creation of recent years, and its sentiment is not deeply rooted.

Predictions have been freely made that in a decade the west will control Canada politically. If that is true—and the rapid growth of that magnificent prairie land gives base to this prediction—is it not of extraordinary importance to Canada nationally that the western sentiment shall be guided along right paths? If the west is estranged from eastern Canada, from the inter-provincial connection now existing, by the provision of better trading facilities with Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul,—forcing the western trade very largely north and south—will not the leaven already working on the west by the introduction of Americanized sentiment, bear fruit?

We have no fear for eastern Canada. It has been solidly grounded and reared on British connection. The west is more easily swayed by commercial consideration, by a desire to get rich, be the consequences nationally what they may. The recent deputation of the farmers from the west, demanding free American agricultural implements, demanding the right to buy American manufactures without an interfering duty, is an evidence of this sentiment.

To throw Canada into the arms of the United States commercially means a tremendous stimulus to the rapid Americanization of the west. And if it controls Canada in a decade or two, what's the answer?

Cost of Living

(Montreal Gazette)

According to some of the Liberal newspapers, the reciprocity arrangement with the United States is calculated to make living in the city less costly while it will ensure better prices for the farmer in the country who provides the material for living. Mr. Fielding as the maker of the arrangement should have been in the medicine business. There has been nothing like his reciprocity since the discovery of Dr. Dukem's extract of alligoose, which was warranted to make the fat man thin and the thin man fat.

FINE LECTURE ON NEWFOUNDLAND

Rev. Mr. Carpenter Pleased the Young People of St. Lukes

A pleasant evening was spent by the Young People's Association of St. Luke's and their friends last night in the school room, when the Rev. Chas. Carpenter gave an illustrated lecture on Newfoundland. From his eight years' residence in the colony, he was able to speak of its people and its resources at first hand, and the audience soon learned that the island had more to boast of than fogs and fish. The lantern was manipulated by Mr. Fisk, and the slides gave a good impression of the country and its industries.

The lecturer gave a brief historical sketch of the landing of Sebastian Carbot in 1497 with his letters patent from Henry VII. to appropriate "all new-found lands to his sacred person," and referred to some of the difficulties the colony had had to contend with in the past. Coming to the present period the slides depicted St. John's in 1892, immediately after its devastation by fire, and St. John's of to-day, rebuilt and flourishing. Some of the leading places were commented on, especially Bell Island, with its enormous annual output of red hematite iron. Large veins of iron, pyrites, coal, silver, gold and mica have been prospected, and oil wells located, and with sufficient capital to develop these resources, the future of the island is assured.

Mr. Carpenter then passed on to speak of the cod fishing which forms and must always form, the staple industry. The various ways of catching, and the methods of curing were explained, and the difference between the Labrador, Shore and Bank fisheries pointed out. The seal fishery, with its great risks, was next touched upon, and pictures shown of ships which have since gone to the bottom through contact with the ice. The views of the icebergs were particularly interesting and emphasized the difficulty of navigation in the proximity of Newfoundland.

The report of the country was next dwelt upon, and pictures shown of salmon fishing and caribou hunting. The streams abound with salmon, trout and other fish whilst the interior of the country is the natural park of vast herds of large caribou. Every summer brings large parties of hunters and tourists to the island, and many of the famous travelers have testified to the good sport there enjoyed. Reference was also made to the valuable whaling industry, which to-day forms quite an asset to the colony. Slides depicting the natural beauties of the land were shown and the habits of the people touched upon. The lecturer concluded with a tribute to the warm-hearted hospitality of the people, their liberality in all good works and their prospects for the future.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Carpenter for his remarks, and to Mr. Fisk for his work at the lantern. The meeting was brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem.

Owing to sickness and the various other engagements for the evening, the attendance was not very large, but all who were present were greatly interested and expressed the desire to hear more about Britain's oldest colony at some future date. The chair was ably filled by Mr. Kingdon, lay reader of St. Luke's.

Two silver badges of the A.Y.P.A. were presented by Rev. H. C. Carpenter on behalf of the association to Miss Elsie Dawson and Miss Margaret Pakenham, for obtaining members.

WAS HORRIBLE FOR THE LADY

Miss Pankburst's First Experience in Our Sleepers

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 2.—Horrified to find that a mere curtain was all that separated her from any stray man who might be touring the sleeper in which she was riding from New York to this city, Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, the militant suffragette of England, had a very poor night of it. It was her first experience in an American sleeper.

"I do not wish to criticize," she said," but certainly the matter of privacy was overlooked by the builders of your so-called sleeping cars. In England one has a compartment to oneself."

There were other things to annoy Miss Pankhurst. Her train was late She did not know there was a diner attached, and arrived almost famished. Then the committee, under whose auspices she lectured this evening, planned to meet her at the East Liberty Station and she passed that and went through to union station, where she had to wait until the committee found her.

An Art Event

The Perfume of The Lady In Black

By GASTON LEROUX Author of "The Mystery of the Yellow Room."

Copywright, 1909, by Brentano's.

The fort was entered by way of the north gate, which guarded the two towers, A and A', connected by a passageway. These towers, which had suffered greatly during the last sieges of the Genoese, had been repaired to some slight extent some time afterward and had shortly before we came to Rochers Rouges been made habitable by Mrs. Rance, who used them as servants' quarters. The front of the tower A served as the keeper's lodge. A little door opened in the side of the tower upon the passageway and enabled any one looking out to observe all those who came or went. The entrance to the castle was closed only by a little gate which any one might open at will. This entrance was the only one by which it was possible to get into the chateau. As I have said, in passing through this gate one found himself in the first court, closed in on all sides by the walls and the towers. As to the towers B, B' and B", which had for a considerable time longer preserved their uniformity and their first height and the pointed roofs of which had been replaced by a platform designed to support the artillery, they had later been razed to the height of the boulevard parapets, and their shape seemed almost like that of a half moon. The new castle on the plan is at C C'.

La Louve, as I have said, had not been changed at all, but still reared its dark bulk against the blue waters of the Mediterranean, a strange, weird figure, looking thousands of years old. I have spoken also of the ruins of the chapel. The ancient commons (shown on the map by W), near the parapet between B and B', had been transformed into the stables and the kitchens.

One could only penetrate into the second inclosure through the postern (indicated by H), which Mrs. Arthur Rance called "the tower of the gardener" and which was actually only a pavilion, formerly defended by the tower B" and by another tower situated at C and which had entirely disappeared at the time of the erection of the new castle (shown at C C'). A moat and a wall started from B" to abut on I at the Tower of Charles the Bold, advancing at C in the form of a spur to the midst of the first court and entirely isolating the court, which they completely closed in. The moat still exists, wide and deep, but the walls had been torn down all the length of the new castle and replaced by the walls of the castle itself.

The pavement of the inner court—the Court of Charles the Bold, as the old guidebooks of the country call it still—was a little higher than that of the outer court. One could penetrate into the old castle only (designated by F) by a little door, K. The old inhabitants of the country never spoke of it except as the square tower, to distinguish it from the round tower, or the Tower of Charles the Bold, as they sometimes called the latter. A parapet similar to the one which closed in the outer court was built between the towers B", F and L, closing the inner court as firmly as the outer.

We have seen that the round tower had been in years past torn down to half its former height.

This tower had a number of tiny chambers above and an immense octagon chamber below. One descended into this chamber by a steep and narrow stairway. The ceiling of the octagon room was supported by four great cylindrical pillars, and from its walls opened three enormous embrasures for three enormous cannons. It was of this room that Mme. Edith had wished to make a dining room. The great windows had been enlarged and made square, although they were still guarded by barriers of iron. This tower (shown on the map at L) was the spot chosen by Mme. Edith's uncle for a workshop and the abiding place of his collection.

Of the chateau of the seventeenth century, known as the new castle, they had only repaired two bedchambers on the first floor and a little sitting room for guests. It was to these that Rouletabille and myself were assigned. The Darzacs were lodged in the square tower. Two rooms the windows of which opened upon the balcony were reserved in this square tower for "Old Bob," who slept there. M. Stangerson was in "la Louve," in the rear of the Rance suit.

Mme. Edith herself showed us to our rooms, which recalled to us nothing of that magnificent past. They had been swept and garnished with a care that was almost touching. As I have already said, the two sleeping rooms were separated by a little parlor.

After dressing for dinner I called Rouletabille to ask him if he were ready. There was no answer. I went into his room and discovered with surprise that he had already gone out. I went to the window of his room, which opened, like my own, upon the empty court.

But what was that dark shadow? Standing erect at the prow of a little boat which a fisherman was rowing, keeping rhythmic time with the two oars, I recognized the form of Larsan. Why should I try to deceive myself by saying even for one moment that I was wrong? He was only too easily to be recognized.

Oh, yes; it was he! It was "the great Fred," as we used to call him when we looked upon him only as the wonderfully resourceful and brilliant secret service agent. The boat, silent, with its motionless statue at the prow, passed beneath the windows of the square tower and to the shores of the Pointe de Garibaldi. The man stood erect, his arms folded, his face turned toward the tower, a diabolical apparition on the threshold of the night, which slowly crept up behind him and enveloped him in its shades.

To be continued.

Rev. Father Morriscy

A Combined Treatment That Really Cures Catarrh.

Canadian weather, with its extreme cold and sudden changes, gives almost every one Catarrh, and makes it hard to cure. Some recommend internal remedies—some external applications.

Father Morriscy used both—tablets to be taken three or four times a day to invigorate the system, purify the blood, and help it throw off the disease, and a soothing, healing, antiseptic salve to be applied inside the nostrils. This combined treatment known as

"Father Morriscy's No. 26"

attacking the disease from within and without, soon cures.

Mr. A. C. Thibodeau, General Merchant in Rogersville, N.B., writes on Jan. 22nd last:

"A few words as to the merits of your Catarrh Cure. For the last 10 years I have been troubled with Catarrh of the head and stomach and during that time have tried all kinds of other Remedies with no results, until I tried your Catarrh Cure which I am glad to say has cured me. I highly recommend it to those who are suffering with this disease."

Don't trifle with Catarrh—cure it with Father Morriscy's No. 26.

HEALTHY CHILDREN ARE A BLESSING

Healthy babies are good babies, and the good baby is a blessing in every home. Nothing can give the mother or father more pleasure than to see a babyplay. Every movement is watched with delight, every new word spoken brings pride to the fond parents. It is only the sickly baby that makes home wretched — and, mothers, it is not baby fault when he is sick. You are the one to blame. Perhaps you give him candies, cakes and other food which his little stomach is unable to digest. Then when he is cross and ailing you give him some "soothing" mixtures to quiet him. That is wrong, remember his little stomach is not as strong as a grown persons', and also remember that every spoonful of "soothing" mixture you give him, only does him more injury — it does not remove the cause of his fretfulness it merely dopes him into an unnatural sleep. What is needed to make baby healthy and happy is Baby's Own Tablets — a medicine with a guarantee of safety. About them Mrs. Mathias McCormick, West St. Peters, P. E. I., writes: "We have used Baby's Own Tablets with good results. They are certainly a blessing for mothers that have cross sickly babies. They sweeten the stomach, give refreshing sleep and make baby fat and healthy." Sold by medicine dealers, or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Abdul Kills Two Wives.

Salonika, Feb. 4.—Abdul Hamid, former Sultan of Turkey has gone violently insane, has killed two of his wives and is to-day confined in irons.

The murder of the two women who were among those who accompanied Abdul Hamid from Constantinople when he was exiled by the Young Turks, was particularly cruel. He choked one of them to death with his own hands and dashed the other so violently against the wall that she died a few hours later, according to one of the men who have been guarding the deposed ruler at his villa where he is spending his last days.

The ex-Sultan was subdued only after a fierce struggle in which he was severely injured.

Abdul Hamid is confined in a dungeon beneath the villa Allatine which, while set apart for him as a residence, is in reality his prison. He was sent there in April, 1909, when the Turkish revolution brought about by the Young Turk party was finally completed and Sultan Mehemmed V. ascended the throne.

Abdul Hamid had reigned for thirty years up to that time, had deluged his empire in blood and had kept 200,000 spies to betray their fellow citizens. He was noted for having tricked the diplomats of all Europe and from time to time shocked the world by his sensuality and crimes.

When Abdul was sent to the villa here his suite, which was allowed to accompany him, was composed of three Sultanas, or full wives, four Cadines, or inferior wives; five Halfas, or lady housekeepers privileged to go out of the harem, two princes, his daughter and nine servants. This really gave him the allowance of twelve wives.

Popularity of Measure.

London, Feb. 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The London Daily Mail, in an article on reciprocity, says: "The action of the Canadian Conservatives in leaving their representatives free stands is the strongest testimony to the popularity of the agreement." Amongst the methods of preserving Canada for the Empire, The Mail suggests free trade in manufactures, a constant stream of British emigrants and the investment of English capital, creating business there, and not merely financing.

Tramp Steamer Wrecked

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 4.—The Norfegian tramp steamer Titiana, 2,315 tons, heavily laden, with British Columbia coal for Acapulo, Mexico, was wrecked yesterday morning on Stuart Point, Sanjuan Island, in American waters, at the southern end of the Gulf of Georgia. She carried a crew of 26 men.

The "Absolute Life."

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Evelyn Arthur See, founder of the "absolute life," was indicted yesterday on serious charges, the penalty for which is imprisonment for one to twenty years. Several girls were witnesses before the grand jury.

Gallantry Among the Wounded.

Army doctors have not as much chance to distinguish themselves on the field of battle as their fighting brethren, yet, nevertheless, they win their fair share of decorations. Among the disciples of Aesculapius now alive who are entitled to wear that much coveted honor, the Victoria Cross, the doyen is undoubtedly Surgeon-General Sir Anthony Home, who has celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday. He was the doctor of the Light Brigade at Balaclava and of the 90th Light Infantry during the Mutiny. It was while at Lucknow that he won the V.C. for his gallant defence of the wounded in the Residency, only he and six men being left who could handle a musket. Three years later he was in the North of China, and assisted in the capture of the Taku forts. From 1863 to 1865 he took part in the New Zealand War against the Maoris, his excellent work winning promotion and a Companionship of the Bath. Next he served in Ashanti against King Koffee under Sir Garnet Wolseley.

English Clay Pipes.

The clay pipe, which is vanishing from the Fleet street chop house, was the only variety smoked in the country until quite recent times. The clay pipe made its appearance in England in the later years of the sixteenth century. Writing about a century later, a French author remarks that the English "invented the pipes of baked clay which are now used everywhere."

"Broseley, in Staffordshire, has been famous for its pipes and clay from the days of Elizabeth," writes Mr. W. A. Penn in "The Soverane Herb." "Now all the clay of which white pipes are manufactured comes from Newton Abbot and Kingsteignton, in Devonshire. It is sent to all parts of England, and the world in rough lumps, about the size of quartern loaves, weighing some twenty-eight pounds each."—London Chronicle.

Hotelkeeper and Robber.

A remarkable exhibition of presence of mind stands to the credit of James Dennis, an Australian hotelkeeper. One day he found himself behind his own counter looking down the muzzle of a revolver held by a villainous-looking fellow who was requesting him to put up his hands. He raised them, but protested. "Surely it doesn't take two of you to hold me up." The robber, who had come alone, turned his head to see who the other man might be. In a flash Dennis' own revolver was out and the rascal's opportunity was gone.—Westminster Gazette.

I also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my baby was born, and I recommend it highly to all pregnant women.—Mrs. E. Wandby, 92 Logan Ave., Toronto, Ont.

J. J. TURNER & SONS LARGE CONTRACT

Are Making a Foresail Containing Three Hundred Yards of Canvas

J. J. Turner & Sons at present have a large contract on their hands, in fact so large that their present plant was inadequate in size to allow operations to be commenced on it. The contract in question is an immense foresail containing three hundred yards of canvass for the schooner, "Katie Eccles," of Trenton, of which vessel Captain Carson, of this city was captain of some years ago. The sail was so large that there was not space in J. J. Turner & Sons' factory to cut it out, and it had to be cut on the floor of the stage at the Grand Opera House. The sail when finished will weigh over five hundred pounds. Captain Carson formerly sailed the vessel at Port Hope when Mr. Turner was there.

T. A. S. LADIES LITERARY GIVE SCOTCH NIGHT

"Mary Queen of Scots Was Dealt With by Miss A Maloney

The Ladies' Literary of the T.A.S. held a social entertainment in the St. Alphonse's Hall last night. The main part of the program was a paper, cleverly and accurately prepared on "the life of Mary, Queen of Scots," read by Miss Alice Maloney, of Lakefield. Dr. McNulty's sketch of the plow-boy poet, "Burns," was also keenly appreciated. In the two sketches many interesting features in connection with the lives of these two prominent figures in Scotch history, were discovered. Each address received merited applause.

A violin solo by W. Hatrick was also well given, and vocal solos by Miss F. Lahey and Mr. Wright varied the program agreeably.

Miss Bessie McNamara presided.

Father McColl also made a brief, timely address.

WEDDING BELLS

GILLESPIE McCAW

A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church this afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Mabel Gertrude, only daughter of Mr. J. W. McCaw was married to T. The wedding march was played by Mr. John Crane, and during the signing of the register, Miss Davies sang 'Oh Fair, oh sweet and Holy."

Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie left on the 4.38 C. P. R. express for a short honeymoon. On their return they will reside at 200 Stewart Street, and will be at home to their friends after March 15.

RATHER DULL MARKET-PRICES STATIONARY

Smallest Market for Some Weeks — Chicken Offering Fair

The weather was mild to-day and so also was the market attendance. It apparently was no inducement for the farmers to attend. Produce was scarce. Both outer and inner markets were not heavily patronized. At ten o'clock a few loads of meat were stationed around, while inside the attendance could easily be numbered.

No radical change in prices was noticed. A little of each of the usual offerings could be purchased. Butter and eggs are about stationery, chickens were rather more abundant than usually, and some very fair ones could be bought up.

A couple of turkeys were also seen. No hay or apples by the bag could be had, and not a great many of the latter even by the peck.

THE PRICES

The following prices prevailed:

Eggs—30c. doz.
Butter—25c lb.
Chickens—75c a pair or $1.10 a pair.
Turkeys—$2.50.
Apples—35c a peck.
Beef—8c to 10c.
Pork—11c to 13c.
Lamb—12c to 13c.
Baled Hay—$14.

THE FINAL SETTLEMENT

A Thrilling Drama at the Grand on Saturday Next

The attraction at "The Grand" next Saturday, Feb. 11th, matinee and evening, will be "The Final Settlement," a drama in four acts by L. B. Parker, which has never before been presented in this city. The play is very modern, and one does not have to think very hard to recall incidents chronicled in the papers of recent times that somewhat border along the lines of the play. It deals with a man who started with nothing and became a millionaire and president of a great iron trust. He gets the society fever, and so the wife who shared his adversity is no longer considered good enough for him, and he divorces her and casts her adrift. Her place is taken by an actress, but even then the happiness he pictured to himself proves only a vision. In the end he is ruined and disgraced, and the one friend who comes to his rescue is the old wife of the past, who saves him from prison and starts him on the right road again. The story is well brought out by the clever hand of dramatist. During the past season the play was one of the big successes of the year on the big city time of the west, and this is its first season in the east. Seats on sale at the box office on Thursday.

WAS REDUCED TO A SKELETON

GIVEN UP BY THE DOCTORS AND PREPARED TO DIE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" SAVED HER LIFE

The days of the miracle have not passed away. Every day—almost every hour—"Fruit-a-tives" is performing miracles of healing in some part of our country! One does not ordinarily think of miracles in connection with fruit juices—and yet it is fruit juices that are changing sick, helpless, and sometimes dying, people into happy, healthy men and women. Here is just one case in which the cure made by "Fruit-a-tives" was nothing short of a miracle.

MADAME ARTHUR TOURANGEAU.

Madame Tourangeau suffered for eleven years and was finally given up to die by her physicians. Yet "Fruit-a-tives"—the marvellous remedy made of fruit juices—completely cured her and restored her to health.

Here is her letter—read it—study it—profit by it.

RIVIÈRE À PIERRE, CO. PORTNEUF, QUE., May 9th, 1910

"I look upon my recovery as nothing short of a miracle. I was for eleven years, constantly suffering from Chronic Dyspepsia and Indigestion with Constipation. The last two years of my illness, I was confined to my bed nearly all the time. I was treated by several doctors and they simply did me no good. During the latter part of my illness, I was so thin that I weighed only 90 pounds, and I vomited everything I ate. Even water would not stay on my stomach.

The doctors gave me up to die as the stomach trouble produced heart weakness and I was frequently unconscious. I received the Last Rites of The Church and looked forward to death in a short time. I was reduced to a skeleton.

At this time, a lady friend strongly urged me to try "Fruit-a-tives" and how thankful I am that I did so. When I had taken one box, I was much better and after three boxes, I was practically well again and had gained 20 pounds. I have taken 13 boxes in all and now weigh 150 pounds and am absolutely well—no pain—no indigestion—no constipation—my heart is sound—and complexion clear.

For the sake of other sufferers, I give you permission to publish my letter and photograph."

MADAME ARTHUR TOURANGEAU.

The stomach is a bag about a foot long and six inches wide, covered by a muscular coat and lined with delicate membrane. This lining membrane should pour out for each meal about a pint of Digestive Fluid called Gastric Juice, which dissolves or digests the food.

During digestion, the muscular coat squeezes and presses the food from one end of the stomach to the other, and this churning mixes the food with the Gastric Juice. If the food is not churned properly, or if the Gastric Juice is weak—then the food is not dissolved properly and Indigestion and Chronic Dyspepsia result.

Gastric Juice comes from the blood—and the only way to have strong, active Gastric Juice is to keep the blood pure by keeping the bowels and kidneys regular, and the skin active.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Indigestion, Sour Stomach and Chronic Dyspepsia because the fruit juices act on liver, bowels, kidneys and skin, purifying the blood. "Fruit-a-tives" relieves any irritation in the stomach—strengthens the muscular coat—and ensures the Gastric Juice being full strength and abundant. If you have any Stomach Weakness or Trouble of Digestion, by all means take "Fruit-a-tives". 50c a box—6 for $2.50—trial size, 25c. Sent on receipt of price, if your dealer does not handle them, by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

GRAND OPERA IN ENGLISH

A Coming Treat for Peterborough People. Il Trovator the Best Known and Favorite of Grand Operas

When the Sheehan English Grand Opera Company comes to the Grand Opera House Tuesday evening, Feb. 14th, for an all star performance of Verdi's famous "Il Trovatore" there will be heard in this city more renowned artists than have ever appeared here before at one time.

First and foremost of these stars is Joseph F. Sheehan, acknowledged the greatest of all American tenors. To those who have ever heard Mr. Sheehan's wonderful voice little need be said, his remarkable power, combined with rare sweetness, has placed him in a class by himself.

Then comes Miss Elaine De Sellem, the eminent French contralto, whose work as the gypsy hag in "Il Trovatore" has made her a favorite in France. It is not likely that Mr. Sheehan could have found anywhere another artist so well qualified for this difficult role as Miss De Sellem.

Miss Grace Nelson, the prima donna whom Mr. Sheehan discovered in Europe and whom critics declare the sensation of the day, is said to be the most remarkable coloratura soprano since Tetrazzini electrified the world and consequently is particularly suited to the role of "Leonora."

The entire cast is on a par with those mentioned therefore it is not surprising that critics everywhere declare this company the foremost ever heard in a presentation of the beautiful Verdi opera, "Il Trovatore."

The engagement is here for one performance only, Tuesday evening, Feb. 14th, and regular prices will prevail in order to give all an opportunity of hearing what will no doubt prove to be the biggest attraction of the season.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES

It has already been stated in one or two previous issues that the Library Board, taking as one of its cardinal principles the view that the most important essential for the proper working of the Library is to keep its aims well in the public eye, intends through the kind co-operation of the press to place before Peterborough readers week by week notes regarding library work, as well as hints to old and young alike as to the nature of the books now or hereafter to be placed on the public library shelves. The object of this is easily made patent to everyone.

In the first place it has been noticed that where the public are allowed free access to the shelves, there are very few indeed who give themselves time to take more than a cursory glance at the books in the various departments. Volume after volume is passed by, either on account of the illegibility of its title or because, though legible enough, the title does not appeal to one's taste. Now, one thing is absolutely certain and that is that there is usually no more deceptive thing in this world than a book title. One can glance along a whole shelf and in an array of say fifty books, find at least 30 per cent of titles that convey far from a clear index of the nature of the contents between their covers.

It is the knowledge of this latter fact that has proved a vexation to novelists and writers of all descriptions. Many of them have asserted that it is easier to write a whole volume than to choose a title. Writers of the present time have sought out a new device for catching the eye of the public and in place of giving sober nomenclature to their works have embellished them with the most outlandish and startling ones. It must not be taken, however, as a fair criterion of the merit of an author's work that the more successful he is in imposing a sensational title on the public the greater will be the pleasure he will cause his readers.

Very often the exact opposite is the case and the only true rule to go by therefore, is not to take a book on trust but to look through the pages first and discover if its interior bears out the promise given by its exterior. We all know that meat quickly cooked may present a very palatable appearance to the eye but that when the carving knife gets to work it discloses a very raw and uninviting condition of affairs near the bone. The of quick lunch literature suited to the of quick lunch literature usited to the hurry and bustle of the time, but it is none the less a literature that has to be carefully and systematically watched, not only by librarians but by the patrons of every library. The underdone pablum offered by our literary chefs is amazing in its immensity and much of it is ptomaine-like to man's moral digestion.

Another point that may not be out of place in this chat is in connection with the needless soiling of volumes. One of the great griefs of librarians is that so many volumes come to an inglorious end at the hands of the thum-liker and the leaf-creaser. Another form of book slaughter is to be found in the work of the amateur annotator, who disfigures leaf upon leaf with the most senseless and bizarre remarks on the subject matter of the volume. We all know him, as, like the grass of the field, he is indigenous to every known and inhabited country.

JOHNSON IN FAVOR OF PUNCH

Champion Would Not Do Away With the Disputed Wallop

Chicago Feb. 4—Although there are a number of fighters, promoters and critics opposed to the kidney punch, Jack Johnson, heavyweight champion is keen for the retention of the wallop which has been the cause of many a fighter's downfall. The colored champion said yesterday, "If the kidney punch is done away with the ring will lose one of its most scientific blows.

According to Johnson, the kidney punch can be blocked and it can be perfected to such a high point that a knockout blow can be delivered with it, but the big negro claims it is more scientific to block the wallop than it is to deliver it. Jack did not know who invented the blow, but it is his opinion that Joe Walcott was the most accomplished kidney puncher of any of the fighters he has ever known.

"Unless a fighter's kidneys are in good shape to stand a lot of punching he has no right trying to make good at the game," the champion said. "In all my fights, I never was hit hard enough on the kidneys to hurt me, but I believe this is due, to the defence which I have perfected. I realize it is a dangerous blow but for every punch known to the pugilistic game there is a defence just as there is for the kidney punch.

"I would not like to see it done away with. As long as I am champion and have anything to say about the rules which govern fights, I will be opposed to the abolition of the kidney punch.

TRENTON OUTPLAYED AT ALL STAGES; LOCALS WON WITH A 14-5 COUNT; PLAY OFF AT BELLEVILLE MONDAY

Blue and White Seven Featured Game With Combination Play and Checking--Giroux Made Good at Centre and Denison Again Starred--Sudden Death to Decide the District.

The gods were good to Trenton not one fan unkindly cried, "beat it back, you bunch of squealers—only one came from the side. This was when the crab-like Fletcher, scooped the disc from centre ice. "bush league, that's where you belong to,' bawled a maid who'd scored the price. She had frills and fancy headgear, underneath a four-foot hat, these looked though a storm had struck them to the bunch who round her sat. But 'twas not—this red hot fanette had been in that awful mob, on the outside and the inside, where the cops were on the job. An' that Trenton crew were easy as 'twill be on Monday night, when the two break loose at Belleville, for the district honors' fight. There were lots of circus doings, Tiny, Fat and Spike McGaw, pulled the cover off some good ones, while McGiffin felt his jaw. Kel and Fletcher worked the high jump, set a mark of four feet two, Denny gave some tips on corkscrews, Ray showed how they don't go through. It's a cinch the sales at Trenton now for dope to help cold feet will have jumped 'way up from zero and the whole blamed team can treat.

That protest proved to be a hoodoo for Trenton.

It was 14—5 last night, and the seven from Bushleagueville were lucky to get away so easily.

Their new line-up turned out to be pretty much of a joke, and it was Peterborough all the way, and without Park and Glover at that.

PLAY OFF AT BELLEVILLE.

After the game the two teams tossed up to decide where the final for the district would be played. Referee Whitehead having brought word of the order of the O.H.A., that it would be a sudden death game, Monday night, if the locals were victorious.

Trenton won the toss and named Belleville as the scene of the struggle.

GIROUX MADE GOOD.

Once again the executive pulled the strings the right way. With Giroux billed to work at centre and Bond at point, the fans turned out and filled the rink, anticipating a close score, with the locals on the winning end. Bond, having played a strong game at Cobourg, was expected to fill in nicely with Denison and he did. With Giroux, the case was somewhat different, he not having worked with the team in a game during the season. And he was up against "Crab" Fletcher. But he was there all the time with his consistent checking and work with his team mates always in evidence, as McGraw, the big cover point, will no doubt explain in telling the natives of Trenton how it happened for he was a particular mark for Giroux.

COMBINATION A FEATURE.

It was a well played game from the moment Referee Whitehead sent the players away to the last sound of the gong, with the band organ septette working a brilliant combination. And when the occasion called for individual effort it was all the same.

DENISON STARRED.

Once again Fred Denison brought down the house as he broke up rushes and turned the rink-end returns into scores.

Bond and he were not called upon to do so much work as fell to the lot of the defence in the first game, owing, this time, to the speed and back-checking of the line, but their duties were sufficient to give each a chance to show their class. The crowd was tickled with the response each made. Derocher couldn't stop a shot in the warm-up but blocked in grand style throughout the game. He was not overworked, yet, on his showing, evidenced his ability to be on the job if called upon.

LINE WORKED SMOOTHLY.

Capt. Ray was at his best and found little difficulty in outskating and "putting it over" any of the opposing seven who attempted to stop him on his zig-zag rushes. When it was a case of play combination Giroux Sarels or Kelly were ready and willing. Along the boards Kelly and Sarel had it on their checks in all stages of the game, Cummings and Palmer only getting away when they couldn't help it. Each contributed three tallies, and figured largely in the plays that sent the rubber behind McGiffin.

CHAMPIONS—NIX.

Against such opposition Trenton were only on the ice. Croft and Fletcher were conspicuous at times, with some nice stickhandling, and that lets them out. McGraw meant well enough but was up against it. He and Croft endeavored to work a two-man combination, but not once did they beat Denison and Bond. The team will have no license to win at Belleville Monday night and with an even break in the luck the Petes should bring home the honors.

The teams were—

	PETERBOROUGH.
	Derocher
	Bond
	Denison
	Ray
Sarels	Giroux	Kelly
	O
Cummings	Fletcher	Palmer
	Croft
	McGraw
	Powers
	McGiffin
	TRENTON

THE PLAY.

The teams got away at 9.40 and Kelly was called back twice on off-sides on passes from Ray. The local captain intercepted a pass by McGraw and the play went down near McGiffin, Fletcher returning. Sarels secured and shot into McGiffin. Fletcher took a long heave and the red hot rooters called "play hockey." Denison broke away, but shot wide. Bond drifted a Fletcher-Palmer com. Powers took possession, passed to his centre man, the shot going high. Finally Kelly rushed, passed out to Sarels, who shot, and Kelly pushed the disc in from a mix-up. After the faceoff Giroux missed a scoop from the boards. Bond stopped Croft and Kelly went down and shot wide. Denison rushed alone and rattled a post. Croft pulled off one of his fancy wigglers and lost. Regaining, his pass was taken by Ray and Kelly scared McGiffin with a hot one. Sarels took a high lift. Powers drew first penalty. Cummings went up the boards and failed with a clear field. Denison rushed, McGiffin blocking, but Sarels was right there and found a hole, making the count stand

Peterborough 2, Trenton 0.

The next tally came in half a minute, Sarels again counting after McGiffin had stopped a shot from Giroux. It was on again, off again for Powers. From the face-off Giroux secured and shot into McGraw. Fletcher went away and failed to connect anywhere near Derocher. Giroux was banished. McGraw and Croft combined, losing at defence, and Denison tore off a loner and scored.

Peterborough 4, Trenton 0.

Sarels broke away and forgot to pass. Powers returned and lost to Kelly, and it was a three-man play for a loss at defence. The visitors' line went up abreast, but they were pie for Denison, and Bond and Ray sent McGraw to the side on another attempt. After being stopped by McGiffin Denison tried again and squeezed one through McGiffin's pad.

Following a grab by Powers, Kelly and Bond returned, the latter missing. Ray joined the timekeepers. McGraw became lost in the defence and Palmer was benched. Kelly rushed the boards, and Sarels missed the rebound, McGraw securing and giving Derocher a hard one to handle. McGraw got Sarels and Denison put it all over Fletcher. McGiffin took one in the jaw from Sarels and Bond was chased for an infraction after Croft tried one by himself. On another try by the youth with the curly locks, McGraw placed the rubber behind Derocher for Trenton's first score.

Ray, Denison and Kelly combined for a wide shot, and there was nothing doing when Palmer had a chance. Derocher turned aside a long heave, and Palmer couldn't even shoot straight with no one near him. With Bond still off, Cummings took the second for his team with nothing to bother him.

Peterborough 5, Trenton 2.

McGiffin blocked a speed hoist from Kelly. Sarels' attempt struck a post. Trenton returned, Denison securing and beating both McGraw and Powers in a manner that brought down the crowd, took his third straight tally. With the locals having the better of the play for the balance of the half, there was no more scoring.

SECOND HALF.

Fletcher left his toque in the dressing room, but it was all the same to Giroux, who breezed away, passing to Ray. McGraw happened to be in the way, however, and was responsible for the same player being swamped on a rush. Derocher stuck out his chest on Croft's contribution, and Sarels and Giroux got away, McGiffin stopping Ray. Kelly and Denison combined and McGraw was penalized for being unruly. Ray pulled off a nice piece of stick work, but was chased into the corner. Cummings returned, Derocher getting his peepers on the shot. Cummings took a well meant pass, but just to relieve the pressure. Kelly banged one in past the youth, who was reported as having lost his job.

Peterborough 7, Trenton 2.

Giroux, who was playing a strong game, took the rubber from the face-off out from the visitors' nets and slammed the disc in, and then went off at the command of the referee. Denison rushed and lost at the goal; Fletcher returned, Derocher stopping. Croft and Palmer went down, but there was nothing doing. Croft made good a nice chance, beating Derocher

Palmer fell all over himself. Shots by Croft and Giroux were easy pickings to the net guardians. Sarels made it one more, and Kelly raised him one on a pass from Ray.

Peterborough 10, Trenton 3.

Palmer pulled off a juvenile stunt, but was only tired out. Ray and Denison combined for another tally, the former taking the shot.

Sarels went up the boards and then drew a three minute penalty. Palmer fell in with the puck and made it a quartette for his team on a side shot, with the territory all to himself. Denison stopped Fletcher and Croft, and McGraw sidetracked Ray. Denison rushed, worked the pass to Ray, who counted. Denison made it thirteen on a beautiful lone. Fletcher threw away an opening with a high shot, but on the next attempt was luckier and beat Derocher from the side. The last score of the game went to Denison, who wiggled through the whole Trenton team.

Final score—Peterborough 14, Trenton 5.

Picture Machine Exploded in Face of Operator
Photographed from "Lindsay Warder" of Jan 13th last.

While taking flashlight pictures last evening Mr. the Simpson House last evening Mr. E. McIntosh, of Toronto, formerly chef at the Benson House, Lindsay, had his face and head badly burned by the machine exploding. While about to take the picture Mr. McIntosh pulled the string that caused the machine to explode, but it did not work. He tried it several times and finding it would not work, walked over to the machine to see what was wrong, and while repairing it the machine exploded in his face with the above results.

He was at once taken to the Ross hospital, where he now lies suffering intense pain. Mr. McIntosh would have probably lost his eyesight, but for the fact that he was wearing glasses.

Now read The Sequel

Mr. MacIntosh says:—"At the hospital I was kept masked night and day for five days. At the end of that time the burns were still very bad and the doctors would not hear of my returning to work. I knew if I could only get some Zam-Buk for the burns I would be back at work in quick time, because I had previously used the balm and knew what it would do.

At last I left the hospital and went straight to a local store and bought some Zam-Buk. At the hotel I applied a Zam-Buk dressing and this cooled the burning pains and gave me quick relief. I kept on with the Zam-Buk treatment and returned to work. Within just one week after first commencing with the Zam-Buk treatment I might have defied anybody to detect where the burns had been, so splendidly did Zam-Buk heal the injury."

A Canadian Farmer's Opinion on Tariff Question

(By Bruce Johnston.)

In the "Weekly Sun" of January [illegible] I read an article, the heading of which was "Is This All?" dealing with two farmers' delegations which visited Ottawa this winter, boasting, as it were, of the western delegation and trying to show how insignificant the latter delegation was.

To start with, I may say, that I was a member of both delegations, that I heard all the memorials presented to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and I have read pretty nearly every article of importance published by the press dealing with the reciprocity negotiations between the two countries.

I wish in this article, as a mixed farmer and gardener to express my views on this most important question, which means so much to Canada as a young and growing country. Sir George Ross, ex-Liberal Premier of Ontario, gave an address before the Board of Trade, Toronto, last fall, and in my opinion, discussed the question in such a masterly, broad-minded way that he deserves great credit. He gave facts and figures to prove what he said, and I honestly believe that he is an honest, broad-minded man, who spoke without fear or favor and for the benefit of Canada as a nation.

Before I deal with the farmers' delegation to Ottawa in December, I wish to express my views on the West, as I have travelled through the country myself, and may, in time, have occasion to go there again.

In the first place, as a farmer's son, I took a notion to go and see the West, and while there I had occasion to be engaged in all the various processes at different times, and places of wheat growing, milling and shipping. I plowed the land in the fall, sowed the wheat in the spring, ran the binder and shocked in the harvest, did all the various parts connected with threshing, loaded wheat on the cars for Duluth and elsewhere, also drew to the local elevators. I put in ten months for a Duluth milling company, partly in their office in the Board of Trade, and the balance of the time in the mill, and I think, Mr. Editor, that my experience justifies me in expressing an opinion as to the free trade for the western farmer. I have two brothers and a host of friends in the three western provinces, whom I know personally have done remarkably well there, and who would not return to Ontario and take up farming again.

In the first place, the Western members of the delegation, as well as the Grangers from Ontario, complained of the oppression on the farmer, brought about by the monopoly of Canadian manufacturers. I, as an Ontario man, would say, in expressing what I believe the feeling of the people to be, that we are as much interested in the welfare and advancement of the great North-West as a father would be in starting a son on a new farm. The Western men, while in Ottawa, asked the Government for a great many things, all of which were for the sole benefit of the Western farmer. We, as Eastern men, have no hesitation in saying to our Western brothers or the Government that we are in favor of anything that will be of benefit to the West. But as regards the tariff question we cannot agree with the views of the Executive of the Canadian Council of Agriculture. This question, as well as all other demands made at Ottawa, is solely to suit the leaders of the Western delegation, and I may say, that if the Government tries to satisfy such demands (which I feel sure they will not) the progress of the West will, as well as the East, receive a shock, not of an earthquake, nor of an eruption from Vesuvius, but one of equal importance.

Is this a time now, when prices of all kinds of farm produce, are at the highest notch ever recorded in the history of our country, for the farmer to go to the Government and complain about the oppression the poor farmer has to put up with, and how the manufacturer has his knees on their necks, and as a Saskatoon man said, "and our lives in their bloody hands."

I tell your readers, farmers both west and east are prosperous, and not as they were a few years back, when they could scarcely pay rent on a rented farm. To-day the renter is buying the farm he lives on.

What took those farmers to the West?

Are they not in the same ship as the manufacturer, the importer and wholesaler or any other class of men?

They went there to farm because of the profits derived from tilling our virgin prairie soil, and they, like our manufacturers, our importers, our merchants, or any other class of men, are there because there is a goodly remuneration in it for them.

We as Eastern men are pleased to see all the various enterprises thrifty and flourishing, and we should be as one people looking at these great national problems, as to what is best for Canada as a young and growing nation, on which the eyes of the world are focused at the present time.

Men of large financial means of a great many countries, principally of course Great Britain and the United States, have been investing in enterprises here, and no doubt will in the future, under protection, but it is not likely that American capital will come over here and build factories, employ our workmen, build towns and cities and of course be of tremendous worth to the farmers of our country under free trade.

How do free trade advocates figure that the Canadian gardener and small fruit grower can compete with the United States? Their country is south of ours, and while I admit that as far as quality goes we can compete and could compete in price also, had we the same climatic conditions they have.

Any man engaged in gardening knows too well that the duty on vegetables is not high enough now. Their season is earlier than ours by a month or two, and it is out of the early stuff and that alone, that the gardner expects to make his profit above a mere livelihood.

Canada has gone into indebtedness for three great transcontinental railways, running parallel across the continent, to help get our produce into Great Britain and other European countries. What was the use of building this vast amount of railway, if we turn our trade to the south?

The freight rates between the east and west are too high now, and this is a very great disadvantage to the east and west. No doubt in the future with three great transcontinental railways and an increasing trade, our freight rates will be lowered.

The great and vital question regarding the lowering of the tariff will be the fluctuations in prices at unlooked-for times. If we have protection, we can go in for producing for the demand, knowing that all we have to compete with is our own people. While if we have free trade, we do not know whether we will have an outside market for our surplus in the American markets, or whether our own market will be glutted.

We cannot compete in trade relations with the United States, because the United States has the advantage of us in population as well as every other way, save our great national resources.

The farmers' delegation at Ottawa claimed that their policy would help the farmer and would not injure any other class of people. Does not anything which tends to stop investment of capital in our country, tend also to hurt the advancement of all classes of industry. We should be a united, happy people and I believe we are, who should look to the great Giver with thankful hearts for such a beautiful country where prosperity is shown on every hand. We believe that this country cannot be successful without all the various classes we have to-day being represented. Let the captains of industry manufacture, bankers attend to banking, merchants to store keeping, and farmers to farming.

Some free trade farmers make great calculations on the wonderful prices they could get in New York City. How is it at the present time American eggs have come into Canada and caused a drop in prices of ten cents per dozen? Mr. C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture informs us that during 1909 and 1910, we actually imported for home consumption 24,240,000 eggs. Let me ask the Canadian farmer what is wrong with the home market? With such a market at our very doors, and city people complaining about how dear everything is they have to buy, it is surely laughable to hear our poor down-trodden farmers laying their petitions before our great Government leaders.

Let us be a united people, a united empire of which Canada is a wheel. Let us work for the advancement of Canada first, and then encourage colonial preference in trade between Canada and other countries of the British Empire.

A Novel Scheme.

Montreal, Feb. 4.—At the annual meeting of the diocese of Montreal next week, Mr. J. M. Fisk will put forward a motion which authorizes the delegates of the synod to bring before the general synod the following resolutions:

"This synod, recognizing the advantage that would accrue to the various parishes of the Church of England in Canada, by forming a mutual fire insurance union to co-operate in carrying the risk on all church property, such as cathedral, churches, rectories, parsonages and their outbuildings, colleges, church schools, halls, etc., throughout the various diocese of the Dominion of Canada (or such dioceses as may desire such union) shall bring the subject before the general synod at their next meeting with the view of forming such a union.

Hanlan Wright Committed.

Windsor, Feb. 4.—Hanlan Wright, "the Harrow bandit," was given a preliminary hearing before Police Magistrate Leggatt here yesterday and committed for trial. The principal witness against young Wright was his uncle, William Wright, a wealthy farmer of Harrow, from whom the young man attempted to obtain $5,000 by threatening him with death. He told the court that for four days he had been forced to barricade himself inside his house, fearing his nephew would shoot him on sight, as he had so often threatened to do.

FARMER MAKES A STRONG STATEMENT

Is Convinced That Dodd's Kidney Pills Have No Equal

They Cured his Backache and Kidney Disease after two years trial of plasters and medicines failed to bring permanent relief.

Poodiac, King's Co., N.B., Feb. 3, (Special.) — Moses Sherwood, a well-known farmer living near here is convinced that as a Kidney medicine Dodd's Kidney Pills have no equal. In a statement just issued Mr. Sherwood says:

"About eight years ago I hurt my back from lifting. I used plasters and liniment, and wore a wide belt. These gave me some relief for about two years, when Kidney trouble developed.

"My back was so sore I could not lift any weight, and as it was right in haying time (I thought I would not be able to pitch any hay that year.

"Reading of cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills led me to try them, and before I had finished the first box my backache had disappeared and my urine was a healthy color. I am fifty-one years of age and have been healthy ever since."

You hear of thousands of people who have been cured of Kidney Disease after other so-called remedies have failed to help them. You never hear of anyone trying other remedies after using Dodd's Kidney Pills. They always cure.

NORTH MONAGHAN FARMERS AND RECIPROCITY

Canadian Century

That Mr. E. C. Drury of the Dominion Grange, and the leaders of the Grain-Growers' Association are wrong in saying that the farmers of Canada are unitedly in favour of reciprocity with the United States has been positively proven by a canvass recently made in North Monaghan, Peterborough County, Ontario. The canvass was begun by the present editor of THE CANADIAN CENTURY and continued by Mr. Bruce Johnston a farmer living three miles from Peterborough, who is an enthusiastic protectionist. The Peterborough Review gave valuable support at the inception of the canvass.

Every farmer living in the township, excepting nine or ten who were absent from home, was questioned as to his opinion and 189 out of 218, that is over 86 per cent., signed the following declaration:

"The undersigned farmers of North Monaghan Township, in the County of Peterborough, believe that no Reciprocity Treaty should be agreed upon which will allow American farm products or American manufactured goods to come into Canada more freely than they do at present. We believe that the home market for farm products is better than any foreign market for the following reasons:

"1. The farther the consumers are from the farmers the more it costs to carry farm products to them, and the more middlemen there are to share the profits.

"2. Many kinds of farm products command the best prices when they are fresh. If they are shipped to distant markets, they lose their freshness before they reach the consumers and consequently the farmer gets a lower price for them than he would get if he could sell them while fresh in a market near at hand. Some kinds of farm products are so perishable that they cannot be profitably shipped to distant markets.

"3. A workman employed in a city of the United States, or any other foreign country, consumes only a few cents' worth of Canadian farm products in a year. Workmen employed in British factories consume much more of Canadian farm products than those of any foreign country do, but even British workmen buy a very small proportion of what they eat from Canadian farmers. Workmen employed in Canadian towns and cities will, under a proper system of tariff protection, buy nearly everything they eat from Canadian farmers. At present, owing to the low Canadian tariff on farm products, large quantities of American farm products come into Canada.

"The undersigned farmers believe that the Canadian tariff should be raised high enough to shut out such American farm products and preserve the home market for Canadian farmers.

"Great quantities of manufactured goods also come into Canada from the United States because the Canadian tariff is not high enough to keep them out. The working men employed in making those goods are fed by American farmers. The undersigned farmers of Peterborough county believe that the Canadian tariff should be so framed as to cause the manufacture of such goods in Canadian towns and cities by workmen who will be fed by Canadian farmers.

"We believe that the principle expressed in the following motto is a good one: 'Keep your money in circulation at home by buying goods made in Canada. When you can't get what you want in Canada, buy within the British Empire.'

"If American manufacturers wish to sell their goods to the Canadian people they should build branch factories in Canada. The Canadian tariff should be high enough to make them do so.

"The undersigned farmers favor a policy of thorough protection for the products of Canadian farms, mines and factories, with reciprocal preference arrangements between Canada and the other countries of the British Empire."

Every farmer was asked to read the declaration carefully, and was told that if he did not entirely agree with it we did not want his signature. It was found that a large proportion of the farmers of both political parties were hotly opposed to reciprocity with the United States. Even among the 29 who refused to sign there were a number of men who expressed approval of the declaration against reciprocity, but said they made it a rule never to sign anything.

One farmer said, "I agree with every word on that paper, but I won't sign it because I believe you are a Conservative and working for the Conservative party."

He was assured that the canvass was not being made in the interest of any political party. Both political parties were well represented on the list of signatures.

On January 19 Mr. Bruce Johnston met at Ottawa the deputation of protectionist farmers led by Mr. David Jackson, and read the declaration to Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

There was not time to canvass the farmers in a large area, but we think that if a similar canvass were made throughout Eastern Canada it would be found that a majority of the farmers are protectionists and opposed to reciprocity with the United States.

There is an epidemic of grip in London, Ont., and some factories and offices are seriously shorthanded.

THE CANADA LIFE'S REPORT FOR 1910

Shows a Prosperous Year

The annual report of the Canada Life, which is printed elsewhere in this issue, shows that the Company enjoyed a most satisfactory year in all that goes to insure strength and permanent progress. From the present report, and others that have appeared for many years past, it is evident that the Company aims for a safe and steady growth along the lines that mean security and profit to its policyholders.

The continued reduction in the expense ratio, the increased interest earnings and the lower mortality rate all go to prove that the management of this institution places the greatest imporrtance upon economy, upon care in selection of insurance risks and and upon the careful investment of its large assets of $40,820,856.00. These are the essential things that make for surplus, and insure stability, and are of far greater importance to the policyholders than any rapid increase in new business figures.

In 1910 the immense sum of $4,789,000.00 was paid to its policyholders, a larger amount by over one and a half millions of dollars than has been paid during any year in the Company's history. Over $2,000,000.00 in profits alone were allotted to policyholders last year.

Notwithstanding such large disbursements on policyholders' account the assets increased by $1,134,793.00. The surplus earned, $1,233,163.00, was the greatest in the Company's history of 64 years.

The new paid-for business amounted to $10,838,384.00, bringing the total assurance in force up to $128,274,973.00.

COLLEGIAN'S GAVE DANCE

Brilliant Function at Conservatory of Music—Former Pupils Present

The Collegiate "At Home" and dance in the Conservatory of Music Hall last night was one of the brightest and most successful social functions of its kind held here for some time. The students who were responsible for the unusually brilliant affair are deserving of great praise. Everything went along smoothly, especially the dancing, and not the slightest flaw marred the success of the enjoyable occasion.

ELABORATELY DECORATED.

The hall was elaborately decorated with gay pennants and flags, and among them the colors of the Collegiate, garnet and grey were mingled.

The attendance was excellent, just enough present for comfort, despite other attractions. First class music furnished by Mr. Frank Musgrave, the popular pianist, could not have been excelled.

A brief interval for refreshments followed about eleven o'clock, after which dancing was resumed.

The affair concluded about two o'clock.

Many from out of the city, former pupils, and quite a number of invited guests embraced the opportunity of attending. Some of them were: Messrs. Carmichael, Stewart Anderson, Bruce Clegg, Wilfrid Huycke, Kenneth Crane and Harry Hall. Some from Lindsay were: Miss Reta Miller, the Misses Parkins and Mr. Scott Payton.

The committee in charge of last evening's affair were Jack Harstone (secretary), John Harstone, Charles Ray, W. Gibson, and Roy Dixon.

GOOD HEALTH FOR RUN DOWN MEN

If You Are Weak and Easily Tired Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Good Health fo run down women.

Anaemia is a state into which one falls because of lack of blood, or because the blood is poor weak and watery. The man or woman who has not enough blood, is pale, languid easily tired and easily depressed. As the trouble progresses other symptoms show themselves, and the life of the sufferer is one of misery. Anaemia opens the door to consumption and gives victims to all the epidemic maladies, because the whole body is weakened and unable to resist the inroads of disease. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best remedy in the world for the cure of anaemia, and all its attendent miseries. They make the blood rich, red and pure, thus bringing health and strength to weak, despondent men and women. We do not know of a single case of anaemia where Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have failed to cure it given a fair trial. Mr. John Hastings, Venn, Sask., was a victim of this trouble and found new health through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He says: "I was working on a railway driving a team and found myself gradually running down. I did not pay much attention to it at first but soon I began to lose my appetite and it was a trial to get through my day's work. I got medicine from the doctor on the works, but it did not help me, and finally I got so bad I told the foreman I would have to quit. He told me not to lose hope, that he would get some medicine that would soon make me all right. That night he went to town and bought me three boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had not taken more than two boxes when I began to feel better, and after I had used five boxes I was as well and strong as ever, and could do a day's work with any man on the job. I may just add that before I began taking the Pills I was so run down that I weighed only 122 pounds and while taking them I gained 22 pounds. I cannot say too much in favor of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and strongly recommended them to all run down men."

You can get these Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

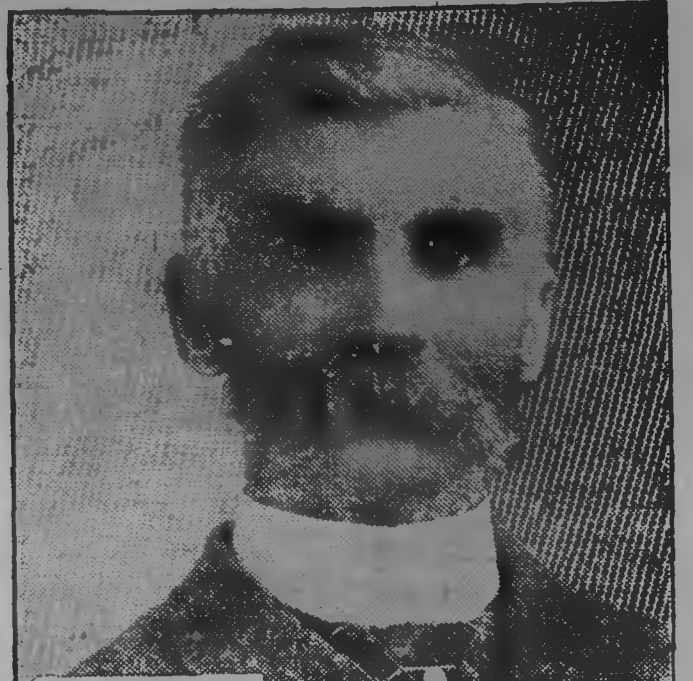
Pe-ru-na Promptly Relieves Severe Cold and La Grippe.

Mr. T. Barnecott, West Aylmer, Ontario, Can., writes:

"Last winter I was ill with pneumonia after having la grippe. I took Peruna for two months, when I became quite well, and I can say that any one can be cured by it in a reasonable time and at little expense. Every time I take a cold, I take some Peruna, which makes me well again.

"I also induced a young lady, who was all rundown and confined to the house, to take Peruna, and after taking Peruna for three months she is able to follow her trade of tailoring.

"I can recommend Peruna for all such who are ill and require a tonic."



MR. T. BARNECOTT.

EVERY year, during the inclement weather of winter, there is an epidemic of la grippe. The disease is really catarrhal in nature, but from the form it assumes, has been commonly termed the "grip."

Splendid Remedy for La Grippe.

Mr. Frank H. Fiolder, 213 Pleasant Ave., Montgomery, Ala., formerly principal of Haynesville High School, writes:

"I can truthfully say that Peruna is a splendid remedy for la grippe and a good tonic for building up the system."

La grippe is very tenacious when it once gets a firm hold upon the system, and in addition to a thorough, systemic catarrh remedy, a great deal of patience and persistence in the treatment are required to eradicate the disease.

Peruna, an internal catarrh remedy, is one of the best medicines ever devised to meet the exigencies of these cases. The large number of commendatory letters received by Dr. Hartman, the inventor of Peruna, in behalf of his remedy is proof sufficient of its value as a reliable medicine for the "grip."

Prompt Relief.

Mr. Frank Bauer, Minneiska, Minn., writes: "I suffered with la grippe. My lungs felt as if knives were sticking in them. I took Peruna and in four days I was able to go out."

Relief of Pain

DEMOCRATS ARE UNANIMOUS IN SUPPORT OF RECIPROCITY

Poll of Congressmen Show it is Favored—Will be Before House Soon.

Niagara Men Will Invade Ottawa on Friday—News and Views of Situation.

Washington, Feb. 5.—President Taft's reciprocity agreement with Canada will probably be reported favorably by the ways and means committee before the end of the week. Its passage by the House almost certainly will follow without delay.

This is the situation notwithstanding the attempts of the enemies of the agreement to discredit it by declaring that the print paper and wood pulp provisions will not hold and that substantial amendment will be necessary.

It became known Saturday that the agreement itself is perfectly satisfactory to the State Department.

Recognizing that the people of the country are demanding this legislation, the Democrats of the House are preparing to hold a caucus early this week, probably to-night, and give to it their official endorsement. A poll of the Democrats by Representative Champ Clark, the next Speaker, has disclosed the fact that 96 per cent. of them will cast their votes for the agreement.

Pleadings Against Reciprocity.

Quebec, Feb. 6.—Preaching from the text "This land shall be your possession before the Lord," Rev. Canon Scott, the well-known Canadian poet, said last night that there were times of criticism in the national life when the usual reticence of the pulpit with reference to things political should be broken. Such a time was the present. The fate of Canada was hanging in the balance. If this were the last sermon he should ever preach, his voice would still be raised in the warning that should come from every preacher's lips, that this grave step would lead inevitably to the denationalizing of Canada, and its final absorption in the American Union.

Niagara Fruit Men Angry.

St. Catharines, Feb. 6.—So intense is the feeling against the reciprocity proposals throughout the fruit belt between this city and Hamilton that a monster deputation is being organized to go to Ottawa on Friday of this week and protest to the Government. It is stated that in numbers it will rival the deputation of western grain growers that invaded the capital in December last.

The fruit growers are alarmed over a possible reduction in the tariff on the ground that it will destroy the land values that enterprise, and industry have created at Grimsby, Winona and other points. They claim that the benefit of the early market will be denied them by reason of the importation of southern fruit, which, by reason of cheap labor in those parts, will undersell the home-grown product.

Millions are invested in the fruit industry in the Niagara peninsula, and the men who have nurtured the industry take it as a hardship that the work of years should be destroyed at a moment. They take credit for the quality of the product, and take the position that profits now have been reduced to a minimum, and further competition would spell ruination.

It is stated that deputations from other parts of the province will join with the fruit growers.

Taft's Speeches

Washington, Feb. 6.—Reciprocity will be the theme which President Taft will discuss in most of the speeches he will deliver between now and the time Congress adjourns. Secretary Knox will help along the administration's campaign in this district by delivering an address on the reciprocity question at a banquet to be held in Chicago on the night of Feb. 15 by the Association of Commerce of Chicago. Both at Columbus, Ohio, corn exhibit, where the President will speak next Friday and before the Illinois Legislature on the following day, he will talk reciprocity. It is likely, also, it was stated at the White House yesterday, that at the Lincoln dinner at Springfield next Saturday night he may touch on the same topic.

THE STRIKE COST $7,000,000

Chicago, Feb. 6.—To-day saw the beginning of the return of the garment strikers in Chicago to their work.

The strike is ended by unanimous consent of the leaders and of the workers, who, fearful lest their places in the shops be filled, and the union destroyed, have agreed to return to work.

The strike lasted 133 days and cost the workers something like $3,000,000, and employers $4,000,000.

The strike cost four lives, and 876 members of the Garment Workers' union have been arrested for rioting.

SIX KILLED IN BAD SMASH ON G.T.R. NEAR BRANTFORD

Mogul Engine Crashes Into Passenger Train, With Terrible Effect.

Five of Those Killed Are Railwaymen — Fire Destroyed Two Bodies.

Brantford, Feb. 6.—The lives of six men, including five trainmen and one passenger, were lost and several injured in a terrible catastrophe on the Buffalo and Goderich line of the Grand Trunk Railway, which happened at 9.20 Saturday night, three and a half miles west of Paris, and midway between Paris and Drumbo. The catastrophe was the result of a head-on collision between the westbound passenger train, running from Buffalo to Stratford, and a mogul engine in charge of Engineer Robert Errett of Sarnia, running light from Stratford to Fort Erie.

Following in the wake of the collision came a terrible, devastating fire which incinerated the bodies of a couple of the victims, and made an easy prey of the three splintered coaches of the train. The fire left nothing but the bare trucks and wheels, and a mass of twisted iron and charred ruin.

The dead are: A. Turner, engineer, Stratford; leaves a wife and grown up family. J. D. Smith, fireman, Stratford; leaves a wife and family. Peter McFarland, baggageman, Goderich; married, no children. John Whitelaw, express messenger, Goderich, formerly of Whitby; wife suffering from shock. William Tye, mail clerk, Goderick; leaves wife and grown up family. D. J. Crozier, passenger, Drumbo.

The list of injured includes the following: W. J. May, mail clerk, Hamilton, severely scalded; W. T. Henderson, city solicitor, Brantford, back injured; William McIntosh, customs clerk, Brantford, back injured; Geo. Hunt, Brantford, shaken up; Robert Errett, engineer, minor bruises and sprains.

The ill-fated train left Brantford 17 minutes late, and was running in charge of Conductor Ausbrook, with full right of way. None of the crew were aware of the approaching engine, which, it is understood had running orders to its destination and "to avoid regulars." The engine should have stopped at Drumbo, but instead, proceeded on to Paris, colliding halfway with the passenger train. Had the latter been on time the two would have met at Drumbo. Whether the crew of the engine had forgotten about the passenger train, or whether orders were mistaken, is a matter which could not be learned out of the usual railway reticence here yesterday. Trainmaster Forrester and Supt. U. E. Gillen conducted an investigation and Coroner Staples has ordered an inquest this afternoon at Princeton where the charred bodies of Peter McFarland, J. D. Smith and William Tye were yesterday conveyed.

When the crash occurred the passenger train was traveling at about 35 miles an hour, according to the Brantford passengers. The engine must have been going much faster, as it struck with such impact that the baggage car was completely telescoped, and the mail end of the smoking car driven in, where the passengers

PARLIAMENT IS OPENED BY KING

Usual Ceremonial Display This Morning in London

Special to The Review.

London, Feb. 6.—King George opened the first Parliament to-day with all the traditional rites. The weather was foggy, but immense crowds thronged the streets, cheering the King and Queen during the drive to the Parliament Buildings.

There was no demonstration by the suffragettes, who abandoned their determination to make a scene.

Everything passed off very smoothly.

OTTAWA MINISTERS HOT ON TRAIL OF COL. SAM HUGHES

Resent His Attack on Rev. Mr. Milne—Will Pass a Resolution of Censure.

Ottawa, Feb. 6.—Local Protestant clergymen are up in arms, so to speak, against the slashing verbal attack made in the Commons a few days ago by Col. Sam Hughes upon Rev. J. W. H. Milne of this city, in reply to some pulpit criticism of members of Parliament, who take advantage of their privileged position to attack private citizens.

A meeting of the Ministerial Association of Ottawa has been called for to-night, at which the matter will be dealt with, and it is expected a resolution condemning Col. Hughes will be submitted.

Several leading Protestant clergymen, in interviews here on Saturday, condemned the speech, which they characterized as unnecessarily abusive and low tactics, tending to cast reflections on the ministry as a whole.

Unionists Staggered.

London, Feb. 6.—The Imperialist newspapers are staggered by the breadth and scope of the U.S.-Canadian reciprocity agreement.

The Morning Post, in an editorial full of sobs, tears and threats, calls upon the Unionists to fight to the death for an imperial union. It declares that the agreement must afford powerful assistance to the United States in her efforts to control the foreign trade of Canada. It says the Dominion will be linked even closer and closer to her great neighbor by these sordid ties, and American influence over Canadian thought and action will rapidly expand. The links that bind the daughter nation to the Mother Country, it is said, will grow steadily weaker.

Frank McCall of Toronto, a shipping agent, said "I believe a majority of the people of Ontario favor reciprocity. All friends of international peace and progress wish it success in its further campaign."

DEATH OF BOER CHIEF CRONJE

Man Who Led Transvaal Forces at Paardeburg Passes Away.

Was Aged 76, and Had Led an Active Life—Was in America for Time.

Klerksdorf, Transvaal, Feb. 6.—Gen. Piet A. Cronje, the noted Boer general, who was captured by the Royal Canadian Regiment at Paardeberg in 1900, died on Saturday.

Piet Arnoldus Cronje, the famous Boer general, was born in 1835. He was of Huguenot descent. In the war of 1880 with the British he commanded a division of his countrymen at Doornkop and Majuba Hill, and led the Boers who besieged Potchefstroom, where, keeping the garrison ignorant of the fact that a general armistice had been signed, he forced its capitulation (1881). It was he who frustrated the Jameson raid at Krugersdorf (1896), and when in 1899, the Transvaal declared war with Britain, Cronje, appointed commander of the western army of the South African republics, unsuccessfully attacked Kimberley, but (November 28) repulsed the British under Lord Methuen at the Modder River, although later his flank was turned, and again (Dec. 11) at Magersfontein, raised the Boer siege at Kimberley.

On Feb. 15, 1900, Cronje retreated. Intrenched in the bed of the Modder River at Paardeberg, he surrendered with his whole army of 4,069 men, with six guns, on Feb. 27, the anniversary of Majuba. He was sent (April, 1900) to St. Helena, but returned to the Transvaal after the conclusion of peace. In 1904-5 he appeared with various amusement enterprises in America.

FAMILY FEUD

An Italian Vendetta Results in Several Murders.

Naples, Feb. 6.—A family feud at Nicotera, in the Province of Catanzaro, has resulted in scenes in the streets of that town not unlike those of the Sidney street drama in London.

Giuseppe Brancia, a student belonging to a good family, was attacked in the open street by two brothers Michele and Amedeo Gelanze, belonging to the hostile family. After a few shots had been exchanged, young Brancia fell dead. Roused by the shots, a crowd assembled. Among them were the parents of the dead youth, two of their sons, and a friend of the family, all armed with revolvers.

The two assassins fled. One reached his home, but the other, struck in the knee, fell to the ground. His brother, his father, and others in the house fired from a window on the members of the Brancia family, who returned the fire. In the battle more than 200 shots were exchanged. The fight only ceased on the arrival of carabineers, who entered the house of the Gelanze family and arrested the original assassin as he was firing from the window. They also arrested the elder Brancia.

Several members of both families were wounded. A girl named Angelina Ferraro, who was watching the battle from a doorway, was shot in the stomach.

MEXICAN INSURRECTOS ARE GETTING WORST OF FIGHT

Juarez Re-captured by Government Troops, Who Will Take the Offensive.

Special to the Review.

El Paso, Texas, Feb. 6.—Martial law has been proclaimed in Juarez, Mexico, to-day by Col. Robago, who last night cut his way through the revolutionists' lines, and entered the city. The federal troops will now take the offensive, and the city is believed to be safe from capture. The number of dead resulting from yesterday's fighting is believed to be ten.

Officers For the Navy.

Ottawa, Feb. 6.—A number of regulations in regard to the naval service are contained in this week's issue of The Canada Gazette.

Candidates for the positions of naval instructors for the instruction of junior officers are required to be British subjects and to have lived in Canada for two years. They should not be over 27 years of age and should possess an honor degree in mathematics.

The rates of pay range from $4 per day on entry to $10.50 per day, received by a captain-director of naval instruction. Traveling allowances of officers in the naval service are increased and the rates of pay of electrician and chief electricians in the service are revised.

Chinese Whisky Seized.

Ottawa, Feb. 6.—The celebration by the local Chinese colony of the New Year last night, was somewhat marred. License Inspector Enright made three seizures on Saturday night, embracing 25 half cases of Chinese native whisky from local storehouses. The patrol was filled, and it required an express wagon to carry all the goods to the police station. Three cases were seized at the store of Huom Quong, one of the Chinese M.P.'s from Canada. The whisky will be sent to Toronto for analysis, and if it is over proof, cases will be taken at the Police Court later.

McCURDY'S HONOR

Public Reception and Purse Given Him in Havana.

Havana, Feb. 6.—With practically the entire population of Havana looking on, J. A. D. McCurdy, who recently nearly crossed the Straits of Florida in a bi-plane, made a magnificently spectacular flight yesterday from the drill grounds of Camp Columbia to Morro Lighthouse, which he encircled twice, and returned.

The official time was 16 minutes 12 seconds. The estimated distance is 11 miles. The machine used by McCurdy was a 50-horsepower biplane, and the prize for the flight was $3,000, offered by the city. This, however, is open to competition until Feb. 28.

A great reception was accorded McCurdy last evening at the Albisu Theatre. Vice-President Alfredo Zayas presided and presented McCurdy with the purse of $3,000 given by The Havana Post for his flight from Key West to Havana.

Canadian Concern Loses Suit.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 5.—Announcement was made here on Saturday that any claims against Telamon Smith Cuyler, the Atlanta broker, by the Canadian Cottons, Ltd., of Montreal, will be adjusted by arbitration and a suit against Cuyler in the nature of an attachment to recover about $40,000 on a cotton transaction, has been dismissed. Cuyler is confined in a private sanitarium.

Name Stricken From Rolls.

London, Feb. 6.—The name of Lt. Frederick Fermor-Hesketh of the Ninth Lancers, who strangely dropped out of sight last fall, was, on Friday, stricken from the rolls of the British army because of absence from duty without leave.

The lieutenant is the second son of Sir Thomas George Fermor and Lady Fermor-Hesketh.

A world-wide search for the lieutenant, instituted soon after his disappearance, failed to discover any clue as to his whereabouts. He is 28 years of age and was educated at the Royal Military College at Sandhurst and Trinity College, Cambridge. He is described as a handsome man and of a pleasing personality. He left his mother's residence at Euston Neston Tewcestern, on the afternoon of Oct. 29, after saying that he would return soon for dinner. The last seen of him was on the following morning when he landed from a steamer at Kingstown, Ireland. It has been suggested that he sailed for America. The family can offer no explanation.

In Command of "B" Battery.

Kingston, Feb. 6.—Saturday Major D. I. V. Eaton, Ottawa, took over the command of B Battery, R.C.H.A., filling the place of Major Henri Panet, ordered to Aldershot, England, for a year, to be attached to a horse artillery battery. Major Panet will go to England this week.

Proposed Creation of Peers Interests Great Britain—Lords Will Protest Against it—Details of the King's Speech.

London, Feb. 6.—The King's speech excites no curiosity this year. Its outlines were available at the Government and Opposition dinners last night, but outsiders attending the reception in Downing street and at Lansdowne House did not need cues respecting its contents. The fact that Cabinet meetings have been few in number and have broken up early proves that there is no dissension over the veto bill, and that no other important legislation, apart from financial business, will be undertaken.

"Full steam ahead" will be the Prime Minister's order, and the coalition will hold together and carry the measure through the Commons before the coronation. The Easter and Whitsuntide recesses will be shortened, and the holidays will be extended to three weeks at coronation time. These were open secrets when rival receptions were held at Mrs. Asquith's and Lady Lansdowne's after the Prime Minister's, Lord Crewe's and Lord Beauchamp's dinner on one side, and Lord Londonderry's on the other.

There are no signs of high temperature in the Commons. The Liberals are in gay spirits and easily amused. There are loud guffaws of laughter whenever a fortunate member is convicted of having brought a new motor car or a fur overcoat, for he is at once congratulated on his chance of becoming a puppet peer. The pulse is lower on the Unionist side, where everybody professes to be bored with politics and in favor of a benevolent despotism. Strenuous resistance to the veto bill is considered necessary, since the Opposition members were elected for the purpose of fighting it; but there is a cynical indifference to the development of constitutional questions, couple with a lack of faith in the ability of the Unionists to do anything beyond retarding the progress of the measure in the Commons.

The signed pledge has been dropped by the Labor members, because it is evident that there can be no reversal of the Osborne judgment this year. The necessity for avoiding an autumn session in view of the King's departure for India is generally recognized, and it is doubtful whether the bills for the payment of members and the abolition of plural voting can be passed.

There is, indeed, only one mystery in the near future. This relates to the reception of the veto bill by the Lords and the necessity for the creation of hundreds of peers if no compromise can be effected before or after the coronation.

It is understood that King George's speech at the opening of his first Parliament to-day, will be a brief one, referring to the coronation, the Imperial conference and the Duke of Connaught's inauguration of the political move of the union of South Africa, and outlining the legislative program, which will include the veto bill and measures for dealing with workmen's insurance, plural voting, the payment of members of the House of Commons, and, possibly, an amendment to the Aliens Act, as the outcome of the Houndsditch affair.

A notable absentee from the House to-day will be Chancellor Lloyd-George who is now in Naples, where he probably will remain for another fortnight and perhaps longer. His throat trouble is proving unexpectedly obstinate.

The Unionist leaders have held several conferences, but it is still unknown what attitude they will adopt towards the veto bill. It is believed that the Lords may accept it as it is and should the Prime Minister advise the creation of a few hundred new peers, the King cannot constitutionally withhold his sanction. It is understood Lansdowne will almost immediately introduce a bill in the Lords for the reform of the Upper House, along the lines indicated in the Lansdowne-Rosebery measure.

Austin Chamberlain will move a tariff reform amendment, with special reference to the reciprocity agreement. Another amendment to the address will deal with the aliens' question.

PRICE OF WHEAT

J. Ellis Barker, of London, Eng., an English specialist on political economy, says that the result of Canadian reciprocity with the United States will be to put the United States farmer out of business. He bases this conclusion on the argument that Canadian costs of production are so much less than in the United States that the Canadian can undersell the American farmer on wheat and still show as good a margin of profit. He says:

> "I consider the reciprocity question in the first place as an Imperial and a political problem, but I will gladly give you my view on its economic aspects. The most striking effect is, after my opinion, that it will ruin the United States farmer. He cannot possibly compete with the Canadian farmer in growing wheat. The United States farmer's land is expensive and largely exhausted. He has no reserve of cheap land. Labor in the United States is dear and so is the interest on loans and mortgages. The United States farmer is pretty heavily indebted The Canadian farmer has unlimited land at cheap prices, and vast quantities of prairie land are broken every year."

We cannot see the problem in this way. If the principles on which commerce is conducted on this continent were always strictly in accord with the theories of political economists, Mr. Barker's conclusions might bear some weight. But any grain grower familiar with the methods by which the Pattens and the Leiters get their grip on the wheat production, will at once say that while free Canadian wheat might reduce the profits of the American grower to a small extent, it certainly will never be enough to put him out of business.

The western provinces produced about 160,000,000 bushels of wheat last year. Part of that went for home consumption, and at least 60,000,000 was exported or is held for export. The wheat production of the United States is somewhere around the 700,000,000 mark, and most of it is consumed at home, exports in this staple dropping off at an alarming rate.

Is it reasonable that 60,000,000 bushels of wheat will displace 700,000,000 on the market? Mr. Barker's reasoning is a fallacy on the very face of it. The Canadian west's production will greatly increase under the stimulus of a great home consumption market next door, but free wheat will not mean the capture of the market by the Canadian at all. The introduction of the Canadian wheat will have the effect of steadying the American market, of regulating prices, in making it much harder for the corner-man to operate. But we imagine that as wheat prices are regulated from Liverpool very largely, that the American farmer will neither be hurt particularly, nor the Canadian west benefited materially by a better price. It is largely a question of transportation costs in the end.

SENATE REFORM

The resolution offered by Mr. Lancaster (Lincoln) proposing the abolition of the Dominion Senate, provoked an interesting discussion in the House participated in by members on both sides. It was noticeable that every speaker concurred in the proposition that the Senate, as at present constituted, was unsatisfactory and almost useless. Some members were not willing to go so far as Mr. Lancaster's motion proposed, although Mr. F. D. Monk, who believes in the existence of a second chamber, was forced to the conclusion that abolition was the only remedy in the absence of any prospect of reform. Sir Wilfrid Laurier contented himself with the general observation that his mind was open to all suggestions, but studiously avoided committing himself to any of the many proposals that had been made in the past for reforming the Senate. That the Senate should occupy a different place than it does in the esteem of the Canadian people, was a proposition admitted by everyone, and that the Laurier Government was largely responsible for its present position was practically admitted on all sides. The Liberal party came into power pledged to make the Senate more responsive, to enlightened public opinion, and to bring it more in touch with the people. This pledge was not only embodied in the Ottawa platform of 1893, but is to be found in many speeches delivered by Laurier, Cartwright and others, when the Liberal party was in opposition.

There were two ways open to the Laurier Government, either one of which might have re-constituted and rehabilitated the Senate. The Government might have proposed some amendment to the B.N.A. Act, changing the manner in which senators are chosen and their terms of office or they might have employed the appointing power in a manner so high-minded and in accord with the public interest as to challenge admiration alike for the Senate and for the Government. Sir Wilfrid and his associates made no attempt to change the law and they certainly did nothing to improve the Senate by adopting any principle to govern the appointment of senators. Senatorial appointments went on the patronage list, and a senator was appointed for purely political reasons. Sometimes a rich man received the toga as a reward for some big cash contribution to the electoral cash-box; more often a man was appointed either for the purpose of creating a vacancy in the House or to reward him for having stuck to his party at the expense of his popularity with his constituents. The ordinary member was led to believe that he could safely defy his constituents at the command of the Government because he could look forward to a life job at the same annual compensation from the hands of the Government.

All this was admitted with cynical frankness by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who said in effect that it was only human nature to do as he had done, and cited the practise of Sir John Macdonald. One would think that Sir John Macdonald was the patron saint of the Liberal party. The Liberals consider themselves justified in doing anything if they can show that something of the kind was done by Sir John. Why these gentlemen were put in office in order to correct some minor irregularities which occurred during the lifetime of the old government is hard to understand in view of their position.

MARITIME OPINION

Many of the newspapers have been asserting that the Maritime Provinces were strongly in favor of the reciprocity agreement, as being conducive to their interests that they were unanimous in welcoming it. This representation is far from correct. The newspapers in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, while recognising that some industries will be benefitted, and some will be hurt, have not lost sight of the national consequences likely to follow the issue. The Halifax Herald, one of the leading papers of the Dominion, is strongly opposed to the agreement, holding it to be antagonistic to the British preference and the imperial connection. The Herald sums up maritime opinion in the following lucid manner:

Whatever may be said for or against the new reciprocity agreement with the United States, every intelligent person in Canada must recognize that it is a great step for the furtherance of Laurier's well-known and often-avowed policy of Canadian separation from Britain.

The new agreement, if carried out, cannot fail to prove a practically insuperable obstacle in the way of the great British Tariff Reform policy of Preferential trade throughout the British Empire.

Canada can have American Reciprocity, or British Reciprocity; but she cannot have both.

The two are directly antagonistic and incompatible.

For Canada to declare in favor of American Reciprocity, is to declare against Reciprocal Preferential Trade with Britain and the Empire.

An intelligent people in Canada are acquainted with the main features of the great policy of the British Tariff Reformers, for the development, strengthening and perpetuation of the British Empire through Reciprocal Preferential trade between its various constituent parts.

They also know that for the carrying out of that great British Empire policy, it is essential that Canada should be free from entanglements with foreign countries, and that Canadian products especially Canadian wheat, cattle, poultry, fruit, and dairy products, should be entirely separate from the like products of the United States, in order that the British Tariff Preference might be granted to the products of Canada.

But with free trade on this continent, that is between Canada and the United States, in wheat, cattle, poultry, fruit and dairy products, as is proposed by this agreement, it would be practically impossible for the British Preference to be granted to the produce of Canada; nor would Canada be free to enter into any really reciprocal arrangements with Britain or the other parts of the Empire.

The intelligent people of Canada can readily see through this whole proceeding on the part of the Laurier Government.

They know that from the outset in 1897, Premier Laurier and Finance Minister Fielding had no intention of granting the Motherland a specific tariff preference.

Mr. Fielding's wonderful "reciprocal clause" was open to all the world.

It was only the force of certain circumstances that subsequently compelled the Laurier Government to bring in a bill for the enactment of a specific preference in favor of British products.

EXPERT JUDGES WANTED FOR FAIRS

It is time that the Department of Agriculture for Ontario took a forward step in regard to men sent out to do judging at Fall fairs. It is no secret that some sent out—we might safely say may—are not competent men for the work. This has been demonstrated sufficiently often to justify complaint to the Department. It could hardly be expected that, with the great rush that suddenly sprang up for expert judges, all men sent out would be capable judges. But the time has come when some test or guarantee of ability should be exacted all candidates offering their services as expert judges. Societies paying $8 a day for a judge should have some evidence of his fitness for the work. We suggest an examination and issuance of certificate stating a man's qualifications for judging and what classes he can intelligently judge. An incompetent judge will do an agricultural society irreparable injury sometimes.

SOME CAMBRIDGE CAPERS.

Leaves From the Life of an Unruly Undergrad.

There are occasions in the life of the undergraduate when he goes temporarily off his head. The writer has seen the Market Square at Cambridge full of wild young maniacs, demolishing everything they could lay their hands on—shutters of shops, fencing, wooden doors—anything that would burn.

There was an occasion when the Dean thought he had quelled some riot, and retired upstairs to his rooms. To make quite sure that he did not leave them again, the undergraduates got hatchets and tore the wooden stairs down. Then everything available was burnt in one gigantic bonfire in the middle of the court, and all because the college boat had gone up a place in the races.

On one occasion, when a "rag" was expected, the authorities were surprised to find the courts absolutely deserted. Then the awful truth was realized. Every undergraduate in the college was on the roof! The movements of the Dean and the porters were carefully followed with a searchlight. An attempt to surprise the citadel by means of ladders was met by gently shaking the ladders from the top. Then, from their secure position, the undergraduates threw squibs and crackers into the courts, and fired off rockets.

In the writer's first year, the authorities of the college raised much feeling by enforcing the regulation that no undergraduate was to walk on the grass plots in the centre of the college courts, and, after some hard thinking, a few original sparks hit on a brilliant plan. One night, in the small hours, a certain tutor attacked with insomnia was prowling round the courts, when he was surprised to notice that the grass in one court was covered with men, apparently searching for something. He came forward to inquire, but as soon as his presence was realized there was a general stampede.

The truth came out a few weeks after. The quality of the grass seemed to decline, and, on examining it, the gardeners were horrified to find that it was full of tiny carrots and turnips!

Carrie Nation, the famous saloon-smasher of America, was announced one day to speak at the debating society of a certain college. Everyone was on tenterhooks at the thought of such a terrible feminine tub-thumper within the sacred precincts of a college. The debate was crowded, and then a heavily-veiled, sombre-gowned female, carrying the emblem of her cause—a hatchet—entered the room. Five minutes after, everything was pandemonium, the hoax was discovered, and the undergraduate impersonator had gathered up his skirts and run.

The dread summons from the Dean of the college to his presence comes—when it does come—in a gently-worded missive, something like this:

"Mr. —— is requested to call upon the Dean between 7 and 7.15 p.m."

An innocent young freshman, in pure ignorance of some inadvertent crime, mistook it for a kind invitation, and replied in the following terms:

"Mr. —— is very much obliged to the Dean for his kind invitation to dinner this evening, which he is, unfortunately, unable to accept, owing to a previous engagement."

The Dean's next summons was rather more peremptory.

Plans for a 1,200 foot breakwater at Port Stanley, to cost $210,000 are to be prepared.

Duke Boosts Rent.

Ottawa, Feb. 6.—Capitalizing a duke, or the landlord and the rent, is the latest problem confronting the residents of Ottawa.

It is scarcely a week since the announcement was made that the Duke of Connaught would be Canada's next Governor-General, and rents are already beginning to show a tendency to rise. In fact some agents are quite frank in stating to holders of leases maturing shortly that a renewal cannot be had except at an advance.

The Perfume of The Lady In Black

By GASTON LEROUX Author of "The Mystery of the Yellow Room."

Copyright, 1909, by Brentano's.

When he had vanished I lowered my eyes and beheld two figures in the Court of Charles the Bold. They were near the little door of the square tower. One of these forms—the taller—was supporting the other and speaking in tones of entreaty. The smaller attempted to break away, as if to throw itself into the sea. I heard the voice of Mme. Darzac say:

"Be careful. It is a gage of defiance. You shall not leave me this evening." Rouletabille's voice answered: "He must land upon the bank. Let me hurry to the bank." Mathilde spoke again. Her voice was terrible to hear. "I forbid you to touch that man."

I descended to the court, where I found Rouletabille alone. I spoke to him, but he did not answer. I went on into the outer court, and I saw Darzac coming toward me in greatest excitement. He called out:

"Did you see him?"

"Yes, I saw him," I replied.

"And she—my wife—do you know whether she saw him?"

"She saw him too. She was with Rouletabille when he passed."

Robert Darzac was trembling like an aspen leaf. He told me that when he saw the boat and its passenger he had rushed like a madman to the shore, but that before he had reached the Pointe de Garibaldi the bark had disappeared as if by enchantment. Darzac left me and hurried away to seek Mathilde. But he returned gloomy and grieved. The door of his wife's apartment was locked, and she would not see him.

We remained together upon the rampart gazing at the night which had carried Larsan away. In order to change the direction of his thoughts I asked him a few questions regarding the Rance household. He told me that, after the trial at Versailles, Rance had returned to Philadelphia, and there one evening at a family dinner party he had found himself seated beside a charming young girl who had interested him at once by a display of interest in literature and art. Somewhat haughty, yet gentle and melancholy, she at once recalled to the young man the heroines of Walter Scott, who, he soon learned, was her favorite author. From the first she attracted him strongly. But Rance had so far forgot himself as to drink too much wine. He never realized what his offense had been, but he knew that he must have committed some frightful breach of politeness when Miss Edith, with heightened color, requested him not to address her again. Upon the morrow he went to call on the young lady and entreated her pardon, swearing that he would never touch wine again.

Rance had already known Miss Prescott's uncle, the fine old man who bore the nickname of "Old Bob" and who was as celebrated for his adventures as an explorer as for his discoveries as a geologist. He seemed as gentle as a sheep, but he had hunted many a tiger through the pampas of South America. He had spent half his life south of the Rio Negro among the Patagonians in seeking for the man of the tertiary period, or, at least, for his fossils—the man who must have been contemporaneous with the immense mammoths and mastodons. He generally returned from these expeditions with a respectable collection of tibiae and femurs and also with a rich display of skins of wild beasts, which showed that the old savant knew how to use more modern arms than the stone ax and bow and arrow.

All these details were given me later by Arthur Rance himself. He had been one of "Old Bob's" pupils, but had not seen him in many years until he made the acquaintance of Miss Edith.

Miss Edith, upon the occasion when Arthur Rance had been presented to her, had seemed somewhat more melancholy than she usually was, because she had received disquieting news of her uncle. The latter for four years back had been absent in Patagonia. In his last letter he had told his niece that he was ill and that he feared that he should not live to see her again. Three months later, however, having received another letter, she suddenly resolved to go all alone to South America and join her uncle. During those three months important events had transpired. Miss Edith had been touched by the remorse of Arthur Rance, and when Miss Prescott departed for Patagonia no one was astonished to find that "Old Bob's" old pupil was going to accompany her. If the engagement was not officially announced, it was because the pair preferred to wait for the consent of the geologist. Miss Edith and Arthur Rance were met at St. Louis by the young woman's uncle. Rance, who had not seen him in years, declared to him that he had grown younger. When his niece informed him of her engagement the uncle manifested great delight. The three returned to Philadelphia for the wedding. Miss Edith had never been in France, and Arthur determined that their honeymoon should be spent there. And it was thus that they found, as will be told a little later, a scientific reason for locating in the neighborhood of Mentone, not exactly in France, but a hundred meters from the frontier, in Italy, at Rochers Rouges.

* * * * * * *

The gong had sounded for dinner and Arthur Rance was coming to look for us, so we repaired to "la Louve," in the lower hall of which we were to dine. When we were all assembled Mme. Edith asked whether any of us had noticed a little boat which had made the circle of the fortress and in which a man was standing erect. The man's strange attitude had struck her, she said, then added:

"Oh, I know who it is, for I know the fisherman who rowed the boat. He is a great friend of 'Old Bob.'"

"Ah, then you know the fisherman, madame?" asked Rouletabille.

"He comes to the castle sometimes to sell fish. The people around the village have given him an odd name, which I don't know how to say in their impossible patois, but I can translate it. They call him 'the hangman of the sea.' A pretty name, isn't it?"

The repast was one of the gloomiest in my recollection. The specter of Larsan hovered before our minds' eye; we felt his actual presence.

CHAPTER VI.

Fortifying Against a Weird Foe.

PROFESSOR STANGERSON since he had learned the cruel truth had not for one moment been able to free himself from the thought of it. In truth, the first victim of the affair at the Glandier and the most unfortunate was this good old man. He had lost everything—his faith in science, his love of work and his belief in his daughter. His faith in her had been his religion, joy and pride. And while he was thinking of her almost with reverence he discovered that the reason that his daughter refused to marry was because she was already the wife of Ballmeyer. The day in which Mathilde had decided to tell him the story of the past, which must clear up the present with a tragic light to the eyes of the professor, already warned by the mysteries of the Glandier—the day when, falling at his feet, she had told him the story of her youth, Professor Stangerson had raised the form of his beloved child from the ground and had pressed her to his heart; he had mingled his tears with the sobs of her whose fault had been so bitterly expiated and had sworn that she had never been more precious than since he had known how she had suffered. But he when she left his presence was another man—a man alone, all alone. Professor Stangerson had lost his daughter and his goddess.

He had experienced only indifference in regard to her marriage to Robert Darzac, although the latter had been the best beloved of his pupils. In vain Mathilde, with the warmest tenderness, had endeavored to rekindle the old feeling in the heart of her father. She knew well that he had changed toward her. The professor could work no longer. The great secret of the dissolution of matter which he had promised to reveal to mankind had returned to the unknown from which for a moment the scientist had drawn it, and men will go on, repeating for centuries to come the imbecile phrase, "From nothing, nothing."

* * * * * * *

Evidently she was instinctively drawn toward Rouletabille by all the mysterious forces of maternal affection, in spite of the fact that she had every reason to believe that her child had died years before.

She showed for her husband the most charming solicitude. She was attentive to him at every moment, serving him herself, and smiling gently at him as she did so.

If the design of Larsan in showing himself had been to deal a frightful blow to a happiness which had yet scarcely begun, he had completely succeeded. Mathilde had given Darzac at once to understand that she did not regard herself as his wife, since the man to whom she had pledged herself in her early girlhood was still living.

I have said that Mathilde Stangerson had been brought up in a very religious manner, not by her father, who cared little for such things, but by her female relatives, especially her old aunt in Cincinnati. I might have passed over these religious beliefs of Mathilde in silence if they had not had so strong an influence on the resolution which she had taken in regard to her second husband when she discovered that her first husband was still alive. It had seemed to her that Larsan's death had been proved beyond the slightest doubt, and she had gone to her new husband as a widow with the approval of her confessor. And now she learned that in the sight of heaven she was not a widow, but a bigamist!

Leaving the Darzacs, my eyes wandered to the neighbor of Mme. Darzac, M. Arthur William Rance, when they were suddenly arrested by the butler's coming to say that Bernier, the concierge, requested to speak to Rouletabille. My friend left the room.

"What!" I cried. "The Berniers are no longer at the Glandier?"

Readers of "The Mystery of the Yellow Room" will recall that these Berniers—the man and his wife—were the concierges of M. Stangerson at Ste. Genevieve des Bois. I have told how Rouletabille had had them set at liberty when they were accused. Rouletabille had been ever since the object of their devotion. As the Rances had need of concierges for the Fort of Hercules, the professor had been glad to send them his faithful domestics, of whom he had never had reason to complain except for one slight infraction of the game laws, which had turned out most unfortunately for them. Now they were lodged in one of the towers of the postern, where they kept the gate.

To be continued.

A Household Necessity

Father Morriscy's Liniment Should be in Every Home

How seldom a week passes without some member of the family suffering from a sore throat, chest or back, a burn or a cut, a sprain, strain or ache!

Such troubles will come, but there is no need of suffering much from them. Keep a bottle of Father Morriscy's Liniment in the house, use it freely, and the pain has little chance.

During his lifetime Father Morriscy prescribed this Liniment regularly, and it proved very effective in relieving all sorts of pains and aches. In Rheumatism it is valuable as a "rub", when "Father Morriscy's No. 7" Tablets are taken internally. Similarly, applied freely to throat and chest it helps "Father Morriscy's No. 10" (Lung Tonic) to quickly break up and drive away a sore throat, cold in the chest, or cough.

Taken all around it is one of the best family liniments in existence. Price 25c per bottle. At your dealer's, or from Father Morriscy Medicine Co., Ltd., Chatham, N.B. 22

Sold and guaranteed in Peterborough by McDermid & Jury.

A Bust of Rolls.

The bust of the late Mr. C. S. Rolls, upon which the sculptor, Mr. W. C. May, has been engaged, under the supervision of Lady Llangattock, has now been finally approved. The bust, which is looked upon as a remarkably successful study of the distinguished aviator and motorist, is borne upon a four-side pedestal, each of the four sides being ornamented with a panel descriptive of a notable event in Mr. Roll's career. These represent: The Paris to Sherborne (Norfolk) balloon voyage; starting for Calais (aeroplane flight); Paris to Berlin (motor race); Dover to Calais and back (aeroplane flight). The rear of the bust itself, instead of being left in the rough, as is usual, is finished with a modelling of roses and inscribed with the name "Charles Stewart Rolls," together with a Latin phrase prophesying that the aviator will be renowned to posterity. Mr. May, it will be remembered, was the sculptor employed on the national Armada Memorial erected by the nation on Plymouth Hoe.

Shipping Is Well Organized.

Washington, Feb. 4.—The Humphrey bill, giving the Government power to exclude from American ports any foreign ships that enter into pools or agreements to control freight or passenger rates, or to shut out competition, was favorably reported to the House yesterday by the committee on merchant marine. "It is a matter of common knowledge," said Representative Humphrey, "that more than 90 per cent. of the trans-oceanic commerce of the country to-day is carried on foreign ships that belong to pools, conferences and combines. Freight and passenger rates are fixed by agreement. The rates charged are unjust and exorbitant."

Archbishop Ryan Better.

Philadelphia, Feb. 4.—The vitality shown by the Most Rev. Patrick J. Ryan has completely puzzled his physicians. Notwithstanding that a bulletin issued stated the aged prelate would probably not live through the night, he awoke yesterday refreshed by several hours of sound sleep.

Last night his condition was more satisfactory than it had been for nearly a week.

Cable Rates.

London, Feb. 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Morning Post in an article on cable rates complains of the dilatoriness of the Government. Ignorance and misunderstanding are inevitable, it says, while the rates remain so high. Surely the Ministers might show the cable interests to help the promotion of a community of thought of the English-speaking peoples.

Toronto Man Dead In B. C.?

Nelson, B.C., Feb. 4.—The provincial police received a report yesterday that the body of a man had been found on the shore of Arrow Lake, four miles above Renata. The only person known to be missing is Wm. Bull, commercial traveler of Toronto, who mysteriously disappeared from Revelstoke.

Shot Sheriff and Chief.

Wilson, N.C., Feb. 4.—Deputy Sheriff George Munford was killed and Chief of Police Glover probably fatally wounded by a negro desperado yesterday. The officers were attempting to arrest the negro on advices from Dunn, where he broke into a store.

Blew Out His Brains.

Hanley, Sask., Feb. 4.—A. J. Ferguson, manager of the Dominion Bank, blew his brains out Thursday night. The bank inspector had just arrived and he was worried. He was married only on Jan. 21.

To Stamp Out Bubonic Plague.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Plans have been made to put the public health and marine hospital service into the field in China to stamp out the bubonic plague, if the Chinese Government request it.

It was learned yesterday that informal exchanges of views on the seriousness of the situation have been made between some of the European powers and the possibility has been discussed of having the marine hospital service join with the army medical forces of some of the European nations having spheres of influence in China.

Will Appeal Against Tariff.

St. Catharines, Feb. 4.—County Clerk Clench yesterday afternoon had notice served on him by H. H. Collier, K.C., on behalf of F. J. McIntyre of Niagara Township, that legal proceedings will be instituted if County Treasurer Wismer pays over to the Niagara Peninsula Fruit Growers $500 voted Thursday night towards the expenses of the protest deputation relative to tariff changes on fruit. McIntyre is a grower and large buyer of apples.

Export of Whisky.

Kingston, Feb. 4.—The Corby Company of Belleville sought the advice of U. S. Consul Johnson here relative to a shipment of whiskey, confiscated at Buffalo. Whisky can be shipped into United States only in barrels containing 100 gallons each. The Corby Company shipped 100 gallons, but in casks, containing small quantities. The matter will be appealed to the Department at Washington.

A Strong Denial.

London, Feb. 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The New York Herald edition in Paris says there is no more staunch advocate of trade reciprocity with the United States in Canada than Canada's cheese king, Mr. MacLaren. Speaking to the Canadian Associated Press, Mr. MacLaren emphatically denied any such advocacy; on the contrary, he is a strong advocate of preference within the Empire.

Jewel Robbery.

North Bay, Feb. 4.—Thieves smashed the plate-glass window of Philip Adams' store about four o'clock in the morning and abstracted about $200 worth of jewelry. An old man named Joseph Moss, a stranger, was arrested with some of the loot in his pockets, which he claims to have found on the sidewalk. Moss was sent to the prison camp at Matheson for two months. The most valuable of the jewelry is still missing.

Woman Missing.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Feb. 4.—Chas. Clobeck returned home to Guelph last night broken-hearted after searching in vain for his daughter, Annie, here. The woman was injured when she stepped off a moving train at Clifton Junction, near here, Thursday night. She was taken to the hospital, but left yesterday before her father called there. No trace of the woman has been found.

Recognition of Commissioners.

London, Feb. 4.—At the opening of Parliament on Monday Lord Strathcona will wear his peer's robes, while the other high commissioners will wear levee dress. Seats to the right of the throne have been assigned them near the ambassadors.

The London Daily Mail says: "This is a recognition of the width of the Empire and possesses a significance which it is impossible to overlook. It throws open the essential ceremonies of Parliament to the Dominions as well as to the United Kingdom.

English Opinions.

London, Feb. 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Morning Post, publishing the text of the proposed reciprocity agreement, complains that, though the same was communicated from Canada at the end of last week, no intimation was given to the press here that it was available. Several papers do not contain the text. The Morning Post says: "American influence over Canadian thought and action will rapidly expand with this link binding the daughter nation and the Mother Country growing steadily weaker."

Tore Hole In His Neck.

North Bay, Feb. 4.—M. McCartney, C.P.R. employe of Chalk River, was unloading steel at a small station about eight miles east of North Bay when a heavy piece of metal fell on a pinch bar which he was using, snapped the heavy iron bar through the air striking McCartney and making a jagged hole in his neck, from which the blood gushed in a torrent. The injured man was rushed on a freight engine to North Bay hospital. His chances of recovery are good.

WEDDING BELLS

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, Feb. 1, at 5.30 p. m. at the home of the late Mr. Alexander Stewart, Otonabee, when his daughter, Clara Alexandra, was united in marriage to Mr. John Whittington. The bride was given away by her brother Melville, and entered the drawing room on the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, which was played by Miss Quennie Matchett. The bride and groom were unattended and stood under an arch of evergreens illuminated by wax candles. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. A. McKenzie, of Centreville. The bride looked handsome in a pretty navy blue silk, which was worn by her mother at her wedding. She carried a beautiful bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

After congratulations, guests to the number of 50, partook of a dainty dejeuner. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and valuable gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Whittington will reside in Otonabee, and carry with them to their future home, the best wishes of a large circle of friends for future prosperity and happiness.

Peterborough, Feb. 2nd. 1911.

To the Peterborough Water Commissioners;

Gentlemen,—I herewith submit the financial statement of the waterworks department for the year 1910.

During the year there was expended in laying mains and setting hydrants $9,508.79, and in laying services $3,056.57, a total of $12,565.36 expended on ordinary construction work.

There was also expended on the construction of the new dam, pumping station and pumping machinery, after deducting certain receipts, $42,827.51.

A balance of $9,705.70, which was at the credit of profit and loss account on Jan. 1st, 1910, has been transferred to the contingent fund. Debentures to $20,000 were issued against the contingent fund to provide for extensions to the works, and the fund now amounts to $23,355.33.

The net water rates, including the special frontage rates, amounted to $41,373.69. The expense accounts, including $17,580.10 paid to the city to meet interest on debentures and $9,013.63, for sinking fund, and amount written off tools and plant for depreciation, amounted to $39,563.56, showing a profit on the operation of the works for the year of $1,810.13, and to this was added $220.00 received as premium on debentures, making $2,030.13, the amount at the credit of profit and loss account.

Respectfully submitted.

THE FINAL SETTLEMENT

Scene from "The Final Settlement," a vital drama of social and business life, at The Grand next Saturday, Feb. 11—Matinee and Evening. Seats on sale Thursday.

THE IDEAL WOMAN SHOULD BE THE INCARNATION OF BEAUTY

Rev. James Rollins Preached a Companion Sermon to "Woman's Ideal Man"—"Woman's Sphere is the Home —Motherhood the Supreme Attainment."

St. Andrew's church was filled to capacity last evening to hear the pastor, Rev. James Rollins, preach on "Man's Ideal Woman." The sermon was a companion to the one preached on the previous Sunday evening on "Woman's Ideal Man." Both subjects had apparently aroused great interest, judging by the numbers present.

QUESTION WAS IMPORTANT.

There was no question, was the pastor's conviction, that was of greater importance to man, next to his ideal of God, than his ideal of woman. A man's ideals exert a deep influence for her. Man has his place and woman her place, which are not interchangeable.

There is no more distressing condition than a mannish woman or a womanish man. One is as bad as the other.

There are several ideals which men cherish in women, some of which are:

THE INCARNATION OF BEAUTY.

In the first place, the ideal woman was the incarnation of beauty. The statement may no doubt be surprising but there was no use shutting our eyes to the fact that beauty was woman's crowning glory. It demanded instant homage and woman should seek to make herself beautiful.

VARIOUS FORMS OF BEAUTY.

There were, however, various forms of beauty, namely, of the face, deportment, dress, cleanliness of person, culture of the soul, and so on.

Not every woman may be able to stand at the head of her sex, but she can stand at the head of herself. The fascination of refined cleanliness, culture, etc., are every woman's right, whether it be in the store, factory, or office.

TRUE BEAUTY IS INWARD.

But true beauty, the kind that was woman's power, was inward. The woman within must be looked after. Intellect moulds the human features, and the recipe of bodily splendor was, "Take care of your soul."

The ideal woman was the woman who in herself was the very genius of love. Love power was the ruling power and woman held the destiny of love in her hand.

ELEVATES MAN.

If she be a good woman, she set working in man all the best that was in him. A man in love with a good woman was at his best. It gave his life a wider horizon, and no greater humanizing power could enter his life than the love of a pure woman.

A HAPPY HOME NECESSARY.

Lastly, woman was the very incarnation of love.

Man's ideal woman was the woman with power to make a happy home, which should be the true ideal of the twentieth century. Popularize the home. There woman's sphere was the truest and most satisfactory. Whatever works in a woman's nature turning her inclination and thoughts from the home is detrimental to her highest instincts. Man cannot make a home. A woman must be there to impart atmosphere and make it a place of refuge.

THE CROWN OF LIFE

Motherhood finally was the crown of life. Nothing could be compared to it, not either art, music, or any of these things. Nothing was comparable in beauty or nobility to the power of shaping the lives of generations yet unborn.

HAS LEFT THE CITY

Strange Actions of F. H. Puttenham a Local Musician

F. H. Puttenham, a local musician who came here last summer to accept a position as pianist at the Royal Theatre and who a short time ago became organist and choir leader of George street Methodist church, is missing.

He left the city last Friday after writing a note to the effect that he was not coming back. Word has been received from him by a friend in the city, but no statements are given as an explanation of his absence.

ADDRESS ON THE RELIEF OF PAIN

Christianity Responsible for the Changed view Regarding the Care of the Body

The usual meeting of St. John's Guild of Goodfellowship was held in the Princess Theatre on Sunday afternoon when the address was entitled "The Relief of Pain," and from ed one of a series on the subject of pain.

The Rev. C. Carpenter reviewed the teaching of the last two meetings, and proceeded to show that Christianity was responsible for the changed view with regard to the care of the body. Inasmuch as our Lord's ministry was so much concerned with the healing of disease. His followers felt bound to continue in His steps, hence the rise of the great hospital system and the progress in medical knowledge and relief. Referring to Scriptural times it was noted that the Egyptians had a fairly wide knowledge of medicine and dentistry and that the Israelites in bondage received and accepted much of their teachings. They had their practiced midwives, and physicians were paid out of the public treasury. Their doctors were their embalmers and appear to have been specialists. Egypt also sent doctors to Cyrus and Darius. Throughout the Bible we find mention of physicians and apothecaries, although descriptions of disease are very loose. The Jews used salves, balms, poultices, oil and mineral baths as external means of healing, and herbs for internal complaints. Jeremiah gives a list of medicines; and Solomon is supposed to have studied medicine and anatomy. The inspection of lepers was part of the priest's work; although in later days medical men were attached to the temple.

St. Luke was evidently a skilled physician and the Bethesda of the Gospel meaning "House of Charity," may have been a collection of huts around a medical spring.

Christianity with its teaching of the brotherhood of man emphasized the duty of visiting and ministering to the sick "in the name of Christ," and the care of the afflicted and diseased became a first charge. From St. James' reference to anointing with prayer, it is evident that the early Church realized the necessity of ministering to the bodies as well as the souls of its members.

In ancient times hospitals (from "hospes," a Latin word meaning "guest") were places for the reception of travellers and strangers, but there were no special institutions for the sick only. However, a hospital was built by the Emperor Valens in Caesarea; another was founded by a rich rich friend of St. Jerome, and Basil, Bishop of Caesarea, put up buildings for the poor, hospitals and leper houses.

The earliest distinct record of hospitals in England concerns those built by Archbishop Lanfranc in 1080, one for leprosy and one for ordinary diseases. In the middle ages the monasteries had their infirmaries and hospitals, with medical staff and nurses doing splendid work because of our Lord's words; "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these ye have done it unto Me." After the Reformation some of these monasteries were set apart entirely as hospitals, as for example, St. Bartholomew's, St. Thomas and Christ's hospitals in London.

A great hospital movement took place in the 18th century, when at least fifty were built. The last century has seen the extension of this work and the formation of many societies for the relief of pain, such as the Red Cross Society, the Guild of Lazarus, Nursing Sisters, Dr. Barnardo's homes, Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and the sister one to protect animals. Medical missions in connection with the work of the church in foreign lands have proved of great value in the extension of Christ's work and Christian hospitals are to be found in Madras, Madagascar, China, South Africa, Zanzibar, Japan, Sierra Leone, etc. All these movements have been the result of a growing sympathy with the afflicted. The world is more humane, because Christ linked himself with afflicted humanity and proclaimed the value of human life. It is for us to take a vital interest in all such good works, and to help those who cannot help themselves. The audience was exhorted to give their sympathic help towards the upkeep of charitable institutions, and to do what they could in a quiet way in visiting the sick and afflicted in Christ's Name. Also to study and give heed to the warnings to medical men so as to stamp out consumption and other dread scourges, just as leprosy was overcome in the 15th century in England. Much of the pain of the world was due to ignorance and vice and knowledge and purity must be the correctives.

A short discussion followed the address, and a very pleasing song was rendered by Mr. Lee, after which the meeting was brought to a close with the usual devotional exercises.

OBITUARY

MRS. MARTIN HALL

At the good old age of eighty, Mrs. Martin Hall, almost a life-long resident of Ennismore, passed away on Sunday morning, death being mainly due to her advanced age. She resided with her daughter, Mrs. Daniel Cosgrove, at the time of her death. Her husband predeceased her several years ago. One son Joseph resides in the city.

The funeral will be held to-morrow morning to St. Martin's church, and thence to St. Martin's cemetery, for interment.

Mrs. Mann Dead

The many friends of William E. Mann, who formerly lived in Peterborough will be very sorry to learn of the demise of his wife, at Salida, California. Mr. Mann left here twenty years ago, marrying in California. Mrs. Mann died of cancer, after a long illness. The husband only is surviving a son having died nine years ago. Mr. Mann has many friends and relatives near and in Peterborough. The funeral took place on Jan. 24th.

BOYS' HOBBY EXHIBITION

The boys' hobby exhibition at the Y.M.C.A. is the big thing now, and is causing all sorts of talk and keen rivalry amongst the boys who are getting their exhibits ready. Any boy in the city between the ages of 12 and 18 can enter, and can exhibit anything a boy makes or collects, except cigar bands. Entries will be received on and after February 13th. This is an exhibition at which the parents of the boys and the general public will attend and have a good time, as well as helping the boys, as the proceeds will go towards paying for new books for the boys' department library. A good program is being arranged; side shows will be very much in evidence and altogether it will be an exhibition well worth attending. Keep the date in mind Feb. 17th, afternoon and evening.

Judge Huycke's Class

Judge Huycke's class for the study of "In Memoriam," held in the Y.W.C.A., will meet this evening instead of to-morrow evening.

Mother Has Diphtheria

Mrs. Riddiford Ill

Mrs. Rev. W. C. Riddiford is seriously ill at Beamsville, Ont., where she went recently to attend the funeral of her mother.

Rev. Mr. Riddiford has gone to Beamsville to be with Mrs. Riddiford during her illness.

In the absence of Rev. Mr. Riddiford, Mr. J. J. Thompson took the services yesterday morning and evening.

Jumped the Track

One of the cars on the George street route jumped the track at Auburn about one o'clock to-day, and it required fifteen minutes hard work on the part of those in charge to replace it. The passengers were late getting to work as a consequence of the mishap.

The street car service was kept as close to schedule time as possible to-day, despite the difficulties of snow and ice they had to combat.

Barbara Tennant Recital

A pleasing feature in connection with the above recital is the engagement of Mr. MacLean Borthwick as vocalist.

Mr. Borthwick has had a wide and varied experience in all forms of concert work in Scotland, England and in Ireland and in June of last year gave a Lieder recital at the Steinway Hall, London, which was most favorably noticed by the critics.

He is equally at home in oratorio and ballad concerts. He is a Diplomee of the Royal Academy of Music London.

The Greenock Telegram says, "Opening his programme with five German songs he showed at once excellent vocal powers, proving himself the real temperamental artist, in varying moods, from the declamatory to the tenderly emotional.

Mr. Borthwick undoubtedly possesses a very good and pleasing baritone voice; his chief charm last night was his artistry and intellectual conception of music varying so widely."

The Glasgow Herald says, "Mr. McLean Borthwick is an artist of exceptional ability, and possesses a splendid voice."

DIED

MANN—In Salida, California, on Jan. 22, 1911, Litta E., beloved wife of William E. Mann and loving daughter of the late Rev. G. W. and Catharine Scott, a native of Ohio, and formerly of Peterborough, aged 40 years and 27 days.

PUCKLAND

Peterboro's representatives in the O. H. A. will have a busy week.

The Grillers meet Kingston Frontenacs here to-morrow night, and play the return in the classic city on Friday.

The Intermediates meet Trenton at Belleville to-night for the third time, two of which have been wins for the locals. The result to-night means that one of the two will be district champions. With Peterboro winning out, as the team should on the showing of the series, they will likely be sent up against the winner of the Whitby-Markham game, the O. H. A. having notified all clubs that they must be ready to play at short notice.

Fans are asking why tickets are not placed on sale before the game, either at the rink or in the stores. With such a system, there would not be so much difficulty in getting into the rink. Doors should be open before 7.30, they say.

With the Grillers in good shape for their struggle with the famous Kingston Frontenacs, to-morrow night, the game will be a hummer. Harvey Sproule is billed to referee.

The banks hockey team left on the 11.25 C. P. R. to-day and will play in Marmora to-night.

CURLING

Skips Lang and Yeates went up to Toronto to-day with their rinks to take part in the Provincial championships of the district's contest to-morrow. The Peterborough Curling Club won it in 1909 and 1910 and are confident of cinching it again.

Indoor Baseball

To-morrow evening there will be another double-header at the armories in the Indoor Baseball league.

At 7.30 No. 3 and No. 4 Companies come together and at 8.45 No. 8 Company and the Battery play.

The games which were scheduled for January 24th and 26th will be played at the end of the season.

Well-Known Man Disappears.

Atlantic City, N.J., Feb. 6—The man who disappeared from the Marlborough-Blenheim Hotel, and is supposed to have fallen from the Million Dollar Pier on Monday night, was Richard L. Ashhurst, postmaster, of Philadelphia, according to a statement given out by the police officials here Saturday night.

Postmaster Ashhurst came to this resort on Monday. Steven Lacy, a chair pusher, said that on Monday night he had rolled the missing man from the hotel to the pier, but so far as can be learned the aged man never came back to the board walk after entering the pier. It is believed he became faint and fell off.

Refused to Sign Verdict.

Montreal, Feb. 6.—Mrs. George Marleau, mother of the two children suffocated by smoke as a result of a fire that broke out in the Marleau home, 100 Chatham street, while the children were alone in the house on Friday afternoon, was exonerated of criminal responsibility at the inquest held at the morgue Saturday morning.

When the jury retired to consider their verdict, eleven of them were of the same mind as the coroner, but Wildrod Lesard, who is the father of six children, said he thought Mrs. Marleau should be held criminally responsible, and refused to sign the verdict.

Soldier and Sculptor.

It is said of Captain Adrian Jones, who has designed the four-horse chariot, weighing upwards of thirty tons, which is to be erected near Hyde Park Corner, London, as a memorial to "Peace," that he is probably the only living sculptor who understands a horse from tail-tip to nostril. As a boy he loved and studied horses, and would have liked to become an artist, but his father had other plans, and he entered the army. He saw much active service, and was then advised to become a sculptor, having devoted most of his spare time when in the army to painting and sculpture.

WANTED TO AMEND IT.

Chairman Payne Says Tariff Treaty Cannot Be Changed.

Washington, Feb. 6.—The Canadian reciprocal agreement must stand or fall as a whole in the House, declared Chairman Payne of the ways and means committee during the progress of the hearings that occupied the entire day. A proposal of Representative Fordney in the morning for an amendment to the lumber schedule and another reference in the afternoon to the possible amendment of the item making barley free were met by the unequivocal answer of the chairman that the committee would sanction no change of any item.

Notwithstanding this fact the pressure brought to bear on the committee has resulted in the granting of hearings to all persons who appear in Washington prior to 5 o'clock next Thursday afternoon, Feb. 9. This date was fixed to permit Pacific coast lumbermen to reach Washington and make statements.

Farmers, lumbermen, barley raisers and manufacturers of barley malt were given hearings yesterday. The spirit of the committee was such, however, that the witnesses had difficulty in making a serious impression in presenting their arguments against the Canadian agreement.

The malting interests claimed that the peculiar conditions of the trade were such that if barley is admitted free Eastern Ontario would supply the product and Western New York the malting houses, so as practically to control the market.

Representative Geo. Malby of New York attacked the reciprocity agreement because of its agricultural items and its lowering of duties on lumber and wood pulp and paper. He declared that the tariff board had spent months accumulating all facts bearing on the paper-making business, but that paper was put on the free list by this treaty without any reference to what the tariff board had found out.

National Grange Opposes.

New York, Feb. 6. The machinery of the National Grange, an organization claiming membership of 1,000,000 farmers in thirty states, has been started to defeat the ratification by Congress of the Canadian reciprocity treaty. The legislative committee of the grange at a special meeting at the Hotel Manhattan, adopted a resolution protesting against the enactment of the reciprocity bill, calling upon the membership to exert pressure upon the Congressmen from their various districts to vote against the measure and decided to go to Washington to map out a campaign there.

"We are not opposed to a general reduction of the tariff," Mr. Atkeson said, "but we are opposed to any agreement which will make fish of one industry and flesh of another.

"Remove the tariff on steel and iron and manufactured articles along with farm products, and we won't object."

Fears Spies Among Aviators.

Berlin, Feb. 6.—It is stated in military quarters that the strategists of the German general staff have some misgivings about allowing the German part of the Paris Journal's Paris-Berlin-Brussels-Paris $50,000 aeroplane competition to be flown next summer.

It is feared that the competitors, specially the skillful French aviators who are expected to participate, may even unwittingly cross German forts or fortified territory, a knowledge of which would be of inestimable value to foreign powers.

Irish M.P.'s Cheap Election

With the exception of the returning officer's fee, Mr. J. McVeagh's election as Nationalist M.P. for South Down cost him nothing. At a meeting to celebrate his success, he told his supporters that they had achieved victory without expending a copper on the payment of agents, literature, postage, printing, or even on the issue of polling cards. They declined the offer of motorcars and not a single elector was canvassed.

SOME GOOD YARNS.

Reminiscences of Admiral Montagu Concerning Royalty.

Admiral the Hon. Victor Montagu, C.B., tells, in his reminiscences just published, some good stories of sport at home and abroad. A sailor of the old school—he served in the Crimean War and helped to blockade Sebastopol—he has been famous in the social world as one of the most distinguished and enthusiastic members of the Royal Yacht Squadron. Admiral Montagu has had the friendship of several kings, and among the best of his friends was King Edward, the present King, and the German Emperor. His genial anecdotes about them have more than a literary interest. It was at Cowes that he was on closest terms of friendship with these monarchs, though King Edward had been friends with him since boyhood.

He tells an amusing story of how he was commanded to dine with Queen Victoria, at Osborne, one evening at 8.30, and immediately afterwards received a huge envelope with a massive seal from the Hohenzollern, commanding him to dine with the Kaiser at the same hour. He goes on:

Reader, put yourself into my flannels and jersey for a moment—tired, covered with salt water, a humble creature, a mere nobody, embarrassed with double honors and not having the slightest idea which command I was to obey on such a momentous occasion!

He signalled frantically to the royal yacht for the Prince of Wales' advice in this dilemma, but the Prince (afterwards King Edward) did not return to his yacht until 7.30. What made the dilemma worse was that one costume was needed for dinner with the German Emperor and another for the Queen. When the prince answered the signals his advice was to obey Queen Victoria first and proceed afterwards to the Kaiser. The Admiral rushed into tights and long stockings, and drove madly to Osborne.

After dinner the Queen excused him, and he resumed his journey in a fly.

My next difficulty was to find a place in which to change from tights into full naval uniform. I decided to do this in the cab, and implored the driver to go slowly downhill. As everybody knows there is little difficulty in pulling off one's clothes and putting others on in a cab, even in total darkness, but there comes a moment when one has to stand up to complete one's toilet, and to stand up in a low fly is no easy task. "Driver, just pull up a moment," I said, "and open the top of the cab." "It's pouring with rain, sir," was the answer. "Never mind that," I said. "You get on top, too, and hold your coat over me." This arrangement answered beautifully, and in due course I arrived at the landing, and went of in a steam launch to make my obeisance to his Imperial Majesty. The Emperor received me in his usual cordial manner, and after a good laugh at my description of all my adventures, "Well, anyhow," he said, "I have never been asked to dine with two Sovereigns the same day! Do you want another dinner?"

Admiral Montagu tells several stories of King Edward's delightful kindness of heart. The admiral suffers from deafness, and was troubled at the thought of this when the King invited him to dine with the Czar of Russia on the Victoria and Albert.

"After dinner on board, the King espied me, and beckoned me to approach, when he said: 'Victor, I am going to present you.' So I merely remarked: 'Oh, sir, this is a great honor, but I fail to see how I shall be able to hear what the Emperor says.' He smiled and said: 'You are not the first deaf individual the Emperor has addressed. I will tell him all about you. Do your best.' It so happened that I got on particularly well; though once or twice I was in difficulties. The King, however, who was close by, noticing this, in the kindest possible manner came to my rescue, repeated the subject to me, or answered the Emperor for me."

A Rosebery Romance.

To those who love romance and the romantic, an unusual episode in the life of one of Lord Rosebery's ancestors will appeal. It occurred in the eighteenth century, when the then Lord Dalmeny was a young man. He fell in love with a very pretty girl, says "The Gentlewoman," and eventually a secret marriage was contracted. The pair spent their honeymoon on the continent, and the bride, becoming seriously ill, confessed that she was the wife of the rector of Thorpe, from whom she had ran away. Dying shortly afterwards, her husband had her body embalmed with a view to bringing it to England for burial. However, the Customs House officials opened the case in which the grim burden was packed, and it was only to avoid a far more serious tragedy that the truth was made known. The body was eventually buried at Thorpe in the presence of both "husbands."

THE FOURTH ESSENCE

It Helped Its Owner to Obtain His Object.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Bob Pendleton and I had been friends for years until the inevitable woman stepped in between. For a while we were rivals for Eleanor's love, and then Pendleton lost out and disappeared entirely from our lives.

Eleanor lived only a few brief years, and I, who was then bereft of both friend and wife, was more alone than I had ever been. My business was of such a nature that I had much leisure—more than was good for me—and instead of returning to my home city, where old friends and old haunts awaited me, I closed the house where Eleanor and I had spent the brief and happy years of our married life and, winding up my business affairs, became a wanderer on the face of the earth.

I became absorbed in the study of Byzantine architecture and thus at the close of our year was lingering in Constantinople.

One night I was sitting in my favorite cafe dreaming over the events of the day when Pendleton's name sounded so distinctly in my ears that I leaped to my feet and looked around. The cafe was quite empty save for one or two Turks in a distant corner, the slipshod waiters and myself.

Bewildered, I sank back in my seat, only to be assailed by the insistent repetition of Pendleton's name. It seemed to be beating against some inner consciousness and was not, as I had at first supposed, an actual vocal demonstration.

Then, forgetting the bitterness he had held against me and remembering only the pleasure of our long friendship, I was impelled to go to him. I felt that he needed me—that somehow, in some way, he was calling me to come to him—and, following some blind instinct, I returned to my house, placed my courier in charge of my belongings, packed a portmanteau and at dawn the next morning had taken steamer for India.

With me constantly was the suggestion that Pendleton called me, and, as if guided by this invisible thread of desire, I entered a new country. At Dinaghpore I secured guides and hastened down to the ruins of the ancient city of Gaur.

We reached Gaur at sundown of a breathless day, and my arrival seemed to signal the departure of my fancies concerning Pendleton and his desire to see me. Once more I was the practical, level headed individual who had held Pendleton's churlish attitude slightly in contempt. I marveled at the delusion that had brought me thousands of miles to the suburbs of Gaur, yet I was bound to take advantage of the opportunity and investigate the ruins. Then I would return to Constantinople, for India did not interest me at that time.

Perhaps we were a couple of miles distant from any habitable portion of the city, for here the ruins of ancient edifices were surrounded by a thick jungle, and my guide, a low caste Hindu of gigantic stature, told me that the jungle was infested with man eating tigers.

My men were well armed, and as we had made camp in the crumbling upper story of what had once been a beautiful tiled temple we felt secure from marauding beasts.

Before the swift dusk fell and while my men were preparing the evening meal I picked my way down the broken ramp that led from the second story and wandered curiously among the ruins.

There was little to be learned there, for most of the traces of that once beautiful medieval city were either overgrown with vines and shrubs or else lay at this hour in deep shadow. Rounding a high wall, I found myself in a small temple.

A tall Brahman priest bent above a stone altar, and at the sound of my footsteps he turned and without evincing surprise at my intrusion calmly advanced and slid into place a slab of stone that served as a door, thus cutting off my retreat.

"Open that door, please," I commanded sharply.

I had spoken in English, and to my surprise he answered in the same tongue, and his voice was vaguely familiar.

"It is too late. I have sent for you, and you have come. Do you not recognize me, Brayton?" He lighted a resinous torch and, sticking it in the wall, held his face in its light.

I looked and stared and stared again, incredulous at first and then convinced that it was Bob Pendleton himself. His skin was burned to the color of mahogany; his hair was concealed under a folded white cloth; his eyebrows were shaven, and his black orbs rolled fiercely in their deep sockets. Handsome he was, as he ever had been, but wretchedly worn and emaciated and so changed from the handsome, buoyant fellow I had known that I might not have recognized him save for the deep bell notes of his voice. His fierce unfriendliness as expressed by the malignant glitter of his eyes brought forcibly to my mind our strained relations.

"Bob Pendleton! My God, man, what are you doing here?" I gasped at last.

"Waiting for you, Brayton," he said, with an odd laugh.

"Waiting for me?" I repeated stupidly. "Why, that is why I came, of course. You needed me."

"Wanted you—I don't need you," he sneered. "But I called you, didn't I—across five seas and the empire of India?"

"By some superhuman power you did summon me. I am here. If you do not need me I will go. Bob, do you still hold that grudge against me? It was a fair fight and"—

He held up a long, thin hand. "Be still," he said harshly. "I do hold the grudge. I have nurtured it these years past, and now my turn has come. She did not come with you, Brayton? No? Strange. I sent her a most appealing call, and time was when she was not entirely indifferent to me."

Glowering down at me from his tall height, he smiled cynically and turned to the altar, which held nothing save a small square box of some rare wood. I suspected he was insane, and yet there was a certain deadly purpose about everything he did and said that impressed me with a degree of fear that he might not be mad.

The silence of the little shrine buried deep in the heart of this ancient ruined city, the roar of a tiger from the jungle outside, the very thought of my utter isolation from all mankind, my only companion this half mad enemy.

"My men will be looking for me, Pendleton. Just open this door, will you, please?" I asked in a matter of fact tone.

He turned, snarling: "My men, Brayton. I paid them to meet you at Dinaghpore and offer their services. Now they are miles back on the road. You are quite alone with me, entirely in my power, and when I am through—there are the jackals and vultures, you know!" He bent over the table once more.

"If one of us must die I believe I have the advantage, Bob." I leveled my revolvers at him, and, though my head was cool, my hands trembled slightly, for Pendleton had once been my friend.

"They are empty, fool," he said bitterly. "My men removed the charges en route." He flung this over his shoulder, still busied over the little box.

It was true. The cartridges had been removed, but if the worst came to pass, as it undoubtedly would from Pendleton's attitude toward me, I could use them as clubs.

Suddenly he faced about and spoke rapidly, with many gesticulations of his thin hands.

"Years ago, Phil Brayton, you won out in a certain game. I swallowed my disappointment and went away. I have gone up and down the world looking for peace of mind and body, and there is none. I loved Eleanor Neal as no woman was ever loved before, as no woman will be loved again, and I still love her. I have been in every country on the globe; I have had experiences; I have seen mysteries that you never dreamed of; I have become what no white man on God's earth dared hope to attain; I am— But I will not tell you that!

"Here, in one of the dead cities of the world, isolated as one may hope to be, I have waited for you to come and take your medicine. You have loved her for years. I have been banished. Fate shall decide this night between us as Eleanor once chose. On this altar you see these four tiny crystal cups. The first contains the essence of supreme happiness, the second the essence of perfect love, the third the essence of immeasurable content. The fourth essence is—never mind; it shall be unnamed.

"I have arranged them, and you may rearrange them as you please. You see they all contain a colorless liquid, and there is no outward distinction between them. Then you may choose one and shall drink it, and according to its contents so shall your fate be."

He leaned carelessly against the altar, smiling down at my perplexed face.

"And you—what are you to do?" I breathed quickly.

"Why, Brayton, I believe I shall have my day, my share of happiness. If you should happen to choose the fourth essence—why, Eleanor will be a widow and I may console her. Do you doubt my power?"

"Why not murder me outright?" I questioned calmly. "Your essences are a fool's trickery, Bob. Supreme happiness, perfect love and immeasurable content are all attained by drinking the fourth essence, and that is"—

"What?" he demanded fiercely.

"Death."

He bowed his head sullenly. "Yet you must drink or die—die anyway, that I may live and have my share of happiness," he said doggedly.

Slowly I unbuttoned my coat and drew forth from a hidden pocket a leather case. In the front of the case was a miniature of my wife, Eleanor. Slipped in the back of the case was a newspaper clipping of her death. Without a word I gave the paper into his unwilling hand. He held it to the light, devoured it with lightning glance, and a look of poignant suffering came into his face for a brief moment.

Then, tossing it back to me, he broke into a joyful laugh. "Ah, Phil, I win at last." He snatched at one of the cups, drained it, and, while I struggled to detain him, he drank the others one at a time.

When the first hot red rays of the morning sun broke through the slit of window they fell on his dead face. All the anger and bitterness had fled. He looked young and beautiful, as if he had attained to supreme happiness, perfect love and immeasurable content—these the gift of the fourth essence, the key to the spirit world.

BRAVE BOYS IN BLUE.

Courageous Constables Who Have Been Killed on Duty.

The recent tragedy in Houndsditch recalls many similar examples of police heroism in the face of terrible odds, all going to show that the men in blue have never hesitated to risk their lives in the course of their duty.

Constable Davey of Acton, so far as record shows, was the first policeman to be shot dead by a thief. Davey suspected a man named Brookes to be implicated in a certain robbery, and Brookes knew that Davey was on his track. Brookes called at Davey's house at night, and shot him down.

In the seventies a policeman was shot at Whalley Range, near Manchester, and two brothers, named Habron, were accused, and sent to penal servitude for life. It was afterwards discovered that they were innocent, and that the real assassin was the notorious Charles Peace. Peace shot at and wounded P. C. Robinson in his last exploit, before his daring career was brought to a close.

Again, in 1881, P. C. Atkins surprised a gang burgling a house standing in its own grounds at Kingston, and was shot down.

Up to the time of this affair burglars had rarely used revolvers, but now the practice became common, and, in the following year, P. C. Cole was murdered at Dalston. The murderer was Orrock, a young man who was a member of the Baptist chapel he was breaking into when Cole came upon the scene, and was considered quite a model youth. But two years went over before justice was done, and then Orrock was run to earth quite by accident.

He had left his chisel behind him at the chapel, and on the blade was scratched the word "rock," and when, some months after the murder, a man named Orrock was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment for housebreaking, a detective got into conversation with one of Orrock's friends — also "doing time"—and learned something which brought the murder of Cole to his mind. The chisel was then examined under a microscope, and underneath the word "rock" was found another, which the microscopist made out to be "Orrick."

This was enough to hang the murderer, and hanged he was accordingly.

Following the murder of Cole, further regulations were made to enable the police to meet the new class of desperadoes on something like equal terms. Double patrols were arranged in certain places, constables were allowed to have revolvers when it appeared necessary, and whistles were given them.

In the year of the Dalston murder there was a desperate affray in Hoxton. James Wright, a hardened villain, shot three policemen, wounding them severely. The case which followed over roofs of houses, where the ruffian kept his pursuers at bay with a revolver for more than two hours, forms one of the most exciting episodes in police annals.

Inspector Simmons, of the Essex Constabulary, the following January, was shot at Romford by one of three men whom he had been watching. His murderer, James Lee, was tracked owing to his stupidity in pledging his pistol at the pawnbroker's shop where he had previously pawned it.

One of the men with Lee was an ex-convict who had been concerned in shooting at two policemen in Gloucestershire, and another was a member of the gang who burgled Netherby Hall, Cumberland, and whose subsequent flight furnishes an intensely dramatic story.

The gang were pursued from place to place until they were run to earth, twenty-four hours afterwards, and captured, fighting desperately. During their flight they shot four policemen, wounding three, and killing one outright.

Then, in July, 1885, there occurred a terrific fight between a young constable and a masked burglar, whom he surprised on the roof of a house in Kensington. Four shots were fired at the officer, who was subsequently found insensible. Holland, another constable, was assailed by three burglars in St. Marylebone Churchyard, in August, 1886, and was shot in the leg by one of them.

A burglary at Muswell Hill, in 1889, when a gang, armed with revolvers, severely wounded one of the inmates, led to the old, heavy regulation boots being discarded for boots with india rubber soles for night duty; and after this affair came a cessation of murderous outrages with the burglar's revolver until London was startled by the extraordinary affray at Tottenham, in 1908, which is sufficiently recent to be remembered by everyone.

How "T. P." Rests.
